Nutrition of Foxes

The Secret of Success in fox farming is acknowledged to be largely one of care and correct feeding.

Dr. G. Ennis Smith who conducts an experimental station at Hull, Quebec, has rendered valuable service by calling attention to the necessity of a well-balanced diet at all seasons.

Experienced feeders know the value of energy foods (product of grain) during the mating and gestation period, when the foxes require to be well nourished.

Imperial Cod-Liver-Oil Fox Biscuits are the result of scientific knowledge and practical experience of our successful fox feeders.

Normal eyes, it is computed utilize about 20% of this Nerve Energy, but when Eyestrain is present, a much larger proportion is required.
