

"WE MUST WIN THE WAR, NOTHING ELSE MATTERS" ---Premier Arsenault at Third Anniversary Celebration

THE CHARLOTTETOWN GUARDIAN

MORNING DAILY

CHARLOTTETOWN, CANADA, SATURDAY, OCTOBER 20, 1917

$2.50 Per Year (Mailed) in Advance in Canada and $3.00
$3.50 Per Year (Delivered) in Advance for U. S.

Weekly (Now Evening Daily) 1887.
Morning Daily Founded 1891

HAPPENINGS OF THE WEEK

Lady Maude Cavendish, whose marriage to Captain Mackintosh took place on Saturday, Nov. 3rd., will some day have an interesting home at May Hall, the "Mackintosh's" place in Inverness-shire. The chief features of the house are the hall and library. Over the mantelpiece in the hall are some curious relics of Prince Charles's time, and in the library stands the table on which the "Prince" dined before Culloden. Also in the library are some famous swords, two of which are said to have belonged to royal ancestors. One of these was given by Pope Leo X to King James V, father of Queen Mary Stuart. The gold watch of the latter is also preserved in the library. James V. presented the sword to the "Mackintosh" and the other belonged to Charles I, the last King born in Scotland. Every morning the piper at May Hall marches around the house playing "Johnny Cope" and he does the same after dinner.

His Excellency the Governor General and party, who are spending the week in Halifax, are being very widely entertained. One of the pleasant events of the visit was the presentation to Senator and Mrs. Dennis of the Military Cross awarded to the late Captain Eric Dennis, killed at Vimy Ridge, and in the winning of which the young officer enjoyed the unique distinction of being recommended three times within thirty days. The presentation took place at government House, by His Excellency the Governor-General. The medal had been forwarded to the Duke of Devonshire by the British war authorities. The ceremony was private, those present being confined to members of the family of Senator Dennis and Governor, Mrs., Miss and Captain Eric Grant.

This has been a busy week, and so social duties were postponed largely, as everyone who could attend the different meetings of the Social Service Congress which closed on Thursday night after a most interesting and profitable session. The visiting speakers, all experts in their lines, included Canon Tucker, Rev. Dr. Shearer, Rev. T. Albert Moore, Dr. Hastings H. Hart, of New York, and Mr. Alex. Johnson of Philadelphia, besides numerous local speakers of prominence.

Then there were the special meeting in the Salvation Army barracks, from which great good is anticipated as the visiting speakers, Adjutant and Mrs. Kendall, are known the Dominion over as experts in the great work of the Salvation Army.

The special pictures put on at the Prince Edward Theatre were also big drawing cards so that outside interests were not wanting as entertainment for young and old.

Viscountess Gort, whose husband is a wealthy member of the British peerage, has entered the millinery business in London. Her profits will be given to the Red Cross.

The famous midget, Countess Magi, better known as Mrs. Tom Thumb, whose husband visited here in the early sixties, is still active at the age of 75 years.

No invitations whatever were issued for the wedding of Miss Abbott and His Grace Archbishop Worrell, which took place at high noon on Thursday, the Bishop of Qu'Appelle, Dr. Harding and Dean Lwyd officiating. Following the ceremony the Archbishop and Mrs. Worrell left immediately for the wedding trip, anticipating an absence of about one month. During the past week Miss Abbott has received many deeply gratifying tokens of the regard of friends.

The news was made public this week by cable that Capt. (Dr.) Andrew McPhail is returning shortly from France on a furlough and will visit this province.

There was quite a number of American sailors and officers in the city for a few days this week. That the visitors enjoyed their trip ashore was evidenced by their gay spirits as they patronized the movies and different restaurants.

