A CASE of reported horse stealing comes from Cavendish, where it appears that a fisherman and a school master had gone fishing. The fisherman, who owns the horse, left him in a pasture field near by all night and in the morning when they were ready to return home they went to look for their horse but he was nowhere to be found. They afterwards learned that a man, well known in that vicinity, had taken the horse and gone to Charlottetown. They are now going to air the matter in the law court.
