MRS. ALLEN MACLEOD

The death occurred at Margate on Saturday morning Nov. 27, of Mrs. Allen Cameron in her 80th year. The deceased had been in poor health for a number of years, and her death has cast a sad gloom over the entire community. Her kind and pleasant disposition made her a host of friends both young and old. Her funeral service was held in the United Church on Monday afternoon, and was conducted by the Rev. George N. Somers. The hymns sung were "The Lord is My Shepherd," "Rock of Ages," and "Forgive with the Lord."

The pallbearers were Messrs. John Howard, Chester Howard, John Johnson, Turner Glydon, Wilbur Dennis and Harry Brown. Beside her surviving husband, she leaves to mourn five sons and two daughters. Leslie of Watoury, Conn., Benjamin Allen of Kensington, Lenzie and Sidney of Margate and Mrs. Frank Major (Evelyn) Margate, and Etta at home.

ON BEING ATTRACTIVE

You'd be more attractive if: You would make it your business to get 56 hours of sleep each week. That's an average of 8 hours a night, of course, but, by sticking to a weekly rule instead of a night-for-what-you-lose-on-Thuesday and still face each Monday without Monday morning doldrums.

You brushed your hair for five minutes every night instead of skipping three nights, then brushing fifteen minutes the fourth.

The clean-stockings-and-underwear-every-morning rules were something you wouldn't dream of modifying even twice a year.

You found a way to get to the hairdresser or shampoo at home every six days instead of every seven.

Doing setting-up exercises each morning became a fixed habit and walking short distances appealed to you more than taking taxis or street cars.

Keeping your temper in check and learning to be tolerant of the shortcomings of others made you happier than indulgence in outbursts of temper and gossip sessions.

You'd be still more attractive if: Reading truly fine books and magazines and plays became a kind of minor hobby in your life.

You would read carefully the directions on the container of every beauty preparation you buy (whether an old favorite or a new item) then use each according to those directions.

You would not tolerate chipped or cracked nail varnish for more than fifteen seconds. (Better to wear no nail polish at all than a chipped coat on one finger and perfect coats on the other nine. One bad apple spoils — oh, you know the rest.)

You looked at yourself as critically as you look at your friends. (Is my hair brushed? Are shoes shined, clothing seams, dress and coat hemlines perfectly straight?)

I really look up and span from head to foot?

You refused to get into a rut. (Try the newest lipstick shade, change your coiffure, buy pale nail lacquer if you've been wearing bright, or vice versa, go to that wonderful reducing salon all your friends are raving about.)

History of 'Royal William' Steeped In Romance

TORONTO, Dec. 5.—A piece of wooden timber from the "Royal William," first vessel to cross the Atlantic under steam, was recently seen in the harbor, lying in Irvine Harbor, Scotland, and returned to Canada, where the pioneer steamship was built more than a century ago. It was brought to Confederation Life head office here by E. W. L. Noel, Scottish manager, as a sequel to a train of events as interesting as the history of the old vessel, later purchased by the Spanish navy as the world's first steam warship.

History of the "Royal William" is steeped in romance. Not only did it play an important role in the development of steam navigation, but the vessel itself was linked closely with the life and love of John Munn, Scottish-Canadian shipbuilder, who died more than 78 years ago. Mr. Munn controlled shipyards at Irvine Harbor, Greenock, and at Wolf's Cove, Quebec, where the "Royal William" was launched in 1831 by Lady Aylem, wife of Canada's governor-general.

Munn had a ship built specially to carry his sweetheart 3,000 miles from his native Scotland to Quebec — but they never married. He died a bachelor at the age of 80.

Oddly enough, the "Royal William" sank outside Munn's ancestral home at Irvine, near the grave of the builder. The ship's ribs still can be seen at low tide, so Mr. Noel employed workmen in a small boat to saw a piece from the sunken ship, which he brought to Canada as leader of a delegation of Scottish business men.

A story about Munn and the "Royal William" appearing in the Glasgow Daily Express, united two cousins, who had not met for ten years. Mr. Noel, reading the article, sent a Confederation Life calendar to the columnist, as the 1937 calendar bore a painting depicting the building of the vessel at Quebec. Mr. Noel's envoy turned out to be the long-lost cousin, attached to Mr. Noel's Glasgow office.

Samuel Cunard was a stockholder in the Quebec and Halifax Navigation Company, for whom the "Royal William" was built. It was this vessel's successful crossing of the Atlantic in 25 days by steam which paved the way for the development of the Cunard Line. The vessel was sold in London, chartered by Portuguese as a steam transport, then sold to the Spanish government in 1834 and fitted out as a warship.