Mrs. H. H. Beer, who has been on a short visit to Mrs. W. W. Clark, left

GENERAL ADVANCE IN NEW YORK FUR PRICES

(Special to the Guardian)
NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—Special Russian Sables and Ermine were among the furs put under the hammer during the fourth day of the annual fall sale that is now going on here. The best price obtained for the former was one hundred and fifty two dollars. The best price brought by Ermine pelts was two dollars and fifty six cents. Fine dark Raccoon sold at six dollars and seventy cents each while the best price paid for Beaver was twelve dollars and twenty five cents. Compared with the March sale today's prices showed this way. Civet cat ten per cent higher, Ermine thirty per cent higher, American Opossum fifteen per cent higher, Australian Opossum ten per cent higher, Beaver fifty per cent higher, Northern Wildcat fifty per cent higher, Southwestern Wildcat fifteen per cent higher, Northern Raccoon same, Southwestern Raccoon five per cent higher, and Russian Sable full March prices.

WHERE SINCEREST FORM OF FLATTERY FAILED

Young Aviator Imitates Professional and is Placed Under Arrest.

(Canadian Press Dispatch)
TORONTO, Oct. 17.—It does not always pay to be a hero. To practise the sincerest form of flattery is sometimes disastrous. Yesterday afternoon Major A. W. Bishop, V. C., D. S. O., M. C., one of the most distinguished aviators in the world, visited Leaside Camp and took a flight in one of the instruction machines. In almost no time he had mastered the machine and then gave a thrilling exhibition of the most dare devil stunts, looping the loop figure eight and various other marvellous manifestations of his ability to conquer the air. In the air, meanwhile, in another machine, was a cadet, who had flown very little in his young life. Seeing such an auspicious example he, too, began to flirt with death. Everything that Major Bishop had done the cadet also accomplished. The spectators held their several breaths in awe but no accident occurred. The major and the cadet landed safely. Major Bishop was congratulated. The cadet was placed under close arrest for daring to deviate in the slightest degree from the instructions given to him before he ascended.

THREE HUNDRED SHIPS ARE BOUGHT BY ALLIES

LONDON, Oct. 17.—The Entente Allies have increased their shipping, according to the Times, through the acquisition by the Royal Mail Steam Packet Company, and the Lamport and Holt Line, of the controlling interest in the Argentine Navigation Company, which has a capital of $10,000,000 and owns more than 300 vessels. Three of the leading French lines and one Italian shipping company participated in the transactions.

Miss Elaine Aitken is being welcomed home from a pleasant visit with friends in different parts of Nova Scotia.

Mrs. Goodwill has joined her husband, Major Goodwill in Ottawa, this week, after visiting her people in Ontario. Major Goodwill is attached to the Headquarters staff.

Many former friends were deeply grieved to hear this week of the death in Victoria, B. C., of Mrs. (Captain) Philip Musgrave, who, during her residence here, was a general favorite with all.

The golf members are still continuing to play and tea is being served each fine Saturday afternoon.

A somewhat surprising prevalence in the craze of coral pink is displayed in the models of afternoon gowns. Crepe de chene and Georgette crepe are in this particular shade in straight pleated frocks, combined with embroideries, and velvets in boldly contrasting hue, old blue and golden brown being the favorites. Beads and Oriental embroideries in soft colorings are also popular.

FAIR PRICES FOR POTATOES ARE TO RULE, SAYS HANNA

OTTAWA, Oct. 17.—Operations of the powerful combine which it has been from time to time alleged is in control of the potato market in Eastern Canada will be put an end to when regulations now being drafted by the Food Controller are put into effect. The members of it will have no chance to carry out the plans they are reputed to have carefully laid.

Hon. Mr. Hanna today stated in The Journal that if such a combine was at work he had no knowledge of the fact. He declined to express an opinion as to whether it were possible for such an organization to control the market under existing conditions. However, he did state, with emphasis, that such a circumstance could not prevail once the plans now being arranged were completed.

The would-be profiteers will have little opportunity to dispose of the stocks which they are said to have accumulated, in the hope of selling them at their own prices, and on the understanding that not one single peck of the large quantity they are alleged to control would not be disposed of until the middle of winter.

The allegations recently made respecting a potato combine have gone so far as to have it that a few members of the Federal Parliament are prime movers in the combine, the members of which are declared to be bound by agreement as to price, etc. In the case of one city alone, they are said to have secured over thirty-five buildings for storage of the potatoes bought up from the producers.

