
THE KNIFE THROWER

e crowd is here, night after night,
vond the hard white glare of light,
watch me while I poise and throw
e gleaming knives that cut the air l, hissing, strike the rouga boards, where e stands with outstretched arms. The crowd rustling, murmuring aloud;
ey watch the wicked knives that hiss
e hooded cobras—If I miss!
e long knives leap out, serpent-wise,
n evil darts. Her laughing eyes e unafraid. I hem her in th whizzing blades. A sudden din swift applause goes sweeping by.
d everynight I wonder why hand held steady. Will it be,
e next night, with them watching me,
e next night, when my sure hand slips
laughter leaves her painted lips?
nife that, like a thrown thin flame,
ks out and sears, may end the game!
lean knives pin her to the boards,
l satisfy the eager hordes
t watch their vicious whizzing flight.
onder, will it be tonight.

McSWEEN-SENTNER. —A very quiet but pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs Ambrose Sentner of Brookfield on the morning of Wednesday, Oct. 26th, when their daughter Janie was united in marriage with Murdoch E. McSween of Brookfield. The ceremony was performed by Rev. R. N. Stavert in the presence of the immediate relatives of the contracting parties. The young couple were unattended. The bride who was given away by her father was very becomingly gowned in a suit of navy blue serge with hat to match. Following the ceremony came a daintily prepared wedding breakfast. On Monday evening a miscellaneous shower was held at Mrs. Sentner's home. The large number of beautiful gifts received on this occasion together with the other wedding presents testify to the popularity of the young couple. Mr. and Mrs. McSween left by rail amid showers of confetti, for Alberton and other places in the western section of the Island. On their return they will reside in Brookfield. The Guardian joins in wishing Mr. and Mrs. McSween many years of happy wedded life.

NO MORE SILENT MASTERFUL HEROES

The Present is the Day of the Bounder—Not Ideal Man.

The day of the strong, silent man, the master, the tyrant, has gone for ever.

The types that Charlotte Bronte, Elizabeth Robins and many another woman novelist have depicted under the impression that they were describing the ideal of the feminine soul, have vanished from our ken, and in their place is left quite another species says The Winnipeg Tribune. For today it is the "bounder" that seems to be having it all his own way in the drawing-room and the dance club It is the man who is just a trifle too familiar, too sure of his position, and too inclined to overstep it who is today, it seems, dominating the social life.

Girls, anxious to assert their absolute independence of action and freedom of relationship with the opposite sex, find in the bounder a convenient means of obtaining their end. The bounder has no exaggerated respect for persons; he is hail-fellow-well-met with men and women alike, and though, no doubt, in course of time there will be a reaction in favor of a little more reticence, at present, his attitude suits the position of affairs very passably well.

As for the strong, silent man of novelist and playwright, he doesn't work at all with the existing scheme of things. Plays with him as here don't run, and novels that seek to exploit him end with the first edition. The bounder is neither strong nor silent. On the contrary, he is exceedingly adaptable and immensely verbose.

A great advantage in the bounder proper is that he is engrossed with himself that he doesn't imagine all the time that Jane and Virginia intertain any matrimonial designs upon him. The strong, silent man was terribly inclined to this assumption because he did not put the womenkind of his era on that plane of absolute equality that appeals to the bounder. This makes it a lot more convenient when you are looking for a dancing partner or someone to complete a foursome.

Your brother may feel his wrath rise when he observes the bounder familiarly tuck his arm in yours as you go off to the golf course, but he doesn't understand that in doing so the bounder is quite unconscious of any infringement of etiquette. The bounder knows little of etiquette and even less of sentiment.

Meanwhile, till the idal man has been discovered, the bounder is accepted.

PEACH JAM

To each pint of peeled and cut up peaches add three fourths lbs. of sugar. Put into the perserve kettle with a small cup of water to keep them from burning until they melt. Stir until all is melted, and cook slowly until the liquid jellies when a little is tried on a cold plate. Fill jam pots with the jam, and when cold cover them. Paraffin may be used on top of the jar if in a damp climate, otherwise this will not be absolutely necessary.

