PARLIAMENTARY SONGSTERS

The suggestion made in the British House of Commons recently that the Chief Secretary for Ireland should give his brother members a vocal illustration of a disloyal song heard in Ireland, and which formed the subject of a question, could easily be carried into effect from the indigenous talent of the Chamber itself. Mr. William Abraham—"Mahon"—was, of course, well known as a vocalist in Wales and elsewhere, and Mr. William Crooke can also sing a very good song.

The palm must in all probability be awarded to Sir Robert Price, M. P., for East Norfolk, who is one of the best comic singers in the House. Upon many an occasion Sir Robert has regaled his constituents with an inimitable rendering of the "Baby on the Shore" or the "Cat Came Back," and he has even been known to follow this up with a dance accompaniment.

HUNGER STRIKE IS FORCIBLY FED

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—After refusing to eat for seventy-eight hours, Miss Helen Paul, Chairman of the National Women's Party, who is serving seven months sentence for picketing the White House, was forcibly fed at the Asylum Hospital to-day. This bare announcement was given to the friends of Miss Paul by the hospital authorities, who said that the weak suffragist leader was greatly exhausted afterward.

The decision to prevent Miss Paul from starving by forcibly administering food was reached by Dr. J. A. Gannon, chief resident physician at the hospital, after consultation with four other Washington physicians. The authorities refused to allow Miss Paul's physician, Dr. Cora King Smith, to be present when she was fed, Doctor Gannon announced early in the afternoon that unless Miss Paul partook of food she would die, and indicated that she would be forcibly fed if necessary.

Miss Paul was confined to the District Prison, but upon refusing to eat was removed to the Asylum Hospital for observation. This is the second time she has undergone this ordeal, having been among the suffragists who were forcibly fed in a London prison several years ago.

Miss Helen Paul came to Washington from Moorestown, N. J., yesterday to remain as close to her sister as the jail authorities permit. All of today she was at the hospital, but she left in the evening without having seen the patient.

Mrs. Harve Wiley, wife of the former Chief of the Bureau of Chemistry, and Mrs. William Kent, wife of Tariff Commissioner Kent, called upon Superintendent Zinkham to-day and laid before him the demands for which Miss Paul is striking. These demands are that Miss Paul and the six other suffragist prisoners be given the right to buy food in the prison. At present they are denied that privilege, although other prisoners enjoy it, to the extent that women are permitted to buy cakes and men are permitted to buy tobacco. The suffragists want to extend the privilege so that they may buy milk and eggs.

Miss Helen Paul, discussing her sister's condition, said: "I told Mr. Zinkham that he would kill my sister if he forcibly fed her. She has never been able to tell me about her experience in England, it was so horrible, and I know she cannot go through with it again. How can such a brutal thing be thought of when all she is asking is decent treatment for the others imprisoned with her?"

"What has she done that she should be treated like a criminal and not even as well, for they are permitted exercise and visitors and can buy food at the jail canteen. She has given her life to working for suffragists for women, I know she has bitterly opposed the Democratic Party, but I cannot believe that the President of the men he has appointed will deliberately risk her life in this way."

FIRE SUFFERERS AT SALONIKI

SALONIKI, Nov. 14.—(Staff correspondence of the Associated Press.)—There the 70,000 fire sufferers camping out in tents in and around Saloniki, with the British and French military authorities and the American Red Cross taking care of them. A tour of these relief camps gave an opportunity to see the extent of misery and want of these poor people, and the efficient relief work being done, chiefly by the British, as they have the largest stock of available supplies, with the Americans and French also doing their share.

The Doublar camps, where 2,500 people are being cared for by the British and the American Red Cross was the first one visited. It is two miles back of the city, on rising hills, which the Bulgars thought to take when they made their first rush on the city.

On the way to the camp we passed the British supply base, and had an opportunity to see the vast reserves the British have laid in, in ammunition, food and charcoal for the cold months ahead. Nothing could have shown more clearly that the British, like the French, are here to stay, in munitions along the stacks of shells extended for a mile along the road, and as far back as the eyes could see. In the engineering park there were acres of wire, curved steel trench covers, and lengths of narrow-gauge railway, ready to put together, as children conduct a toy railway. The stock of charcoal being laid in is prodigious, for there is no intention that the Tommies shall again be cold while in their trenches and dugouts. Endless trains of pack mules and camions circulated through this supply base, with the bustle and roar and overhanging cloud of dust of a colossal enterprise.

