Evolution And The Past
BY LORD ELTON

Lord Elton was a close friend of Mr. Ramsay MacDonald who made the author a peer when he was Premier. Lord Elton for many years was a Labour candidate for a country constituency, and the story of his campaigning makes lively reading. He writes:

"On one of my visits the topic for the week was Evolution. I prepared my address with diffidence and some care, and flattered myself, when it was over, that I had myself mastered, and on the whole explained, the rudiments of Darwinism, neo-Darwinism, and anti-Darwinism with reasonable lucidity. The speakers in the discussion which followed politely conceded this optimistic view.

"Then a grizzled veteran rose. 'That was an interesting speech,' he said, 'a mighty interesting speech, but one of the nearest speeches ever I did hear. And now, my brothers, arising out of the speaker's remarks, I would ask you this. Have you any other view, other than the Darwinian Adam was? To think that Adam should have actually invented a different name for every single one of the animals! Is there one of us here could do that? Ah! My brothers, there is much for us to learn from Adam.' The audience applauded with a loud and ardent applause. I clapped more heartily than any one."

"No man chooses his career, his talents or his end, by any reason. I have always believed that the saints know more than the philosophers. At its best, the national genius has always been a divine, poetic and political compromise have been its most enduring products. And, unlike the French, we have always preferred impulse to logic and experiment to a priori principles to hunger and civil war.

"All my orthodoxes, I see, are intertwined. The basis of democracy is belief that on broad moral issues, the instinctive wisdom of the simple in their millions is more likely to be right than any paid or unpaid committee assembled. And the supreme testimony to the Christian faith is that the simple of heart and faith, the still, Democracy and Christendom alike aver that Thou hast hidden these things from the wise and prudent and hast revealed them unto babes.

"Perhaps — and at least that would please the psychologists — the simple of heart and faith, the still, the mysterious leading-strings of the past. Perhaps the Arnold tradition mattered chiefly because it taught that what I had meant already, and all the scintillations of Balliol mattered less than that evening bell which was suddenly all the church had, my childhood.

"Perhaps the War was only a leaving home and then, long afterwards, my mother standing in the light of the hall. Perhaps it was the freedom of my own heart reflected on the dark waters of humanity. Perhaps all life is only a child scampering in the light of the sun, the light of the lighted windows of home, the Home everlasting to be with the Father Eternal."

Snow Plows Clear Roads; Huge Drifts

A Government snow plow cleared the road to Upton Airport for motor traffic yesterday. Huge drifts were encountered and work was not complete until late in the afternoon. In addition, roads were opened from the city to the cemeteries.

As soon as equipment was available and weather conditions appeared settled work would start clearing the 40 Road to Montague. Just how heavy drifts were on that section of road was not known. The road to Summerside would remain blocked for the present. It was not had been open for some considerable time prior to this week's storm. On the other hand the road from Charlottetown to Montague had been open all night.

In Charlottetown plows, the city equipment being assisted by a heavy Government plow continued to widen the driving surface of streets while the truck accompaniment a gang of men removed snow from in front of business premises on Queen Street and cleared away crossings and performed other valuable services in restoring normal traffic conditions in the City.

"Islanders" Hockey Team Snowbound

The Islanders, ladies hockey team, which played an eastern city team from Montague, Murray River, Georgetown and vicinity had a trying experience Monday night in returning home through the snowstorm. Jimmie Power's station car with nine players became stalled near Pownal and the passengers found splendid hospitality in the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Wood. Thence some of the girls trudged through the drifts to Pownal village and were entertained at the Forster Home.

Edna Molnais and Jennie Oudmore walked two miles to Hazelbrook station and caught the train on Wednesday.

The same afternoon the two married ladies of the team, Mrs. MacDonald and Mrs. Brennan, Charlottetown, succeeded in getting to Hazelbrook, thence down the track to Banbury—a distance of six miles.

Two other cars fought their way past Pownal, mostly through the fields as far as Tea Hill, where they were quit on account of boiling radiators at 2:30 a. m., and when they turned in at the home of Mr. Roderick MacDonald they were hospitably served with bacon and eggs at 3:30 a. m. Included in this party were Hill J. Walter Jones, M. L. A., and his daughters, Vimy and Lois, who trudged three miles, mostly through wood-paths the next day to reach home.

It was learned yesterday afternoon that the Murray River and Georgetown girls had not yet succeeded in arriving home.

The Islanders won the game 6-1.

MAID'S DAY OUT. WHAT ABOUT IT?

WINNIPEG, March 15—(CP)—Lillian Gibbons has been making inquiries, in the United States, because she happens to the household's meals on "the maid's day out." This seems to be generally on a "black Thursday" but some "escapist wives" who go to skating and take their children along apparently hail it as a red-letter day.

"But I'll tell you what we never do Thursdays," said one mother who was called on by the reporter, "that's leave the dishes. I think that's one of the shabbiest tricks!"