Halifax Disaster Recalled

(C.P. By Guardian's Special Wire) HALIFAX, Dec. 5.—On the eve of the 20th anniversary of the explosion which took more than 1,600 lives and caused property damage of $35,000,000, Halifax recalled with gratitude tonight the assistance sent by other provinces of Canada and by the United States as well as Nova Scotia.

Almost as soon as the world learned of the horror that had befallen this city, the work of providing relief began. One train left Truro, 63 miles away, explosion — immediately after the assistance heard of after the assistance heard of a few hours later with food and clothing aboard. A third came from the Annapolis Valley, a fourth from Saint John, N. B.

From all over Canada aid poured in. Families, towns and villages, individually or in groups, sent medical supplies and money.

The New England region of the United States and the American Red Cross responded readily in dispatching supplies accompanied by doctors and nurses.

CHICKEN CREAM

This excellent way of using up cold boiled or roast fowl makes a good luncheon dish. Remove all the scraps of meat from the fowl and chop them finely, or put through the mincer (chopping is more trouble, but leaves a better flavor). Break up the bones and put them in a saucepan with the trimmings. Cover with water or stock and simmer for an hour, together with an onion, a bay leaf, a few peppercorns, a little parsley, and a blade of mace. Strain the stock and measure off a cupful. Add to it a cup of milk, pepper, salt, and a dash of ketchup. Add two beaten eggs and the fowl, pour into a double saucepan, and stir until it thickens, without boiling. Serve on rounds of buttered toast, with a grilled tomato or two or three mushrooms on top. The dish should be well seasoned.

Lineen cloth weighing 5,000,000 pounds was shipped from Northern Ireland to the United States in the first nine months of this year.

Face Broke Out In Large, Red Pimples

Many an otherwise beautiful and attractive face; many a cheek and brow in the mould of beauty, have been sadly defaced, their attractiveness lost by the presence of skin eruptions.

Pimples are caused by the blood being in an impure condition, and are a source of embarrassment, and many of those so afflicted are ashamed to go out in company.

Burdock Blood Bitters drives out the impurities from the blood, and leaves the complexion clear, smooth and healthy.

Miss Phyllis Twiddy, Ivanhoe, Ont., writes:—"Last spring my face and back began breaking out in large, red pimples.

It was very embarrassing for me to go out in company, and people began to avoid me.

I tried several kinds of blood purifiers, but none of them seemed to help me. I heard of Burdock Blood Bitters. I took three bottles, and my friends wondered where all the pimples had disappeared to."

Report Death Of The Pachen Lama

(A. P. by Guardian's Special Wire) SHANGHAI, Dec. 4 — Reports reached here by way of India today that the Pachen Lama, the living Buddha of Tibet, died Nov. 30 in exile at Jyekundo, Western China.

His death left the mysterious "forbidding land" without either the Grand Lamas who exercised a divided spiritual and temporal absolutism over the mid-Asiatic country of 3,000,000 people.

Getting Up Nights Caused By Kidney Germs

Are you worried and annoyed by getting up nights? Do you know that the true cause may be irritating germs in the kidneys or bladder, which may also cause other distressing symptoms such as Nervousness, Leg Pains, Swollen Joints, Backache, Disinfectant, Frequent Headaches, Puffy Eyelids, Burning Passages, Loss of Appetite and Energy, so that you feel old before your time. Ordinary medicines can't help much because they don't combat such germs. The doctor's formula Cystex starts fighting kidney germs in 3 hours, checks pain, stimulates and tones the kidneys and bladder. Users often feel younger, stronger and far better in a day or so. Cystex must prove entirely satisfactory in 1 week and be exact — the medicine you need or money back — the money back agreement protects you.

Iwin Makes "Racket" Out Of Her Scientific Training

FLOSSIE, AGED 4, WHO IS GETTING SPECIAL TRAINING, MAKES REFUSING HER A NICKEL, OR ANYTHING, A PRETTY DIFFICULT PROBLEM

(New York World-Telegram)

Here at the World-Telegram would not like the doctors at Columbia Medical Center's Normal Child Development Clinic to hear about it, but Florence McInnis, aged 4, is making a good thing out of science.

"Flossie" is using a lot of knowledge she picked up from the doctors to cater to a sweet tooth. She, as everybody remembers, is the twin who was given every last advantage of scientific training at the clinic. And Margaret, her identical twin, is baffled. Margaret, of course, was the twin permitted to develop as she would, without any psychological help at the clinic.

A reporter and photographer visiting the McInnis family (who have relatives and friends in Prince Edward Island), as they moved into an apartment at 523 W. 133rd St. today and prepared to celebrate the fourth birthday of the twins who have been dedicated, in childhood, to a developmental study. The little girls, with their brother, Reginald, Jr., 5, were helping in the placement of household bric-a-brac.

She Has a Line

"Mrs. McInnis," said Florence firmly, "I want a nickel for candy. When I am big I will be a nurse and give you all my money."