While arrangements have not yet been entirely completed, the general outline of the machinery by means of which Mr. Hanna proposes to "get at" any such illegal organizations has been drafted, and the plan is likely to be put into operation before another week has passed.

Dealers throughout Canada will be required to obtain licenses before they can handle potatoes, and one of the conditions of issuance of such permits by the Food Controller will be the understanding that each one to whom a license is issued will return to Mr. Hanna's office at stated periods full details of his operations.

AUSTRIAN SHIP GIVES UP WITHOUT A SHOT

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—According to despatches, the Italian navy department has announced the capture of an Austrian torpedo boat destroyer in the Adriatic. The Austrian ship surrendered without firing a shot. The Italian newspaper "Idea Nazionale" says this episode recalls the conduct of the crew of the Italian destroyer Turbide, which, having been surrendered by enemy destroyers, fought to the last shot, and then was sunk by its own men rather than surrender. The newspaper contrasted the two incidents, and declared they illustrated the difference in the morale of the Austrian and the Italian navies. Advice from Madrid state that a Spanish mission has just returned from a visit to the Italian front, and that its members expressed their wonder over the Italian military achievements, which they declared, surpassed the imagination. They also emphasized the importance of Italy's participation in the war.

TROUBLE IN STORE FOR U. S. OFFICERS

(Canadian Press Dispatch)
WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—The Colonel of a New England National Guard regiment and the Lieutenant Colonel of a western National Guard regiment probably will be court-martialed for cabling to the Governors of their respective states that a New England regiment and a western regiment had arrived in France. An investigation is being made by the War Department, and it was made known last night that the Navy Department had begun an enquiry to ascertain why the American cable censors passed the two despatches without notifying the authorities in Washington. It was from the New England Governor that the department learned of the Colonel's cablegram.

The War Department was concerned when it learned last night that the Governor of the New England state had given the message from the colonel for publication. Officials were indignant, as they had requested the Governor not to make public the news contained in the cablegram. It was said this request had been made by both the department and George Creel, chairman of the committee of public information, and that the objections had been laid before the Governor in the most positive way.

The Governor was told, it was said, that when the commanding general of the division to which the colonel was likely to be attached learned of his action, the colonel was likely to be detached immediately and perhaps ordered to trial by court-martial. Officials pointed out that the New England regiment and the western regiment were in the federal service and were not in any way under the command of the Governors of the states concerned.

QUEBEC LINES UP FOR UNION GOVT

MONTREAL, Oct. 17.—Quebec is falling in line with the Union Government. Realizing that Sir Wilfrid Laurier's leadership is isolating Quebec from Confederation, the best elements in both parties, who have not been heard in the political clamor from the French-Canadian province are now asserting themselves, and it is stated on good authority that there will be Union Government Candidates in every riding in the province, about half Liberals and half Conservative.

Among the prominent French Liberals who it is stated are preparing to support the new Government are Hon. J. L. Perron, member of the Quebec Legislative Council, and a noted Montreal lawyer, who will probably contest one of the French Montreal seats. He is also Speaker of the Quebec Legislature and one of the most brilliant of the younger Quebec politicians, will run in Barmier, against J. A. Barrett, who will run as a Nationalist.

There is a rumor that Mr. Perron, in the event of his election, will enter the Government as Quebec's third representative. Minard's Liniment cures garget in cows.

EQUAL OPPORTUNITIES FOR ALL CONTESTANTS

Grand Prize Campaign Places No Restrictions. Voting By Ballot And Coupons. Now is The Time to Enter.

Are you participating in The CHARLOTTETOWN GUARDIAN'S Grand Prize Campaign? If you have not already entered your application, you should do it at once. Call personally at the campaign department and talk over the plan and its details. Everyone's opportunity is equal today to secure one of the big prizes.

Votes are issued for new or old subscribers' payments, according to the schedule of votes. The vote ballots issued on subscription payments may be held back in reserve or voted, just as the candidate desires. Candidates are allowed the privilege of giving receipts for subscriptions on the blank furnished by The GUARDIAN for any money they might get from their friends on subscription to The GUARDIAN.