"It's grandmother's day," one young mother reflected happily. "I don't get into difficulties Thursdays because I'm lucky enough to have a mother who comes over to help me."

One family has a "pet supper" for Thursday night. "It's a pork tenderloin and baked onions served to the mother. 'It's awfully easy, all going into the oven at the same time. I pop it in about 5:30 and it's ready when father comes home. And, as dessert, they always have hot cream from our favorite restaurant."

"My girls get their housekeeping experience Thursdays," promptly answered a mother of daughters. "They do some of the things they give to cooking what with school and music and the Winter Club. But Thursdays they get experience. Nelda loves baked beans; she prepares some for herself; no matter what the others have, Margaret loves sausage; Billie can do very well frying his own bacon and eggs. They all cater to their own tastes."

ANTICIPATED EINSTEIN BY THIRTY YEARS

High Tribute Is Paid To Genius Of Deceased Charlottetown Man.

A news dispatch in yesterday's Guardian stated that Rev. Dr. H. E. Thomas, Saint John, N. B., in his possession a treatise written thirty years ago at Charlottetown by the late Mr. John Newton, which anticipated the recently announced discovery of Professor Einstein of a single law to explain all the phenomena of the material universe. The following article by Rev. Dr. Thomas on the subject of Mr. Newton's treatise is from the Saint John Telegraph-Journal:

The announcement that the famous scientist Professor Albert Einstein had discovered a physical law which links gravitation, magnetism and matter in one unifying mathematical concept will doubtless be of great interest to who concern themselves with this field of science. While it may be difficult for an amateur in this field like myself to fully comprehend the new finding of this world famous scientist, yet the general principle added, that where electricity appears in the universe, there appears also magnetism, that all matter is made of discrete particles that seem to be electric, that what we call gravitation is to be closely identified with electricity, these are phenomena not difficult of understanding. In this unifying, electricity, magnetism and gravitation it is possible that the finding of Professor Einstein may not be just as new as is represented.

Over 30 years ago there lived in Charlottetown, P. E. I., an esteemed citizen, wise minister, I happened to be acquainted with whom formed a deep friendship. John Newton was a humble-minded man, but largely philosophical in his thinking, who had propounded a certain theory regarding the laws which control all bodies in the physical universe. That theory appealed to me personally and in the years which have intervened I have had an increasing conviction that in its general application it is indisputable.

I believe I may have wielded some little influence in persuading Mr. Newton to place his theory in permanent form, and of this I am certain that I possess a copy. This brochure is in simple typewritten form; but it includes diagrams and is roughly bound. The interesting point is that some 30 years ago a somewhat obscure citizen of the Maritime Provinces have foreseen what is now accepted as something startlingly new by a world famous scientist. Mr. Newton's theory is that the law we call gravitation is largely electric and magnetic in its nature.

For Einstein's Theory

A study of this treatise must cause the conclusion to be reached that it is much in agreement with the recently announced conclusion of Professor Albert Einstein, and I may say that steps have been taken to have the treatise reach the celebrated scientist in the hope that at least his judgment upon it may be expressed, and honor given if honor be due. John Newton, now deceased, was at one time a school teacher, and then became a merchant in Charlottetown. Members of the family survive. I believe, in Prince Edward Island and in the Canadian West.

May I add that Mr. Newton was a man of devout Christian faith and recognized in the physical law which he expounded simply a method of the working of that Infinite Creator and Divine Father to Whom he gave the utmost love and devotion.

Regarding the copy of treatise which I possess I have a conviction there were three copies produced and I doubt if any other is available.

GROSBEAK TAKE CITY QUARTERS

MONTREAL, March 15—(CP)—Far from their usual haunts, large flocks of evening grosbeak are making a temporary home in Montreal and the Laurentian Mountains north of here.

About the size of a robin, the birds are common in the Hudson Bay district but rarely nest further east than the Great Lakes. Yellow-bellied they have a black head with yellow stripes and black and white wings.

A flock of about two dozen of the birds, related to the finch and sparrow, were sighted here by Professor Gwynne Edwards, ornithologist at McGill University, who said he was unable to determine why they migrate far afield in certain years. They probably will return to the northeast next month, he added.

Second Yellowknife Mine Producing

Another gold property in the Yellowknife area, Northwest Territories, reached the production stage in February, with the pouring of the first two gold bricks at the Negus Mines Limited mill. This initial haul from the Negus mine, weighing about one hundred pounds and valued at approximately $30,000, was recovered in twenty days' operation of the milling plant, and marked the entry into production of the second Northwest Territories' mine within six months.

The possibilities of the Negus property as a gold producer were discovered in 1937, when development work was undertaken. The first shipments of machinery and equipment were received at the property in August, 1938, and since then work on the mine and mill has been rapidly pressed forward. At present about ninety men are employed at the Negus mine.

The first gold produced in the Yellowknife area was brought in by the Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company last September. Since that time the "Con" mine has produced gold to the value of more than $350,000.
