Selwood Of Sleepy Cat

"I'd thought the old wretch might have softened with the years; my mother told me he would; Tracy said he would—that it wasn't in human nature to act the way he was acting forever."

"I told him I'd come back some day and make him eat his words. He ordered me off the reservation. Tracy and his deck of cards were waiting for me; I dropped my father's name and took my mother's—here I am."

"You know how I struck it a few years ago at Thief River. Dave Tracy was down and out. He thought if he could get a house started here, he could get on his feet. I backed him—why shouldn't I? When we took the trail, I slept under his blanket."

CHAPTER X

Pardaloe Turns Diplomat General Roper waited only till he was able to travel to go west with his location engineers. He said very little to Wentworth before he started; only that when he came back he would have to talk with Selwood.

Wentworth himself spent the week between Sleepy Cat and Thief River, disturbed only and surprised by Selwood's resignation as superintendent of the freight line. It required all of Wentworth's and Carpy's powers of persuasion to induce him to hold on till an acceptable successor could be found. Neither Doctor Carpy, despite his blunt common sense, nor Wentworth, the long-headed master of frontier transportation, was capable of analyzing the mystery of the change that had come over Selwood. They wrongly surmised that his settled moodiness was due to the fresh outbreak of his grievance against his grandfather; had they been as close to Selwood as Bill Pardaloe was, and as good an observer, they would have known that less than a hundred pounds of Sleepy Cat femininity had wrecked his good nature, his optimism, and his peace of mind.

When they saw him finish, with libations of wine, the recital of his family wrongs, they did not realize that he would likewise have been glad to drown all recollection of the last scene he ever expected to have with Christie Flyer. Bill Pardaloe, watching Selwood unobserved, knew better than to ask questions, but he himself had a soft spot in his heart for Christie, and though his duties no longer took him to the store, where Flyer's business was dwindling, Bill made it a point to drop

When You Buy Molasses

... you will find it to your every advantage to insist on "BEMA" brand—for "BEMA" Molasses is the pure juice of the world-famous Barbados sugar cane—the best molasses made.

around at times and see what he could see and hear.

He always lounged into the store in the same manner—with the fingers of one long, ungainly hand resting on the left of his bowie knife, stuck at his hip, and with his arms free for action. Invariably, too, with his head poked inquiringly forward—which set his long nose well ahead of his centre of gravity, with the corners of his mouth pulled down to suit his pessimistic mood, and with his small, piercing eyes wide open with suspicious gloom.

Such a man could hardly be expected to make a hit with Christie Flyer. Yet Bill Pardaloe came to stand higher in her favor than any frontiersman in Sleepy Cat. Honesty underlay his crudeness, his great strength inspired respect, and Christie, with a woman's instinct bidden on a girl's heart, liked him.

A fortnight had gone by since Christie dismissed Selwood, when Pardaloe, puzzled by the gambler's behavior and looking for some explanation dropped in on Christie.

She was in the middle of the store with a feather duster in her hand when he arrested her attention. He did not know why her greeting was so very cordial that morning; but next to seeing the man she wanted to see and did not want to see, she was delighted to welcome Bill—to see him was closest to seeing Selwood, anyway.

She laughed heartily at the condition of his boots. "Bill," she exclaimed, "if you don't take some time off you black those boots I won't speak to you again. Honestly, Bill," she asked in pleading tones, "did you ever black those boots?"

Pardaloe grinned; every time Christie said "Bill" he melted like a roll of butter. "Christie, when I was in the army I had 't black my boots every day. I swore if I ever got out I'd never black a pair of boots again in my life—'n, by cracky, I kept my word, too."

"But, Bill, wouldn't you break your word—just once—for me?" Pardaloe looked at his dust-covered footings, shifted his cud, and countered craftily. "What difference would it make to you?"

"Why—Christie, nonplussed for an instant, looked up innocently—"it would cheer me up so, Bill—I'm blue!" And Christie laughed.