Or if subscribers desire, they can remit direct to the campaign department, stating to whom they desire the votes credited, and credit in every case will be given to the candidates selected by the patron, or the votes will be returned to the subscriber. There are two ways of securing votes in this campaign. One way is to clip the vote from the papers, fill out as directed and send to the campaign department. You can have credit for any number of these coupons providing the coupons are not over seven days old. They must be sent or brought to this department. The other way is to vote by ballot. Ballots can be secured only on payments for subscriptions. These payments may be from persons taking The GUARDIAN, or from new subscribers. Money must accompany all of these orders. The number of votes given on subscription payments depends entirely upon the money paid, according to the voting schedule that appears in the prospectus or on the back of subscription blanks.

STOP THINKING AND ACT
A large number of people who are "Just thinking it over" about sending in their names should stop procrastinating and get busy while the opportunity is at its best, as they may regret their tardiness.

You do not have to live in any special district; you do not have to be a subscriber to The GUARDIAN. In fact, there are no strict qualifications to comply with should you care to enter. The only restriction covering the contest is that the candidate be a respectable resident of one of the districts covered by the Campaign.

The house of Willis & Co., Limited, Montreal, needs no introduction to Canadians, for it is one of the oldest, most respected and wealthiest in the piano business in the Dominion. This name is very closely associated with the musical history of Canada, the firm having been purveyors to Royalty the aristocratic families of this country, the leading educational and religious institutions and the public generally for over forty years.

Much unsolicited testimony has been received from purchasers of musical instruments, and abundant evidence of the high standard of their pianos is expressed in thousands of letters from the musical profession, religious and educational institutions, and their customers generally from all parts of the world.

The name "Willis" upon a piano, therefore, means much to the purchaser, as it is an assurance of satisfaction and a guarantee of the greatest value, being backed by the very high financial standing of the institution, as well as the honorable methods for which the firm has won a distinction.

Willis Pianos are to be found in the best homes of Canada, and in the leading musical colleges and other important institutions.

Willis Pianos are sold in nearly every town from the Atlantic to the Pacific, Mr. A. E. Toombs being the local agent at Charlottetown, from whom we purchased this magnificent instrument. So young ladies those who want a fine piano get busy for this is your chance.

Phone, write or come to the Campaign Manager and he will give you full particulars, just how you can win one of the prizes offered by The Guardian.

cated, enthusiastic, and full of patriotism; the latter equally patriotic, but of a lower social standing—mostly peasants. After a while the women got slack, until the colonel tried to stop the practice. Then nearly all the Women, about two-thirds of the battalion went off on their own. The Ladies stuck to it and to their ideals and fought well with the 14th Regiment. They were used partly as troops in the firing line and partly as ammunition carriers. According to their young colonel, they lost 4 killed and 17 wounded, and 32 have since left suffering from shock. There are fewer than 80 now left of the Ladies. I had quite a good talk with the colonel, and found after about ten minutes that she was quite a young girl and very anxious to hear all about Petrograd. She was evidently in a state of nerves and excitement, was recovering from fever, and had a high temperature. They received no instructions in the use of their arms and knew nothing of musketry, and yet here I found them less than 500 yards from the Germans.

A general told me that two more battalions of women were coming to the front, and although he thought them splendid and true patriots, yet he did not want them, as they caused difficulties, and he would rather be without them.

THE VIEWS OF THE VARIOUS OFFICERS varied considerably as to the advantages of this movement. Many sneered, and many approved and said they were very noble creatures to try to show the men what their duty to the country is, but nearly all were ashamed to think such a movement necessary.