"That Warm, Comfy Feeling"

These are Hot Milk-and-Shredded Wheat mornings. Start the day right and get that warm, "comfy feeling" by eating

Shredded Wheat

With HOT Milk

Heat two Biscuits in the oven to restore their crispness; pour hot milk over them, adding a little cream and salt, or sweeten to suit the taste. Nothing so nourishing, strengthening or satisfying. Furnishes all the strength-giving nutriment needed for a half day's work at a cost of a few cents. The perfect food for children or grown-ups—ready-cooked and ready-to-eat.

Move Made To Involve More Of Stillmans

NEW YORK, Oct 25—While the lawyers for James A. Stillman refused yesterday to discuss the latest move of John E. Mack, guardian for baby Guy Stillman, it was learned that they look upon it as an effort on the part of Mrs. Stillman's cunsel to force a settlement through a threat to bring into court three generations of the Stillman family and to prolong indefinitely the legal proceedings which now are in their second year. What attitude Mr. Stillman's attorneys will take Friday when they answer the order at White Plains could not be ascertained, but it was said they probably will contend there is no need of multiplying the number of defendants, as the entire family will be bound by court ruling for Guy.

Coupled with the order to show cause is a stay of all proceedings in the suit until the motion is disposed of. Hearings were to be resumed Tuesday at Poughkeepsie, but it is considered proable that there will not be one for many weeks, if not months. If Justice Morschauser upholds Mr. Mack's motion complaints will have to be served on every descendant of the late James A. Stillman, and as several of them are minors legal guardians will have to be appointed to accept service. All this will consume time.

It is not considered beyond a possibility that the latest court more may actually be the beginning of the end of the ligitation. Friends of the Stillman family point out that the sisters and brothers of the banker do not wish to have their name drawn into the suit any further than they already have been and that to prevent such an eventuality it is understood they would go to all extremes to effect a settlement.

Then also the financial side is to be considered. The suit already has cost Mr. Stillman well into seven figures. If it goes on that new guardians are appointed, all at his expense, the cost probably would be doubled. Continued litigations, it was pionted out, means a continuance of the publicity which all along has been irksome to the Stillman family.

The previous negotions for a settlement were conducted by Mr. Stillman through John A. Carver, his own attorneys, Cornelius J. Sullivan, Outerbridge Horsey and William Rand, being irgnored. Cyrus H. McCormick of Chicago president of the International Harvester Company, was credited with being the person who actually opened the negotiations. Persons following the suit closely express the belief that so much pressure may be brought to bear on Mr. Stillman during the next few days by his own family, the McCormicks and the Rockefellers than an early senttlement may be expected.

WHEN LEE FIGHTS CHOP SUEYS CLOSE

SCRAMENTO, Cal., Oct 25—George Washington Lee has never chopped down any cherry trees, but he has battered down a lot of promising bantamweights.

He claims the Chinese bantamweight championship of the world and if there's any slant-eyed swatsmith who thinks he can wrest it away from his let him speak up now.

Lee was born in San Francisco 21 years ago and shortly afterward the family moved to Sacramento, into a quarter of the city where George had to learn to use his fists in order to get an even break with the kids in the neighborhood.

How well he succeeded was illustrated on the night he walked up to Ancil Hoffman's fight arena and asked permission to get into the ring with somebody. Hoffman gave him a chance—and George cleaned him up as speedily and handily as his countrymen clean up your shirt. Faster opponents followed—and went the same way

Hoffman then took Lee to New Orleans, where he knocked out a tough egg named Rafferty in one round. He returned to the Queen City later and fought a draw with Red Watson. The only training he had for this fight was during stopovers en route from the coast.

Meets Hermann.

In August, 1920, Lee again met Watson and beat him. On Sept. 3 he fought Pete Hermann a tough fight. Later he beat Artie Simonds, lost a 15-round decision to Johnny Buff, beat Young Dempsey in Memphis, and lost to Midget Smith at Rickard's Madison Square Garden.

When Lee fights is most towns all the chop suey resturants close for the evening.

EGGS MIRACULOUSLY SAVED

A young man at Meredith, N. H. making an evening call, in going through the hall opened the cellar door by mistake and stepped into space, bringing down a number of jars of preserved blueberries and landing on a jar containing 18 dozen eggs. He emegred scratched and covered with blueberries, but although he weighs 290 pounds not an egg was broken.
