GOLDEN TEXT.

"If we confess our sins, He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." 1 John 1: 9.

POINTED SUGGESTIONS.

By Rev. D. W. Snider. Examples of piety, pluck and patriotism are worthy of a place in his story. Daniel and his companions made the temperance issue famous by their conduct, and the same issue today calls for the same triumvirate of worthy principles.

Xerxes and his relation to Esther, her patriotic resolve and its results make for Lesson VI a dramatic recital. No literature is more thrillingly interesting than the Bible.

Independent action, when worthy, often proceeds from the consciousness of a greater dependence. The Hebrew children depended not on things, but upon God.

Lions and dens suggest the fear-some and gruesome and deadly, but Daniel was more afraid of a bad conscience and of a prayerless heart than the tragedy of a lion and devoured flesh and of crunching bones.

Ezekiel called himself a watchman and told what the duties and respon-abilities of such an one are. If the character of the service is to be estimated by the intensity of the obligation the faithful watchman ranks high indeed.

Add to your faith by refreshing your memory with the "ands," and "agains," and "thens," and "whens" in the story of the life-giving stream flowing forth from the temple. Like the leap of swollen waters from the cascade, those connective words in the narrative take you from depth to depth in your thought of the merciful provisions of God.

Nebuchadnezzar and Cyrus were servants of God in disguise to the children of Israel while they felt themselves masters of the situation in their own right. Even as the waters which tumble in cataracts are made the servants of men, so God employs for His purposes the plunging ambition of things.

Demonstration in religion is not discounted when it can be shown that the occasion of it is bigger than the demonstration. Temple building is such an occasion.

Revival, which is from God, means the supremacy of righteousness in the lives of men. And rejoicing dwells with righteousness, and there mercy, and truth and peace are found.

Extravagant living is the forerunner of disaster. The feast of Belshazzar is the handwriting on the wall of personal or national pride and forgetfulness of God.

The lives of Nehemiah and Ezra make great reading. They line up with the faithful, and heroic and God-fearing. Their work was strenuous and their service was consecrated.

Understanding the sense of Scripture is not hard where one is willing to put what he learns in its right relation as soon as he learns it. The closest relation it has is to faith and conduct. God is, and He is a Rewarder.

Reward, of course, is conditioned upon obedience. The tither can tell you something about that from his experience. Stewardship has regard to the dues and rights of others and counts the willful failure to meet them robbery.

Nothing can be plainer, from the lessons of the quarter, than that "the eyes of the Lord run to and fro throughout the whole earth to show himself strong in behalf of them whose hearts are perfect toward Him."