The battalion, as originally formed, numbered some 500 and contained two distinct elements, which for facility of reference I will call Ladies and Women—the former well edu-

ated, enthusiastic, and full of patriotism; the latter equally patriotic, but of a lower social standing—mostly peasants. After a while the women got slack, until the colonel tried to stop the practice. Then nearly all the Women, about two-thirds of the battalion went off on their own. The Ladies stuck to it and to their ideals and fought well with the 14th Regiment. They were used partly as troops in the firing line and partly as ammunition carriers. According to their young colonel, they lost 4 killed and 17 wounded, and 32 have since left suffering from shock. There are fewer than 80 now left of the Ladies. I had quite a good talk with the colonel, and found after about ten minutes that she was quite a young girl and very anxious to hear all about Petrograd. She was evidently in a state of nerves and excitement, was recovering from fever, and had a high temperature. They received no instructions in the use of their arms and knew nothing of musketry, and yet here I found them less than 500 yards from the Germans.

A general told me that two more battalions of women were coming to the front, and although he thought them splendid and true patriots, yet he did not want them, as they caused difficulties, and he would rather be without them.

THE VIEWS OF THE VARIOUS OFFICERS varied considerably as to the advantages of this movement. Many sneered, and many approved and said they were very noble creatures to try to show the men what their duty to the country is, but nearly all were ashamed to think such a movement necessary.

The battalion, as originally formed, numbered some 500 and contained two distinct elements, which for facility of reference I will call Ladies and Women—the former well edu-

ated, enthusiastic, and full of patriotism; the latter equally patriotic, but of a lower social standing—mostly peasants. After a while the women got slack, until the colonel tried to stop the practice. Then nearly all the Women, about two-thirds of the battalion went off on their own. The Ladies stuck to it and to their ideals and fought well with the 14th Regiment. They were used partly as troops in the firing line and partly as ammunition carriers. According to their young colonel, they lost 4 killed and 17 wounded, and 32 have since left suffering from shock. There are fewer than 80 now left of the Ladies. I had quite a good talk with the colonel, and found after about ten minutes that she was quite a young girl and very anxious to hear all about Petrograd. She was evidently in a state of nerves and excitement, was recovering from fever, and had a high temperature. They received no instructions in the use of their arms and knew nothing of musketry, and yet here I found them less than 500 yards from the Germans.

A general told me that two more battalions of women were coming to the front, and although he thought them splendid and true patriots, yet he did not want them, as they caused difficulties, and he would rather be without them.

THE VIEWS OF THE VARIOUS OFFICERS varied considerably as to the advantages of this movement. Many sneered, and many approved and said they were very noble creatures to try to show the men what their duty to the country is, but nearly all were ashamed to think such a movement necessary.

The battalion, as originally formed, numbered some 500 and contained two distinct elements, which for facility of reference I will call Ladies and Women—the former well edu-

ated, enthusiastic, and full of patriotism; the latter equally patriotic, but of a lower social standing—mostly peasants. After a while the women got slack, until the colonel tried to stop the practice. Then nearly all the Women, about two-thirds of the battalion went off on their own. The Ladies stuck to it and to their ideals and fought well with the 14th Regiment. They were used partly as troops in the firing line and partly as ammunition carriers. According to their young colonel, they lost 4 killed and 17 wounded, and 32 have since left suffering from shock. There are fewer than 80 now left of the Ladies. I had quite a good talk with the colonel, and found after about ten minutes that she was quite a young girl and very anxious to hear all about Petrograd. She was evidently in a state of nerves and excitement, was recovering from fever, and had a high temperature. They received no instructions in the use of their arms and knew nothing of musketry, and yet here I found them less than 500 yards from the Germans.

A general told me that two more battalions of women were coming to the front, and although he thought them splendid and true patriots, yet he did not want them, as they caused difficulties, and he would rather be without them.

THE VIEWS OF THE VARIOUS OFFICERS varied considerably as to the advantages of this movement. Many sneered, and many approved and said they were very noble creatures to try to show the men what their duty to the country is, but nearly all were ashamed to think such a movement necessary.