"Say, Christie," asked Pardaloe, taking a piece of plug tobacco from his pocket, "what's a-matter 'tween you and John Selwood?"

The shock to Christie was perfectly hidden in her astonishment. She opened her eyes as if inviting the most rigorous inspection. "Why, nothing! Why do you ask that? At least," she went on—and then a little hateful telltale color rose, "nothing that I know of—why, Bill?"

Pardaloe, having discharged his fowling piece, chewed his fresh morsel of tobacco into place, looking no longer at Christie but at the floor somewhat to one side of her, his mouth drawn down to a gloomy curve. "He don't come here no more," he observed at length.

Christie tossed her head. "Well, he's a very busy man, and, of course, has lots of friends besides us—" Pardaloe gaped steadily ahead. "Are you his friend?" he asked with nasal skepticism.

She pressed astonishment. "Why, yes, I hope so, Bill"—Christie raised her voice—"what are you asking all these questions for? Then a panic seized her. "What do you mean, Bill? Is Selwood hurt?"

For an instant the book of her woman's heart lay open before the big fellow—her look of sudden, deadly fear. Bill had a pretty good idea now.

He shook his head to her question. "No, no. Nothing like that at all, Christie. But what's wrong 'tween you and John?"

Pardaloe was treading on thin ice for a mule boss; and among the dangers he had not counted on was the reaction in a woman's feelings after she had betrayed her secret. (To be Continued)

ELMIRA WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Institute, Elmira, was held in the hall on Wednesday June 3rd. Eight members and one visitor were present. After the reading and adoption of minutes, roll call was answered with the name of my first school teacher. Reports of committees were given and new ones appointed, and a letter was read by the secretary, Mrs. W. Murphy and Miss Marjorie Campbell were appointed delegates to attend the Annual Convention. In the absence of the secretary for the ensuing months, an acting secretary, Mrs. A. P. McPhee, was appointed until the Annual meeting.

Then followed a discussion on means of increasing the funds. The members decided to hold, in the hall, on Thursday, June 18th, a picnic social, dance and drawing for lottery on rug. At the close of the meeting, lunch was served by the committee. The next meeting is to be held in the hall and roll call is to be answered by the members writing their names left handed.

FAILURE TO COMPLY WITH LAW BRINGS FINES TO EGG BUYERS

Active measures to suppress illegal trading in eggs resulted in a number of successful prosecutions being undertaken by the Department during the past week. Mr. W. A. Ault, Chief Egg Inspector, in commenting on these prosecutions, stated that it was not the policy of the Department to take court action except in cases where other means of securing compliance with the Egg Regulations failed.

"Continued violation of the law," stated Mr. Ault, "cannot be tolerated and it may be that a number of other prosecutions in various parts of the country will have to be undertaken to make those dealing in eggs realize that the regulations respecting the grading and marking must be obeyed in the interests of the industry."

J. A. McDougall and MacMillan and Company, both of Finch, Ontario, pleaded guilty in Cornwall Police Court to purchasing eggs at a

"THERE MUST BE A REASON!"

Things don't just happen. There's a reason for everything. And there's a reason why the Woodstock is so generally preferred in the progressive business of this country, as is indicated by the scores of telegrams and letters received. That reason is—a better product, both in design and construction, backed by an organization rendering unsurpassed service and cooperation.

POTATOES FERTILIZERS

We cannot advise you whether or not you should plant potatoes. We do know however that a good year generally follows a discouraging one, and if you do not sow you cannot reap. The potato crop grown in 1924 sold at very low prices but that grown in 1925 sold at record making prices. The crop grown in 1928 was hard to sell at all yet that grown in 1929 gave big profit. Will you be in a position to participate in the returns from the 1931 crop. Seed is cheap. The product may be high. We have a supply of chemicals, of 3-8-7 and 4-8-7 ready mixed fertilizer, ready for quick delivery after June 1st. If you do not buy you may wish you had bought.
