IRISH COBBLER IS FAVORITE POTATO

Tests of Potatoes Show Outstanding Advantages of this Variety

During the past four years the Commission of Conservation has been conducting illustration work in Dundas county, Ontario. One branch of the work has been that in connection with 16 farms chosen for the purpose of illustrating improved methods of farming. Among the lines of work followed have been variety tests of farm crops. The results of the tests with potatoes are very valuable. During the seasons of 1917-18-19, the Irish Cobbler and Green Mountain varieties were grown side by side and during 1920 the Dooley variety was grown in addition to these. The Irish Cobbler is now unmistakably the favorite variety in the country. Each year since they were first tried on these farms the farmers conducting the illustration work have not been able to meet the demand from the neighbors for seed.

The Irish Cobbler has given the highest average yield, has been superior from rot than any of the other varieties tried, and in an excellent table potato. One of the farmers conducting the test reports: "The Dooley and Green Mountain yielded 27 bushels each from the bag planted, while the Irish Cobblers yielded 40 bushels from the same amount of seed." Another writes: "The Dooleys and Green Mountains rotted badly and the Irish Cobblers were about all we had to fall back upon." Another says in his report: "The Cobblers are still our favourites as regards both yield and freedom from rot."

Seed grown in New Brunswick has been tried out along with home-grown seed. In most instances the New Brunswick seed gave higher yields but in some cases where the home-grown seed had been carefully selected there was little if any difference.

Varieties of proven merit should be chosen, the seed should be taken from high yielding hills and only the smooth tubers free from scab and rot used for planting. Attention to these matters will certainly mean increased yields and greater profits.—F. C. Nunnick.