"Did you hear that?" Mrs. McInnis asked, mopping her brow and sitting down on a rolled up rug. "That is how she works me all the time. The other day she came in here and told me she had a job with the gas company and had earned fifty dollars but had to give it to the firm and would get it later."

"She said when she got it she would give it to me and could she have a nickel now, please? I gave her the nickel. What can you do with a child that could roller skate at the age of fifteen months? I ask you."

Leads Other Children

Florence, her mother said, is the leader among the McInnis children. She can dance, sing, climb and talk better than the others. At the age of two she could go up a 60-degree incline in high gear and pick a cracker off the top, and she never balked at leaping off high furniture into the arms of the clinic director, Dr. Myrtle B. McGraw.

"Furthermore, she has a better figure than Margaret, can undress herself while her sister has to be

King's Family To Greet Santa At Sandringham

PLANS FOR ROYALTY'S YULETIDE RECALLS CHRISTMAS FETES OF GEORGE V AND EDWARD VII.

By MOLLIE MCGEE

Canadian Press Correspondent

LONDON, Dec. 5.—(OP)—Sandringham is to see another homey Christmas party recalling those of the late Squire "as the tenants and workmen describe George V.

Plans are under way for a royal family gathering. Their Majesties, Queen Mary, the Duke and Duchess of Gloucester and perhaps one or two close relatives, will dine together on Christmas day in the traditional family manner in the house Edward VII bought as a "home" for his lovely Queen Alexandra, the Danish Princess.

Princess Elizabeth and Princess Margaret Rose are to figure in the important ceremony of the Christmas tree and are hoping that they may be allowed this year to assist in its decoration.

Each year during King George V's reign a huge evergreen tree was cut and set up in the big Sandringham drawing room. Under its boughs, gay and glittering with tinsel and multi-colored ornaments, were piled gifts for the people of the estate. Queen Mary chose each of these nearly 200 presents herself. This year with her long Elizabeth, she has shopped with Queen Elizabeth. No octogenarian or new baby is ever forgotten.

LIKE JIGSAW PUZZLES

During her shopping tours with the Princess Royal, the Queen of Norway and Queen Elizabeth, Queen Mary bought a number of travelling things — a number of travelling things — to be sent away as gifts and also several jigsaw puzzles.

King George likes doing these cut-out picture puzzles, so do the two little princesses. Princess Margaret Rose is very quick at them and the champion of the family. Visitors to Sandringham find they are a favorite occupation for the twilight lists, just before it is time to dress for dinner.

The royal children hang up their stockings for Father Christmas to fill, just as millions of other children and this year are said to be hinting for accessories and books that go with their enthusiasm for the Girl Guide movement. Princess Elizabeth, however, has only reached the Browne stage but is anxious to share the "secrets" into which her sister and her friends are being initiated.

When Father Christmas calls on little Prince Edward and tiny Princess Alexandra of Kent he will bring them matching toys. When their mother goes shopping she buys two at a time. "I must have one for each," she tells the saleswomen. Among presents she has bought for her friends are dainty little chintz cases filled with cotton-wool for removing make-up and made to hang beside the dressing table.

When a king goes Christmas shopping it might be expected he would go to a jeweller where treasures would be shown him, but King Boris of Bulgaria went shopping unrecognized in Regent St. and bought and enamelled compact.

Many Mayfair Christmas presents this year will be home-made. The return-to-the-Victorian-customs movement which has taken hold of the younger set has brought forth "sewing bees" or weekly embroidery and knitting meetings. At one several debutantes were taught to "tat." Another group of still-unmarrieds are writing a book together, each contributing a chapter and making up the story as they go along. They have lost hope, however, of having it published before Christmas.

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 4.—Since September of Canadian National Railways have carried free approximately 450 carloads of relief supplies to drought areas in Western Canada. Inquiries were made at the railways freight office here following the remark made by J. A. Argo, chief of the tariff bureau, in a hearing in Toronto.

Shipments of fruit and vegetables were carried through without freight charges from all parts of eastern Canada, including Prince Edward Island which sent potatoes. In addition 150 carloads of apples went to Saskatchewan from the Okanagan. More than 1,500 smaller shipments of clothing, books and other supplies have been carried as well. The Canadian National has made this contribution to the welfare of the stricken people for the past five or six years.

Churches, charitable organizations gather the materials.

Amateur decorators are prone to build bookcases at either end of the fireplace, between windows or other usual places. Of course these are the only places that could be used for such purposes in some rooms, but many rooms would lend themselves well to a new arrangement.

If you have an open double door leading to the dining room, try bookcases at either side, running from floor to ceiling. They add interest to an otherwise negative space and give depth to the doorway, adding the illusion of deep walls.