At Camp Dubular, where the refugees are quartered, a city of white tents spread out for half a mile over the level plain. They were the regulation British army tents, drawn from the big reserve base. They were laid out in regular streets and cross streets. Everything was scrupulously neat, with British soldiers on guard to see that order and prompt sanitation was maintained. "We have to do it all ourselves," exclaimed the commanding officer of the camp, "for singularly the refugees refuse to do a stroke of work for themselves. When their supply of fresh meat came we asked them to shoo the flies off it, but they would not keep their own food clean until paid for it."

The refugees are grouped in the tents by families, five to a tent, with army cots. They are a very wretched lot, who lost everything in the big fire which destroyed Saloniki. There are many old women and children and over 200 nursing babies. At the baby's nursery Red Cross nurses were bathing the infants, with boy scouts as helpers. Not a baby had died, and there is little sickness despite the unusual camp experience the infants are going through.

Food for dinner was being issued to the party passed. Each family had a card showing its number and needs, and only one member of the family is recognized in presenting these cards. Their holders were gathered in long lines, men, women, and children. The British furnished good part of their army rations, and the American Red Cross adds rice and beans.

Dr. Edward W. Ryan, head of the American Red Cross here, took the initiative in starting these camps which now represent one of the largest relief works of recent years. While the conflagration was still raging, he had set up soup-kitchens, and within twelve hours of the start of the fire he was feeding 2,500 people.

The military authorities, British and French, came in later, and the work has been kept up ever since with British, Americans and French co-operating. The problem now is what to do with this army of destitute people when the Macedonian winter sets in and the cities of tent can no longer be inhabited.

has resulted in making the people of Denmark strong advocates of co-operative marketing and, incidentally, one of the richest nations per capita in Europe. Her people are happy and contented and her agricultural products have an enviable reputation on the markets of the world.

During the past five years the Dominion department of agriculture through the livestock branch, has been instrumental, in conjunction with the provincial department, in perfecting in Prince Edward Island, a system of co-operative marketing that has entitled that province to be called the "Denmark of Canada." A large panel is devoted to Prince Edward Island, and by means of small white electric lights the location is indicated of the 51 egg circles which are now in Prince Edward Island Co-operative operating and known collectively as the five Egg and Poultry Marketing Association. During 1916 this association comprising 3,000 members, sold nearly one million dozen eggs, and twenty-five tons of poultry at a gross turnover of a quarter of a million dollars.

The system followed in collecting eggs in any particular community, delivering to the local station, shipping to the central candling station at Charlottetown, and from here to the dock for transportation by water to our large Canadian markets is illustrated by means of models. At the front of the exhibit the standards for eggs, "Specials," "Extras," "No. 1's" and "No. 2's" are illustrated by electrical means so that the effect resulting is the same as that seen in the actual candling of an egg.

As was the case last year, the eggs entered in competition are arrayed beside the exhibit and used to illustrate a large part of their agricultural products to Great Britain recognized by the trade in western

EXCELLENT EGG EXHIBIT AT FAIR

CALGARY, Nov. 14.—A very interesting and attractive exhibit is being held at the Calgary exhibition, specially prepared by the livestock branch of the Dominion department of agriculture under the supervision of the poultry division. This exhibit is entirely new and presents a somewhat different phase of the marketing end of the poultry industry to that presented last year.

The main feature in evidence is co-operation, in marketing. There are three large panels illustrating the marketing methods followed in Egypt, Denmark and Prince Edward Island. In the Egyptian scene, the "open market," where the producer sells directly to the consumer, an ideal system of marketing is shown. It is one that is practiced the world over by those producers who are fortunate enough to be located close to a market, and who may be better by keen competition in marketing all the advantages of the open market.

Denmark is illustrated because that country may be rightly called "the home of co-operation." The necessity for intensive farming operations, keen competition with surrounding countries and the necessity for exporting a large part of their agricultural products to Great Britain

Canada. The display is supplemented by demonstrations in a candling booth located nearby. The annual display of these exhibits is a part of the progressive agricultural policy instituted and encouraged by the Dominion minister of agriculture, the Honorable Martin Burrell.
