The Little Scratch

Or rather, beware the germs that are liable to get into such scratch. Many lives have been lost from a simple wound of this kind that became infected.

Jamieson Antiseptic Solution should be kept handy in every home. It's immediate application will prevent infection and healing will be prompt. It's a powerful germicide but NOT POISONOUS.

MIRACULOUS ESCAPE OF ISLANDER AT YPRES

The following letter was received by Mr. M. A. Paquet, Souris, from Mr. Leonard McCormack, Souris, who enlisted in the first contingent with Messrs. Charles and Alex. McDonald, and Neil McIsaac, who has since died from wounds. Mr. McCormack is now attached to the Montreal Artillery Brigade, and in the following letter he gives a thrilling description of the battle of Ypres in which he was engaged.

France, June 15, 1915
Dear Marshie:—I received your most welcome letter of the 27th. It is needless to say how pleased I was to hear from my old home town. Well Marshie, the weather is beautiful out here at present, in fact it is real hot. The farmers are cutting their clover, which is a beautiful crop. It looks good for the farmers out here this year, as the crops are looking splendid. We are visiting presently for the first season. I never seen so many apple and pear trees. It will make it nice for us when it comes, as we very often take up a position in an orchard.

You asked me to give you some news of the big battle in which the Canadians took such an important part. I will tell you something of the part the 5th Battery played in it. Although the Infantry losses were heavy, the Artillery were just as heavy, in comparison to the amount of men that make a Battery of Artillery. If we have thirty-five or forty casualties it just about puts the Battery out of action, especially if they are gunners. I am sorry to say we have had twenty-nine casualties in our Battery, most of them being killed.

We were in position about five miles beyond Ypres. On the 20th we were informed that we were going in reserve and accordingly that night the right section (only one section moves at a time) left the position we were in—the left section intending to follow the next night. The night of the 21st, as you know was the time the Germans made the great attack, and with the use of asphyxiating gases, broke through our line and were swooping down upon us, thus preventing us from getting out. With thousands of shells around us we found ourselves fighting for our lives with a section of another battery from Ottawa to complete the unit.

In the meantime the right section was held up in the line about four miles from the scene of conflict, although well within range of all their guns and believe me it was pretty hot.

At noon the next day, while having lunch and wondering whether we were going to get in on the battle, a message came to us that we were to move at 1.10 and 2 o'clock we were on the road—pretty good work, we thought.

At four o'clock we found we were to be attached to another Battery, which had come in position just before us and who had their telephone line cut (making it a six gun Battery). The horses had barely been unhitched and were not out of the field before we were firing, and believe me, we threw some number of shells into the Germans.

I never imagined there was so much Artillery in the world, and the din of our guns and the bursting of shells was terrible. The Germans were on a ridge over across the Canal, in plain view and we used our telescopic sights—the first time I have heard of their use since our arrival.

What was left of one of the Canadian Infantry Brigades, as well as a great number of French Infantry were in front of us, and the next 72 hours saw counter attack after counter attack, our troops making progress at great cost, on account of the gases used by the enemy.

I might say that we have had experience with these shells, but not in sufficient quantity to affect us. We were almost continuously firing, and in the moments we hastily constructed dug-outs. There was no sleep for anyone for 48 hours, and on the night of the 26th we were glad to snatch a few hours.

The news came up the next day that our Sergeant Major had been wounded (he was with the other section of our Battery) the first casualty of our Battery. This day saw many French guns were brought up, also more English Artillery and the whole place was thick with guns. I wonder that anything could live in the terrible fire of our guns—the bursts of the many shells being plainly visible.

The Germans got our range nicely that evening, and we were not surprised, for the flashes of our guns were clear to them from their lines. The next morning they opened up on us with shrapnel and high explosives and I tell you things were hot, but not a man flinched and we kept up a constant fire. Everyone had close shaves and the casualties occurred at noon, when the Sergeant on the next gun to ours was killed and two men wounded. Several others were wounded during the day, but all in the Battery to which we were attached miraculously escaped.

About four o'clock the next day another of our men was killed, and myself, as well as the rest of the detachment had absolutely the most wonderful close shave I have ever heard of. This shell, about five inch Howitzer came through our shield, between the No. 2 and myself. No. 3, touched neither the dial sight or the buffer and burst at the trail of the gun. Neither of us were touched, although thrown almost out of our seats.

A fragment of this shell killed a man on number 2 gun and wounded another, who has since died. I can

THROUGH THE GUARDIAN'S SIEVE

By The Sieve Man.

I would like to renew a suggestion made some time ago relative to the formation of a Provincial Board of Trade. A live Board of Trade is the best asset a city can have. A like remark applies to a province. There are many things which individual Boards view from a purely local standpoint. Many of these have a provincial value which is lost sight of in the sectional clamor. A Provincial Board of Trade in which all the local Boards would have representation, would, I believe, be of great value in this connection. This Provincial Board could meet at stated intervals in each of the counties and discuss matters bearing upon the welfare of the province as a whole. A conference like this every now and then would be of great educational value and would serve to dispel local prejudices which we cannot see but which are there just the same. I commend the suggestion to the Charlottetown Board of Trade in the expectation that it will meet with the treatment its importance deserves.

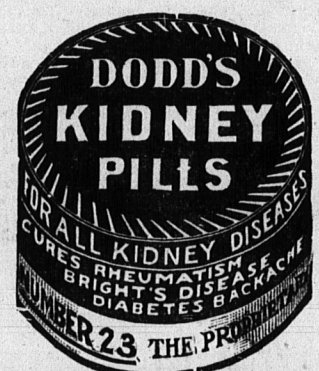

them, and those who passed that way had to be very careful or they would get their clothing ruined. Kent Street is one of the most frequented streets of the city and the authorities should not allow it to be lumbered up in this way. Neither should they allow some of the business men on the street to have oil casks and such things standing on the sidewalks on week days and on Sundays.

There is not so much painting being done in Charlottetown this season as I would like to see. This is especially true of the business streets. The buildings on Queen Street below Richmond have been screaming for attention in this way for years, but their cries have been unheeded. Perhaps the owners do not realize the fact that this is the part of the city most frequented by strangers, especially those coming by steamer from Boston and Montreal.

I see that many people who are cultivating lawns in front of their premises are this year putting down posts and chains to keep people from walking and driving over them. This should not be necessary. The city is not so large that people need take short cuts over private property to reach a given point. These lawns

THE CATCH

Representative Barthold said at a banquet in Milwaukee: "Those people remind me of the old man. Yes, they remind me very much of the old man. "He had a soft, daff look, the old man I'm speaking of, and he sat on a park bench in the sun, with rod and line as if he were fishing; but the line, with a worm on the hook, dangled over a bed of bright primroses. "Daff!" said a passerby to himself, "Daff!" Bughouse! Nice looking old fellow, too. It's a pity." "What are you doing, uncle?" "Fishing, eh? Well, uncle, come and have a drink." "The old man shouldered his rod and followed the kindly stranger to the corner saloon. There he regaled himself with a large glass of dark beer and a good five-cent cigar. His host, contemplating him in a friendly, protecting way, as he sipped and smoked, said: "So you were fishing uncle? And how many have you caught this morning?" "The old man blew a smoke cloud toward the ceiling. Then, after a pause, he said: "You are the seventh, sir."