The battalion, as originally formed, numbered some 500 and contained two distinct elements, which for facility of reference I will call Ladies and Women—the former well edu-

ated, enthusiastic, and full of patriotism; the latter equally patriotic, but of a lower social standing—mostly peasants. After a while the women got slack, until the colonel tried to stop the practice. Then nearly all the Women, about two-thirds of the battalion went off on their own. The Ladies stuck to it and to their ideals and fought well with the 14th Regiment. They were used partly as troops in the firing line and partly as ammunition carriers. According to their young colonel, they lost 4 killed and 17 wounded, and 32 have since left suffering from shock. There are fewer than 80 now left of the Ladies. I had quite a good talk with the colonel, and found after about ten minutes that she was quite a young girl and very anxious to hear all about Petrograd. She was evidently in a state of nerves and excitement, was recovering from fever, and had a high temperature. They received no instructions in the use of their arms and knew nothing of musketry, and yet here I found them less than 500 yards from the Germans.

A general told me that two more battalions of women were coming to the front, and although he thought them splendid and true patriots, yet he did not want them, as they caused difficulties, and he would rather be without them.

THE VIEWS OF THE VARIOUS OFFICERS varied considerably as to the advantages of this movement. Many sneered, and many approved and said they were very noble creatures to try to show the men what their duty to the country is, but nearly all were ashamed to think such a movement necessary.

The battalion, as originally formed, numbered some 500 and contained two distinct elements, which for facility of reference I will call Ladies and Women—the former well edu-

ated, enthusiastic, and full of patriotism; the latter equally patriotic, but of a lower social standing—mostly peasants. After a while the women got slack, until the colonel tried to stop the practice. Then nearly all the Women, about two-thirds of the battalion went off on their own. The Ladies stuck to it and to their ideals and fought well with the 14th Regiment. They were used partly as troops in the firing line and partly as ammunition carriers. According to their young colonel, they lost 4 killed and 17 wounded, and 32 have since left suffering from shock. There are fewer than 80 now left of the Ladies. I had quite a good talk with the colonel, and found after about ten minutes that she was quite a young girl and very anxious to hear all about Petrograd. She was evidently in a state of nerves and excitement, was recovering from fever, and had a high temperature. They received no instructions in the use of their arms and knew nothing of musketry, and yet here I found them less than 500 yards from the Germans.

A general told me that two more battalions of women were coming to the front, and although he thought them splendid and true patriots, yet he did not want them, as they caused difficulties, and he would rather be without them.

THE VIEWS OF THE VARIOUS OFFICERS varied considerably as to the advantages of this movement. Many sneered, and many approved and said they were very noble creatures to try to show the men what their duty to the country is, but nearly all were ashamed to think such a movement necessary.

The battalion, as originally formed, numbered some 500 and contained two distinct elements, which for facility of reference I will call Ladies and Women—the former well edu-

ated, enthusiastic, and full of patriotism; the latter equally patriotic, but of a lower social standing—mostly peasants. After a while the women got slack, until the colonel tried to stop the practice. Then nearly all the Women, about two-thirds of the battalion went off on their own. The Ladies stuck to it and to their ideals and fought well with the 14th Regiment. They were used partly as troops in the firing line and partly as ammunition carriers. According to their young colonel, they lost 4 killed and 17 wounded, and 32 have since left suffering from shock. There are fewer than 80 now left of the Ladies. I had quite a good talk with the colonel, and found after about ten minutes that she was quite a young girl and very anxious to hear all about Petrograd. She was evidently in a state of nerves and excitement, was recovering from fever, and had a high temperature. They received no instructions in the use of their arms and knew nothing of musketry, and yet here I found them less than 500 yards from the Germans.

A general told me that two more battalions of women were coming to the front, and although he thought them splendid and true patriots, yet he did not want them, as they caused difficulties, and he would rather be without them.

THE VIEWS OF THE VARIOUS OFFICERS varied considerably as to the advantages of this movement. Many sneered, and many approved and said they were very noble creatures to try to show the men what their duty to the country is, but nearly all were ashamed to think such a movement necessary.

