Reduced Majority For Labor Cabinet in New Zealand

AUCKLAND, N.Z., Sept. 27.—(CP) Labor was returned to power with a reduced majority in the national general election, the 19th since the formation of the party in 1919.

Two cabinet ministers were defeated as Prime Minister Peter Fraser's administration was returned to power by a close margin. They were A. H. Nordmeyer, Minister of Health, and Agriculture, and G. M. Rolleston, Minister of Education.

Lee's defeat in Grey Lynn represented a tremendous turnover of votes since the last election in 1938. At that time he had a majority of 8,600. This time he trailed by 5,110.

In Wellington Central, running against two opponents, Prime Minister Fraser polled 4,750 against 4,188 for the National candidate, W. Appleton, 1,689 for G. G. Scrimgeour, former Controller of Commercial Broadcasting, who ran as an independent. In the 1938 election, Fraser's majority was 8,600.

Walter Nash, Finance Minister, was returned with a majority of 4,000 and S. G. Holland, leader of the National Party, the official opposition, had a majority of 2,900 compared with 500 in the last election.

Fraser said the result of the election means endorsement of the Government's policy in peace and war. "The country has given a mandate, we propose to exercise it in the interests of the people," he said in a statement.

On the other hand, Holland interpreted the result to mean that there has been a "landslide" of public opinion against the Government and its policy of state control and regimentation. He said the result was a vote in favor of the Government calling a halt in expansion of the policy of socialization and state control.

Such a standing may change when the official count has been completed. Three Labor seats at the moment are held by majority of only about 50 while the National Party provisionally gained two by even smaller margins. One of these is Health Minister Nordmeyer's seat, where the Nationalist majority was only 28.

VALLEYFIELD, Que., Sept. 27.—(CP)—Cardinal Villeneuve asked here last night for a study of "present political and social problems" in the light of the Catholic Social Doctrine. He said "there is a need for more and more for the capitalists and possessing class in dealing with social questions begging an answer nowadays." The time of the conference is "temperance."

Joan Crawford in M-G-M's Dramatic 'Reunion in France'

A vivid love story, told against the sensational background of the fall and occupation of Paris, and known as a danger and suspicion recipe to wartime tempo prove an excellent frame for Joan Crawford's superb performance in her latest offering, M-G-M's "Reunion in France" in which she is starred with John Wayne and Philip Dorn, seen currently at the Capitol Theatre.

The completion of that assignment will be found in her report under the title, "The Dawn of Ampler Life." In a statement, Mr. Bracken said:—

When the Marsh report on social security and the Heagerty report on health insurance followed so closely upon the Beveridge report received to some of us that because of the substantial changes involved in some of our social insurance and constitutional relationships, we should be sure that the proposals were sound as a basis for Canadian policy recommendations. It is our duty to commit the nation to their adoption in all their details.

Because of the broad practical knowledge of the actual working out of comparable schemes on this continent, in the United Kingdom and some European countries, Dr. Charlotte Whitton was commissioned to undertake a comparative analysis of these reports.

In the thought that the observations and proposals made by Dr. Whitton will offer helpful suggestions to all interested Canadians, the report is being made available to the general public.

The Macdonald Company of Canada, assuming responsibility for the publication of this report, on a straight commercial basis. This has made possible our desire that it should not be considered as a political party document, but one standing on its own merits.
