CHAPTER X
SAHARA LANDING

It was the morning of the third day after "The Star of the East" had left Timbuctoo on the second—and vital—lap of the trip, that disaster fell upon the expedition. It fell with a suddenness altogether unexpected. Indeed, to most of its members the very imagination of a mishap had dwindled almost to nothing. Until that moment everything had been the plainest of plain sailing. The lap to Timbuctoo had been covered in record time. The party given in honour of the adventurers by the French residents had been in the best hospitable tradition of the great Republic.

The first excitement of a literal bird's-eye view of the greatest desert in the world had worn off. With the exception of the Professor, busy with his note-book, Otto Fiesch, busy with his photographic apparatus, and Larrimore, who was in the act of taking over the controls from Nigel Kerr—the party was in varying stages of somnolence. The sky in which the plane swam so effortlessly was an inverted bowl of burning blue, visibility limited only by the horizon. The vast sandy expanse below gave the curious effect of a seashore, over which the tide has just gone out, being strangely patterned with rough circles and squares.

And as far as the eye could reach there was no sign of life; not a tree, not a hut, not even a miniature pyramid to tell that man once lived upon the earth. Here indeed was that formless void in which creation began. But there is an inevitable monotony about even unpeppable grandeur or limitless space, when indefinitely produced. And so Antony Sothorn slept with his mouth open, and Carol dozed, half dreaming of Lord's and Ascot and Henley, and Janet Manson played patience as unconcernedly as if she had been in Queen's Gate or Cheltenham.

Carol, woken out of her day-dreaming by the first lurch, experienced that sickening tightening of every muscle which is the preliminary to the extreme of physical fear, when she looked out of the window and saw one of the great propellers, which should have been revolving furiously, hanging perfectly motionless in the crystalline air. Fiesch's camera clattered to the floor. Janet Manson's patience cards scattered over her knees. Sothorn clutched at the table in front of him, muttering "What the—?" at the sight of

Scarth—MacKay Wedding in Rothesay

St. Paul's Church in Rothesay was the scene of a fashionable summer wedding on Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock, when the rector, Rev. C. J. Markham, assisted by Rev. F. J. Keble, chaplain of Rothesay Collegiate School, and Padre H. Ploughman, R.C.N., H. M. C. S. Cornwallis, Cornwallis, N.S., united in marriage Miss Ada Hazen Mackay, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Mackay of Rothesay, and Lieut.-Commander George Archibald Campbell Scarth, R.C.N., son of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. C. Scarth of Sherbrooke, Que., formerly of Charlottetown.

The church was decorated with a profusion of white lilies and bridal wreaths, which were also contained in the altar vases. Mrs. Reginald L. H. Goodday presided at the organ and accompanied the choir in the singing of the nuptial music. The bride met at the entrance to the church by the vested choir which preceded her to the chancel, singing the wedding hymn. Miss Susan E. Mackay was her sister's maid of honor, and Miss Constance M. Harrison was the bridesmaid. Commander George A. Brown, R.C.N.(R), was the groomsmen, and Hugh H. Mackay, John M. McAvity, Robert L. Hunter, Toronto, Lieut. Colin Mackay, R.C.N.(R.), Lieut. W. R. Mackay, R.C.N.(R.), and Lieut. G. H. L. Fairweather, R.C.N.(R.), were the ushers.

The bride wore a Christian Dior model gown of white tulle fashioning on classic lines, the bodice having a square neckline and long cuffs of honiton lace. Her floor-length veil of tulle-illusion fell in graceful folds from a coronet of matching lace, and she carried a sheaf of white gladioli.

The attendants' gowns were styled alike in princess lines of white crepe, and had square necklines. The skirts extended into short trains. Their small off-the-face hats were of straw bouquets and white gladioli and matching material and they carried Shasta daisies.

Guard of Honor

As the bride and groom left the church they passed through a guard of honor bearing crossed swords. Lieut. John MacKinnon, of H. M. C. S. Brunswick, was the officer commanding the guard, members of which were brother officers of the bridegroom at H. M. C. S. Cornwallis. They were Capt. A. P. Musgrave, R.C.N., officer commanding H. M. C. S. Cornwallis; Lieut. W. H. MacDonald, R.C.N.; Surgeon Lieut. D. Maunsell, R.C.N.; Lieut. Stanley Ring, R.C.N., and Lieut. E. Niven, R.C.N., and Capt. C. H. Bonnycastle, officer commanding H. M. C. S. Brunswick. Two pipers from the New Brunswick Scottish Regiment piped the couple from the church to the bride's home and rendered Scottish airs throughout the afternoon.

A reception was held at "Strath-naver," the home of the bride's parents in Rothesay, where refreshments were served from a marquee on the terrace. The guests, numbering several hundred, were received on the lawn adjoining the residence by Mr. and Mrs. Mackay, Mr. and Mrs. Scarth and the wedding party. The toast to the bride was proposed by Cyrus F. Inches, K.C., and the groom happily responded and proposed a toast to the bride's attendants, to which Commander Brown responded. A toast to the bride's parents was proposed by Mr. Justice W. H. Harrison and Mr. Mackay responded. Mrs. Mackay also spoke briefly. The wedding cake was cut in traditional fashion by the bride with her husband's sword.

Later Lieut.-Commander and Mrs.

CANADA NEEDS HEALTHY RAILWAYS TO SERVE HER PEOPLE

Canada's Railways mean EMPLOYMENT for over 190,000 Canadians

It takes skilled manpower and lots of it to keep the railways rolling... to move passengers and freight (145 million tons of it last year!)... to carry the essentials of life and work to every community. So it's not surprising that the railways are among Canada's biggest employers. Last year their payroll totalled $544,000,000.

Then, too, the railways are heavy buyers of so many things, from paper cups to locomotives. Their continued power to employ and to buy is therefore linked with the welfare of countless thousands of other Canadians doing all sorts of jobs in all parts of Canada. The fact is...

THE RAILWAYS ARE CANADA'S BIGGEST BUYERS

Last year they bought well over 400 million dollars' worth of goods, most of which were grown, mined and manufactured in Canada.

WOOD PRODUCTS
There are 3,000 wooden ties to every mile of track. Last year the railways spent nearly 30 million dollars.

The railways also spent other millions for rolling stock of all types; for paper products, tickets, timetables, booklets, stationery; for food, textiles and a host of other products.

Adding taxes, duty, insurance, interest charges and other items, the railways spend close to one billion dollars a year.

STEEL—They spent $21,000,000 for rail and track fastenings. There are 13,000 railway spikes in one mile of track; and the railways operate close to 80,000 miles of track.

FUEL—For fuel alone, the railways spent $113,000,000. They are Canada's largest fuel users. Fuel is one of the largest single items purchased.

This advertisement is one of a series pointing out the railways' key place in Canada's economy. At Canada's largest suppliers of railway rolling stock and equipment, this company and its employees are directly concerned with the railway industry. Canadian Car & Foundry's eight modern plants turn out thousands of railway cars of every type, both passenger and freight. They are fully equipped to supply Canada's railways with rolling stock of the latest type to meet the growing needs of our expanding economy.
