TUBING CHILDREN'S SNOW SUITS

Children's woolen snow suits suffer strenuous treatment. If they are washable, an occasional good tubbing keeps them fresh and shiny. Any tears or thin spots should be mended or reinforced before they are washed. Use a rich lather of lukewarm suds, keeping the suds active and the water the same temperature during the entire process. If necessary use a second suds bath. Rinse in three changes of clear water, pressing, not wringing, the water out gently after each rinse. Roll the garment in a Turkish towel to blot up excess moisture, then hang over a line to dry in a sheltered, shady spot. Shake occasionally during drying and brush when thoroughly dry to fluff up the nap if it is not of a smooth surface woolen.

Rev. R. J. Campbell Padre of Grace Church Is Dead

The Rev. R. J. Campbell, 65, rector emeritus of Grace Church, died at his home, Argyle, on Carroll road, at 6:45 p.m. Monday.

For a time following his retirement, with less drain on his energies, the minister showed a slight improvement. But with each gain came a new setback. A stroke on Jan. 16 resulted in partial paralysis of the left side.

Funeral services will be held at 10 a.m. Thursday in Grace church. The Rev. Dr. Harry S. Longley, Episcopal bishop of Iowa, will preside at the services, which will be in charge of the Very Rev. Dr. Ronald F. Philbrook, dean of Davenport, at the expressed request of Father Campbell.

Although failing health and slight disability made it impractical for Father Campbell, or "The Padre" as he was affectionately known, to mingle downtown with his friends to any extent or about town, he was not without contact with those who found their way to "Argyle," his former summer home in the hills overlooking Kenwood which had been removed and re-located for an all-year residence.

Not strong enough to tramp through the hills and wade deep snows as had been his wont in earlier years when he gloried in woodchopping and outings with congenial friends who joined him for steak fries or oyster stews, Father Campbell in recent months had enjoyed drives through the countryside where the weather was favorable and chats with friends at his own fireside. By special dispensation he had a private chapel in his home.

Long after the doctor ordered Father Campbell to be sparing of his energies he insisted on saying the 7 a.m. mass while rector of the Church of Our Lady of Grace. On occasions a few friends would join him for the funeral service of a friend or the relatives of someone he held dear. At such times he would, if the spirit prompted, depart from his home to attend the last rites. It was, he explained, the only opportunity he might have of speaking to some of the business men present around him whom he loved. It was, he confessed that they had joined Grace church because they wanted Father Campbell to deliver the sermon at their own funeral should they precede him in death.

This minister's influence long extended far beyond the confines of his parish, and of his personal faith. Men of many denominations, and men of no special religion, loved him for it. Some have even confessed that they had joined Grace church because they wanted Father Campbell to deliver the sermon at their own funeral should they precede him in death.

A delightful companion, rare raconteur, Father Campbell invariably drew a group around him to laugh and joke when he dropped into the Elks club in the days of his good health. Politics, art, travel and humorous stories of which he had an inexhaustible fund were interspersed with puns at a pipe that he was always lighting. Magnetism that drew people around him at the club also made him a welcome visitor in the homes of his friends in the city as well as in some of the humblest cottages. In both he had close friends.

Local Red Cross To Welcome National Chairman

The Red Cross in Charlottetown is looking forward to the visit of Mrs. W. R. Campbell, National Chairman of the Women's War Work Committee, who will arrive in Charlottetown on Monday night and will remain over Tuesday.

Mrs. Campbell lives in Windsor, Ontario, her husband, Wallace R. Campbell, is President of the Ford Motor Company in Canada) and is visiting all the provinces, beginning with the Maritimes. She will spend this week-end in Halifax and will go to Saint John after leaving this Province. During Mrs. Campbell's tour she will meet war workers and confer with the heads of all the different Societies and groups and inspect the work being done. For many years she has been a member of the National Council of the Women's War Work Committee and is admirably fitted for the tremendous task she is so efficiently handling.

While in Charlottetown, Mrs. Campbell will be at Red Cross Headquarters where she will meet the workers and inspect the work-room and work. On Tuesday night a meeting, open to all who are interested in attending the meeting at the Charlottetown Hotel.

Work at Red Cross Headquarters will be carried on as usual on "Tuesday." Finished supplies will be received and materials distributed. It is hoped that it will be a representative day, and that the public will show interest in the general work of the Red Cross.

Each one is born with definite capacities into a social order of which he becomes a member and plays a part." Dr. F. W. Patterson, President of Acadia University said in an address at the Baptist Church Hall last night. The talk was sponsored by the Philathena Class.

Rev. H. L. Denton presided and introduced the speaker. Dr. Patterson gave a very instructive and interesting address entitled, "Limping Through Life." He said that each individual must be morally and religiously developed to play a normal part in life. He warned against the danger of the behaviour of different individuals. Each one comes into the world with tendencies which have been planted years before his birth. The freest minded, he stated, was the greatest example as in it's purest forms it is essentially hereditary.

A social problem of the first magnitude exists in communities where the intelligence quotient is low, he said.

A man is handicapped, not from who he has descended but from the heredity that he inherits, he claimed, and added that if a person knew the tendency of his heredity he could live in a manner to lessen the danger.

Early environment is not everything but plays a large part in the moulding of a character, he continued, and toil and discipline are necessary in the lives of young people to teach them success.

He warned against excessive discipline and the tendency of parents praising one of their children in the presence of another. This tends to create an inferiority complex in the personality of the one slighted. "It is a crime to discuss the weakness of a child in the presence of that child," he said.

Dr. Patterson then discussed the economic environment and its relation to human beings. Some men do not want to work, he said, while some have never had an opportunity.

The condition of the body must be guarded in order to have a Christian outlook on life, the speaker maintained. "It is not possible for a tired man to have a Christian outlook on life," he added. Poisons from fatigue weaken a person and breaks down his resistance. He claimed that the nervous tension under which people work done is responsible for fatigue.

The speaker denounced the excessive use of stimulants, such as alcohol. "People drink to drown their troubles and their troubles swim," he said. An alcoholic cannot gain a high degree of efficiency.

Dr. Patterson's advice to the workers was "don't worry about anything you cannot help—don't worry about anything you can't—worry about anything else." "Because" he said, "nine out of ten things you worry about never happen."

Most of life's failures result from a lack of thoroughness and allowing ourselves to become easily discouraged, he continued.

He warned young people against acquiring the idea that they are geniuses and that the world owes them a living.

Dr. Patterson advised the young people to cultivate the niceties of life if they would be a success. "Conventions are necessary," he claimed.

In his concluding remarks, the speaker warned his audience against leaving God out of their lives.

NEWSY NATURE NOTES

By Stuart L. Thompson

THE BLITHE BUNTING OF THE BRAKE

Spring in the bird world without the Song Sparrow is unthinkable. As early as mid-March this cheerful little songster has returned from the south and soon announces his presence. He is not in his gayly colored plumage, but in a drab, brownish-buff, a single feather which can be easily distinguished from the rest of the plumage. He is one of the earliest of our spring birds. Long before we are sure that winter is on the wane, before most flocks are able to see the spring birds, the Song Sparrow has returned and simply puts in appearance in some sheltered nook open to the March sunshine. The tiny grip of winter may be still upon the fields, the snow may be still deep in the woods; but here in this cozy valley the southern side of the hill is bare and brown, and the earth soft. In the trickling rills from the snow patches which may yet be seen, there is promise of better days to come. It is here the sweet chant of the Song Sparrow begins upon the air.

It is not a pretentious song. There is nothing in the music of its simple notes that quite equals the rich notes of the gayly-colored Goldfinch. Many a bird,
