CHAPTER 26

Alarmed, Charly wanted to take her hand away. But she didn't want her hand to go.

"No," she shook her head, "don't say that, Batch. Please—don't spoil our wonderful friendship."

"I—I can't go on like this any longer," His jaws set. "Just being friends isn't enough—feeling you almost every day—loving you so much I can't sleep nights. Charly, can't you care for me just a little?"

Tears came to Charly's eyes.

"I do—care for you, Batch."

"She winced at the happiness that lit his face. But before he could speak she, disillusioned him, her voice catching.

"But I'm married—Batch, and as long as Doug wants me to remain his wife, I will. For his father's sake."

Batch's jaw hardened.

"You're too human, Charly. You need love. You can't go through life tied to a man who compels you to live alone. Oh, Charly—I want your love."

Her blood sang before the passion in his voice. She was wanted. Life could be so sweet if she could throw out the shackles Doug had placed on her. Divorce him to marry Bath. Her heart cried out against the emptiness of her life. She had so much love to give. But she shook her head sadly.

"I care more for you, Batch, than any one else in the world. But I must love my father."

Her heart ached at the sadness in his face. She wanted with an almost physical pain to take the red curly hair in her arms and see the old devil-may-care Batch smiling up at her again. He brooded silently at her, he looked up, to smile crookedly.

"And I was the smart young fellow who was never going to fall in love. Oh, Charly! Love is a painful ailment."

She tried to smile, but it was only a grimace of failure.

"Do you believe I'd marry you if I could and still do the honorable thing?"

"If I didn't feel you cared for me, too—this wouldn't be so hard. Promise me something—dear heart."

She nodded.

"Promise me that as soon as you're free—and I believe you will be some of these days, Doug will want to telephone call, Yanner? Is there something I can do for you?"

She curled up on the divan, her golden curls a halo of innocence around the pale face with the dark circled eyes, and said, in her meek little voice, "If you could me—I'll lie. I—had to see you, just once more. I couldn't go on without just one more evening all to ourselves—like old times. Is—is it too much to ask?"

Doug shrugged, and his indifference sent a sudden burning rage through Yanner. But she met him up her mind not to make him angry at any cost. It wasn't possible that there wasn't a soft spot somewhere in his armor, and she meant to find it. Suddenly she went over to sit on the little hassock at his feet.

"Secret—darling—before. Surely it would bring memories that would soften him. She smiled up at him childishly. "Just—like old times— isn't it, darling?"

Then suddenly all her reserve crumpled. It was grand acting when she flung up to throw herself into his arms in a flame of the old passion.

"Doug—Doug, darling! Kiss me!"

He did not push her away. He felt sorry for her. But he said coldly, "No, Yanner, I'm sorry. I—don't want to kiss you."

He didn't want to kiss her! Nothing he could have said would have infuriated her more. But she hid her face and said softly through lips that curled with fury, "Just—let me stay here—just a little minute."

He suffered through about five minutes of silence, Yanner's head on his shoulder, her arms wound tightly around him. She was silent—trying to think. Suddenly she jumped up.

"I haven't offered you a highball yet, have I?"

Before he could answer she was out of the room. Evidently the high balls were ready, for she came back in a few seconds with two glasses on a tray.

Doug shook his head. "No thanks. I'm not drinking."

So—he was afraid to drink with her. Yanner's fury increased.

Doug watched her while she gulped both the highballs down. Then she grabbed up her wrap from a chair and laughed gaily.

"Now I feel better. Know what I'd like to do?"

"What?" He asked wearily, to make conversation.

"We're going to go for a ride—just like we used to do—and I'm going to drive. I feel like a little wintry air."

Doug was so glad to get out of the house, he sighed with relief. Yanner was an excellent driver. He'd humor

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas builds up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sick and the world looks pink.

Laxatives are only makeshifts. A mass bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get those two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. Stubbornly refuse anything else, Inc.

her. And when they got back he'd put her out of the car and go home.

Yanner ran to the machine and jumped in, eager to take the wheel. He was glad her mood had changed. It wasn't so easy to have her hanging round his neck begging him for kisses that he had no desire to give. Gayety was much more like the old Yanner—and decidedly more becoming.

In a second they were spinning down the driveway, Yanner's golden hair blowing in the wind. She raced that far furiously to the main road. A mile away she turned to laugh, a little wildly, he thought.

"Just—like old times!"

They were nearing a treacherous little bridge. He felt a sudden quiver in the ground. He had forgotten to slow up. They were only a few feet away from it when she cried to him recklessly, "Kiss me!"

Doug pulled away, and he could not see the insane gleam in the spurred girl's eyes when she yelled wildly.

"It's right—damn you! Here we both go merrily—to hell!"

The car hurtled through the darkness. Doug felt himself going through what seemed like empty space. The last he heard was a crash and Yanner's scream. Then blackness.

PLAY AT CORRAN BAN

An expectant and enthusiastic group of spectators filled to capacity Corran Ban Hall on Monday night, July 8, to see the parish play again in the limelight, this time in the three act comedy "Too Many Bosses." Nor were they disappointed. The players acquitted themselves in a manner worthy of commendation even in professional circles.

The display of dramatic talent put forth, coupled with the peculiar situations in which the different characters were involved, held the undivided interest of all from the beginning till the curtain heralded the end of the final act.

Mrs. George MacDonald assumed the role of the dictatorial Monica with that ease which is attained only by long experience in dramatics, while Mr. Joseph Campbell who represented her henpecked husband evoked a roar of laughter every time he appeared before the lights. The part of Ramsey Gelder, the quiet, cool, bachelor whose alert mind brought in many entanglements and eventually bromed them out, was given due justice by Mr. Louis MacDonald. Miss Mary Campbell was up to her usual form in the role of the "catty" Mrs. Waterman. Her son, Eric was ably impersonated by Mr. Francis MacDonald. Others included in the cast were Mr. Leonard MacIntyre as the active and likeable Grandpa Lakin, Miss Louise Arling portraying Fern Lakin, Monica's daughter and Eric Waterman's sweetheart, Miss Margaret MacDonald as Vida Lakin, Fern's talkative younger sister, Miss Elizabeth MacDonald and Mr. Hector MacDonald as Josephine Burnett and Garret Young, friends of the Lakin and Waterman families. Ewen as Mrs. the coloured maid.

Among the specialties, two selections on the harmonica by Mr. Ben Watts, step dancing by Miss Gallant, music by Mrs. J. J. McInnis, Messrs Alphonso and Frederick MacIntyre, were enjoyed by all present.