The battalion, as originally formed, numbered some 500 and contained two distinct elements, which for facility of reference I will call Ladies and Women—the former well edu-

ated, enthusiastic, and full of patriotism; the latter equally patriotic, but of a lower social standing—mostly peasants. After a while the women got slack, until the colonel tried to stop the practice. Then nearly all the Women, about two-thirds of the battalion went off on their own. The Ladies stuck to it and to their ideals and fought well with the 14th Regiment. They were used partly as troops in the firing line and partly as ammunition carriers. According to their young colonel, they lost 4 killed and 17 wounded, and 32 have since left suffering from shock. There are fewer than 80 now left of the Ladies. I had quite a good talk with the colonel, and found after about ten minutes that she was quite a young girl and very anxious to hear all about Petrograd. She was evidently in a state of nerves and excitement, was recovering from fever, and had a high temperature. They received no instructions in the use of their arms and knew nothing of musketry, and yet here I found them less than 500 yards from the Germans.

A general told me that two more battalions of women were coming to the front, and although he thought them splendid and true patriots, yet he did not want them, as they caused difficulties, and he would rather be without them.

THE VIEWS OF THE VARIOUS OFFICERS varied considerably as to the advantages of this movement. Many sneered, and many approved and said they were very noble creatures to try to show the men what their duty to the country is, but nearly all were ashamed to think such a movement necessary.

The battalion, as originally formed, numbered some 500 and contained two distinct elements, which for facility of reference I will call Ladies and Women—the former well edu-

ated, enthusiastic, and full of patriotism; the latter equally patriotic, but of a lower social standing—mostly peasants. After a while the women got slack, until the colonel tried to stop the practice. Then nearly all the Women, about two-thirds of the battalion went off on their own. The Ladies stuck to it and to their ideals and fought well with the 14th Regiment. They were used partly as troops in the firing line and partly as ammunition carriers. According to their young colonel, they lost 4 killed and 17 wounded, and 32 have since left suffering from shock. There are fewer than 80 now left of the Ladies. I had quite a good talk with the colonel, and found after about ten minutes that she was quite a young girl and very anxious to hear all about Petrograd. She was evidently in a state of nerves and excitement, was recovering from fever, and had a high temperature. They received no instructions in the use of their arms and knew nothing of musketry, and yet here I found them less than 500 yards from the Germans.

A general told me that two more battalions of women were coming to the front, and although he thought them splendid and true patriots, yet he did not want them, as they caused difficulties, and he would rather be without them.

THE VIEWS OF THE VARIOUS OFFICERS varied considerably as to the advantages of this movement. Many sneered, and many approved and said they were very noble creatures to try to show the men what their duty to the country is, but nearly all were ashamed to think such a movement necessary.

The battalion, as originally formed, numbered some 500 and contained two distinct elements, which for facility of reference I will call Ladies and Women—the former well edu-

ated, enthusiastic, and full of patriotism; the latter equally patriotic, but of a lower social standing—mostly peasants. After a while the women got slack, until the colonel tried to stop the practice. Then nearly all the Women, about two-thirds of the battalion went off on their own. The Ladies stuck to it and to their ideals and fought well with the 14th Regiment. They were used partly as troops in the firing line and partly as ammunition carriers. According to their young colonel, they lost 4 killed and 17 wounded, and 32 have since left suffering from shock. There are fewer than 80 now left of the Ladies. I had quite a good talk with the colonel, and found after about ten minutes that she was quite a young girl and very anxious to hear all about Petrograd. She was evidently in a state of nerves and excitement, was recovering from fever, and had a high temperature. They received no instructions in the use of their arms and knew nothing of musketry, and yet here I found them less than 500 yards from the Germans.

A general told me that two more battalions of women were coming to the front, and although he thought them splendid and true patriots, yet he did not want them, as they caused difficulties, and he would rather be without them.

THE VIEWS OF THE VARIOUS OFFICERS varied considerably as to the advantages of this movement. Many sneered, and many approved and said they were very noble creatures to try to show the men what their duty to the country is, but nearly all were ashamed to think such a movement necessary.

