Anti-Tuberculosis Society's Meeting

and for whom the doctor has ordered nothing but good, nourishment food or a tonic to give them an appetite; but the average working woman who has to support a family of children is not able to supply sufficient nourishment, particularly from November to May. If they have to buy food, fuel and pay rent some could not exist at all if the Church Societies and Dispensary did not help them out.

I shall now give you a few examples of cases we come in contact with. In homes we have visited we came across sad cases which would touch the hearts of many, especially where the children are concerned. For example this winter in one family the children had whooping cough very bad. The mother a widow had to go out working and leave a child of nine to look after the little ones. A little boy of five, while the mother was away, got more cold and was threatened with pneumonia. The Dispensary looked after the case and the children are now on the road to recovery, but the family had to be supplied with nourishment and medicine. Whooping cough has been very bad this year, and so many of the poor have had it and severe colds. Still another case, a child and their mother were laid up in this case they were without any proper beds, or bedding and upstairs the rain was coming in. Another case four children were sick. There are the sort of places that are hard to look after. As they had to stay upstairs as the water in the cellar was touching the ground floor. Also another case, a mother and five children were all laid up with severe colds, and high fever. There was no one to do anything for them. After quite a time we secured a woman to go in and look after them. The Health Officer took charge of this case and attended them twice a day, giving them every attention possible. The father had not been working which made things harder. We notified the Church Society and the ladies assisted in providing clothing and nourishment. The Dispensary made up all their prescriptions and the City is now helping to provide nourishment. The Dispensary has all kinds of cases to straighten out. I could give you case after case of distress of that kind. The housing conditions of the poor are dreadful which makes it especially hard when sickness overtakes them.

A word or two in connection with the Tubercular patients. In one house I was called to the mother was laid up with Tuberculosis. She had a child of three years old and her husband was drinking; her sister was looking after her. She was ill for months with that dread disease and she used to look for me every morning to come. The Dispensary supplied her with light nourishment and sputum cups and anything in the way of little comforts

It seemed to help her in her suffering to feel that we were interested in her. Another case of Tuberculosis. A girl of twelve was stricken down with Tuberculosis. In this case the family used every precaution. We supplied them with literature and they tried to carry out the rules, but the child succumbed to the disease. The Dispensary tried to do everything possible for them; but many who are predisposed to Tuberculosis contract the disease through lack of nourishment. If you say fresh air, rest and nourishment are the preventives you have to see that they get these things; but with the poor this is a problem. It is hard to attend to those afflicted in their homes in the way you would like as there is so little to work with. You cannot tell them to throw up their windows when they have not sufficient clothing or only one stove in the house. I have found the sick being brought down to the kitchen with the rest of the family. If they are careful it is all right, but many times I have found the patient expectorating around the floor where a child is crawling. I had a Tubercular patient come to the Dispensary two years ago in the first stages and he said "I have been told that fresh air, nourishment and rest would cure me, but how can I rest with a wife and three children to support." I tried to help him in our small way, but I would like to have said to him "go home and take the cure, we will look after your family until your health is restored". In a short time he became a victim to the disease and his Church Society and we looked after him as best we could; but he died after a time. If we had more funds at our disposal we might have enabled him to give up work sooner and take the cure properly and his life might have been saved.

Put yourselves in the position of some of the poor that are ill not in the most pleasant surroundings, lying there day after day, just depending half the time on charity. When you are called to a house of sickness among the poor, it is not like when you are called to a home of sickness among people of comfortable circumstances. Sometimes a bed or clothing for the sick person, then nourishment and medicine. The doctors usually give their services free and they are just as attentive to the poor as to the rich. Of course there are many homes among the poor sick that are clean and tidy, but some of them have not very much to get along with. The question is asked many times, do you really go into the homes and attend to the sick. I try to do my best for them if there is no one else to do anything but when there is much sickness I have to walk from one end of the town to the other and also look after the Dispensary. There is not much time to do nursing in the homes. My work chiefly is to see that they get proper nourishment and their prescriptions made up; also that they are getting proper care. To pass on now, I think the time has come when there is a call for an extension of the work and the City or Government should come forward and pay trained nurses to take up the work of nursing the sick poor. It would be a great help for the doctors to feel that they have nurses to call on to help them out. Only those who visit the sick know just what it is like.

I am quite willing to give up my visiting and leave it to those who are more competent who could still run the Dispensary as there is plenty of work to be done there in connection with the poor sick. Some have the idea that the help we give from the Dispensary encourages laziness among the poor, but I can truly say that we try our best just to give to those who are deserving and I think that you can see that we have done some good work in the community and especially in the Tubercular work in the City. The doctors I think will tell you that Tuberculosis among the poor is not so prevalent and the people are taking more precautions and many who can read are anxious for literature. Personally I have given out a great number of books in the last two years and the sputum cup is really in demand with the Tubercular patients now when at one time you could not get them to use them. It is certainly hard in some cases to know what to do, as the lives of many poor are very desolate, if you would take the time to look into them as we have done in the past ten years.

We feel grateful to the citizens for their generous response to the Coal Fund and their great help at Christmas time and also for the way they have supported the Dispensary through the envelope collection. Last year we certainly could not have done the work without this money and when the envelope day comes around again in May, we sincerely hope you will make your contributions even larger so that we shall be able to give much more comfort to the sick and poor. I would like to make reference here to the late Dr. J. T. Jenkins Coal Fund which his family very kindly started in his memory. It was a great help to the poor and I also wish to thank the Patriot for giving its space for such a long period without cost, and all the generous contributors who helped to make it such a success, also Mr. Herbert Van Iderstine who collected over one hundred dollars from the Railway employees.

At Christmas time we had a tree for the children at the Dispensary loaded with candy, toys and other good things which were distributed by Santa Claus to one hundred and forty-six children and the mothers received orders of groceries in their homes. Thanks are due to the Clergy, Doctors, Druggists, Press Caledonian Society, Y. W. C. A., Church Societies and the Officers especially to Secretary and Treasurer of the Dispensary and the Ladies' Auxiliary for their ready help at all times and also to many people out of town who have given us good contributions, especially the Cornwall and York Institutes.

A. G. OEBLOIS.
