Leaving their bandroom in the Office building, Queen Street, they marched out Victoria Park, branched on to the North River road out which they proceeded for a considerable distance and came in by way of the Lower Spring Park and Malpeque Roads. Opposite the residence of Mr. G. H. Simons, the well-known manufacturer of aerated beverages the men were invited to step into his home and rest themselves and were generously treated by Mr. Simons to temperate drinks which need not say the men gratefully appreciated. In addition to practicing music the bandmen receive two lectures daily, from Sergeant Ross on "first aid."

SPLENDID ADDRESS.—In the Methodist Church Pulpit on Sunday night, the Rev. Mr. Weeks delivered a most practical discourse from the words "Were there not ten" cleansed, but where are the nine? This was not said to show Christ's healing power, over this dread disease—but shows the ingratitude that prevailed at that time towards the Giver of all good, and down through the ages to the present time, one out of ten, giving thanks and praise to God for his wonderful works to the children of men. One out of ten, in the Church taking an active part in Christian work. "Where are the nine?" what are they doing? Let everyone give thanks and praise to God for all his benefits, which is a bounden duty and is well pleasing to Him. The sermon was listened to with profound attention, and made a marked impression.—Com.