The battalion, as originally formed, numbered some 500 and contained two distinct elements, which for facility of reference I will call Ladies and Women—the former well edu-

ated, enthusiastic, and full of patriotism; the latter equally patriotic, but of a lower social standing—mostly peasants. After a while the women got slack, until the colonel tried to stop the practice. Then nearly all the Women, about two-thirds of the battalion went off on their own. The Ladies stuck to it and to their ideals and fought well with the 14th Regiment. They were used partly as troops in the firing line and partly as ammunition carriers. According to their young colonel, they lost 4 killed and 17 wounded, and 32 have since left suffering from shock. There are fewer than 80 now left of the Ladies. I had quite a good talk with the colonel, and found after about ten minutes that she was quite a young girl and very anxious to hear all about Petrograd. She was evidently in a state of nerves and excitement, was recovering from fever, and had a high temperature. They received no instructions in the use of their arms and knew nothing of musketry, and yet here I found them less than 500 yards from the Germans.

A general told me that two more battalions of women were coming to the front, and although he thought them splendid and true patriots, yet he did not want them, as they caused difficulties, and he would rather be without them.

THE VIEWS OF THE VARIOUS OFFICERS varied considerably as to the advantages of this movement. Many sneered, and many approved and said they were very noble creatures to try to show the men what their duty to the country is, but nearly all were ashamed to think such a movement necessary.

The battalion, as originally formed, numbered some 500 and contained two distinct elements, which for facility of reference I will call Ladies and Women—the former well edu-

ated, enthusiastic, and full of patriotism; the latter equally patriotic, but of a lower social standing—mostly peasants. After a while the women got slack, until the colonel tried to stop the practice. Then nearly all the Women, about two-thirds of the battalion went off on their own. The Ladies stuck to it and to their ideals and fought well with the 14th Regiment. They were used partly as troops in the firing line and partly as ammunition carriers. According to their young colonel, they lost 4 killed and 17 wounded, and 32 have since left suffering from shock. There are fewer than 80 now left of the Ladies. I had quite a good talk with the colonel, and found after about ten minutes that she was quite a young girl and very anxious to hear all about Petrograd. She was evidently in a state of nerves and excitement, was recovering from fever, and had a high temperature. They received no instructions in the use of their arms and knew nothing of musketry, and yet here I found them less than 500 yards from the Germans.

A general told me that two more battalions of women were coming to the front, and although he thought them splendid and true patriots, yet he did not want them, as they caused difficulties, and he would rather be without them.

THE VIEWS OF THE VARIOUS OFFICERS varied considerably as to the advantages of this movement. Many sneered, and many approved and said they were very noble creatures to try to show the men what their duty to the country is, but nearly all were ashamed to think such a movement necessary.

The battalion, as originally formed, numbered some 500 and contained two distinct elements, which for facility of reference I will call Ladies and Women—the former well edu-

ated, enthusiastic, and full of patriotism; the latter equally patriotic, but of a lower social standing—mostly peasants. After a while the women got slack, until the colonel tried to stop the practice. Then nearly all the Women, about two-thirds of the battalion went off on their own. The Ladies stuck to it and to their ideals and fought well with the 14th Regiment. They were used partly as troops in the firing line and partly as ammunition carriers. According to their young colonel, they lost 4 killed and 17 wounded, and 32 have since left suffering from shock. There are fewer than 80 now left of the Ladies. I had quite a good talk with the colonel, and found after about ten minutes that she was quite a young girl and very anxious to hear all about Petrograd. She was evidently in a state of nerves and excitement, was recovering from fever, and had a high temperature. They received no instructions in the use of their arms and knew nothing of musketry, and yet here I found them less than 500 yards from the Germans.

A general told me that two more battalions of women were coming to the front, and although he thought them splendid and true patriots, yet he did not want them, as they caused difficulties, and he would rather be without them.

THE VIEWS OF THE VARIOUS OFFICERS varied considerably as to the advantages of this movement. Many sneered, and many approved and said they were very noble creatures to try to show the men what their duty to the country is, but nearly all were ashamed to think such a movement necessary.

The battalion, as originally formed, numbered some 500 and contained two distinct elements, which for facility of reference I will call Ladies and Women—the former well edu-

ated, enthusiastic, and full of patriotism; the latter equally patriotic, but of a lower social standing—mostly peasants. After a while the women got slack, until the colonel tried to stop the practice.