EARL BALDWIN PRESENTS A NEW PROBLEM TO TAILORS

The recent picture of Earl Baldwin, in full dinner rig lighting his pipe while the American Ambassador looked on in some apparent amusement sets one speculating on the possibility of changes in evening life wider than may appear at once.

The last great change of the kind was introduced by King Edward VII when, as Prince of Wales he produced a cigarette in a hall where such a thing had not been seen before and so established a new fashion which had considerable effects on the life of the time, putting an end to long sittings over the port after dinner and extinguishing the last remnants of the three-bottle age.

Earl Baldwin's innovation may strike the last blow at dining taboos. There are still rules or customs forbidding pipes in what are called "smart" restaurants, but it needs only that a few good customers should follow the Baldwin example for these things to be swept away. Another change, hardly foreseen as yet, is sartorial. King Edward's "tor-tinier" cigarette did away with the belief that men must dress themselves specially for smoking and that to enter the presence of women smelling of smoke was an outrage. Earl Baldwin, on the other hand, may put

P. W. C. NOTES

The weekly debate of Section A Debating Society was held on Saturday, November 19th. The topic debated was "Resolved that present day methods of national advertising are obnoxious. The debaters for the pro were Wilfrid Driscoll, George Willis and Emily MacLeod; the upholders of the con side were Mabel Boyer Wilson Ross and Alice Fineau. Sandy Brehaut was critic. The pro team were victorious.

In the P. W. C. notes of last week the names of the speakers in Section A debate should have read: Pro Angus Gilmore, Thelma Burke and Grace Crosby; con Urban MacKinnon, Kimball Keeping and Geraldine Darby. The debate resulted in a victory for the pro.

On Friday evening November 18th the P. W. C. Basketball team defeated the Y-Grads by a score of 13-11.

The theme of Section B debate was "Resolved that an inventor benefits mankind more than a reformer." Health Hunter, Beth Robinson and Mary Roche spoke on the pro side; and Alfred Blanchard, Margaret Doyle and Temple Hooper spoke for the con side. Lorne Adams was critic, and Kathleen MacFarlane was Recording Secretary. The con side were victorious.

The students' Sunday Evening Service, of November 20th, was held in St. James Church. Rev. Lewis Murray gave the address on the subject "Worthwhile Living". Earl Leard was chairman; and Lawrence Toombs read the scripture. The Students' Choir was directed by Mrs. Francis Holl Trainor. A very pleasing solo was rendered by Miss Marquiere Cudmore.

The Students of Prince of Wales expect to have a rink on the campus this winter for the first time in the history of the College. The government tractor has been a piece of ground of suitable size which will later be enclosed by a board wall.

Section C Debating Society debated the following subject "Resolved that mental telepathy is a farce." The pro team consisted of L. Howatt, D. Cobb and F. Donahue; whereas C. MacLeod, J. Rupp and J. McRae spoke on the con team. George MacKinnon was critic and H. Brown was Recording Secretary. The con team won the debate.

The clock back or set the tailors a difficult problem.

Of all costumes, that of "tails" is the least suited for carrying pipe and pouch. It has good many pockets, but none which can take a "bulge" happily. It is possible, therefore, that Earl Baldwin's real monument will be the "Baldwin" evening coat designed specially for pipe-smoking.—Manchester Guardian.

Winners of the big Kayser Winter Wardrobe contest have been announced by Miss Gay Walton, advertising director of Julius Kayser & Co., Ltd.

First prize, a complete $300 winter wardrobe went to Mrs. W. S. Clark of Central Onslow, Nova Scotia. Second prize, a $150 wardrobe, was won by Muriel Preston, 48 Ascot Ave., Toronto, Ontario. Madeline Adams, 54, Ave. Brown, 54, Quebec, P. Q., received the third prize, a $75 accessory outfit. Accessory prizes were won by Miss Grace Yeo, and Miss Edith H. Shaw, Charlottetown, and Mrs. L. E. G. Davies, Summerside. In each case the winners will select their wardrobes from their local stores.

The contest, which has been running since October 15th, the Kayser advertising department was literally snowed under with entries. Last week alone there were thousands a day from all over Canada.

In order to give each entry full consideration from an unbiased viewpoint, the Kayser firm who specializes in judging contests, was employed to handle this contest. The Kayser contests have always met with unusual success, ways met with unusual success, their holding have been more than gratifying both to the Kayser company and their dealers, reports

Most of us have the hoarding habit—a relic of the days when materials were scarce, articles and factory work and transportation were less developed. Haunted by the fear that we may need something, we hang on to the old picture frame, the shabby coat, the rickety chair, the nicked dish, the dusty pan and the faded dress. Dresser drawers, cupboards, bookcases, closets, attic are crowded with possessions which have outlived their usefulness for our household. Possibly passed on to another home in a different situation, they might be useful again. This is the proper time to go over every nook and cranny of the house and sort out these "in-pediments," as the Romans called the stuff with which they encumbered themselves. Become stony hearted, dismiss sentiment, consider the practical, plan, buy and roomy order and make a clearing of many things which clutter your house.

PEDICURE FACES

Dip feet in warm soapy water. Scrub with foot brush. Dry thoroughly. Remove old polish with oily remover. File toenails with rough side of emery board. Finish with smooth side.

Apply cotton moistened in oily cuticle remover about toenail to soften. Dip cotton-tipped orange-wood stick in same and work gently about sides and base. Use it also to wipe under toenail. Place cotton between toes before applying polish. Brush on with full, free-flowing strokes. Scrub toes separately. Dry thoroughly. Place nail white beneath the lics. Rub nails dry with warm towel.

BRITAIN GOES IN FOR "COMMUNITY" DANCES

Following the success of such "community" dances as the Lambeth Walk and the Palais Glide, there are several newcomers this season which bid fair to achieve popularity, says a London paper. One of these is the "Swing Waltz," soon to be launched. Based on a Tyrolean folk dance, complete with plenty of exuberant calls and thigh-slapping, it is forecast for success.

The steps are easy to learn. The inventor, Miss Ursula Littlewood, says that even the rawest ballroom beginner will find them easy to master—a necessity with modern community dances. It is danced to the music of an Austrian folk-song.

One of the steps is entitled the "Grand Get-together," and another introduces tap-dancing of a simple kind—an innovation in the ballroom.

The Dog Tax The R. C. M. P. have virtually cleaned up the 1937 dog tax and within the next few days all parties who have not paid 1938 tax and any left from 1937 will be sued before the local Justice of the Peace. In this way the Court expenses will be less and we could serve the summons one day and hold the Court the following day. In a few days we will settle a definite date on which the road-foreman will send in all returns in connection with dog tax, to this office. When remitting money to this office for dog tax, be sure you give the name of the road-foreman, otherwise we cannot accept it. DEPT. OF AGRICULTURE. L-388-11-25-21.
