John Smith and His Car

By FREDERICK C. RUSSELL

John Smith is a character whom every motorist should welcome. He is not selfish, rather he is a motorist martyr, a chap willing and glad to have exploited, in an interesting way, his experiences for the benefit of the other twenty million or more members of the motor clan.

No. 7.—The First Day Out

It was not the first day of spring that Smith set aside for his initiation into the great clan of motorists, but there was a spirit of wanderlust in the air and it was Saturday afternoon.

Accordingly, at the appointed hour, the proud owner of the service station carrying the license plates under his arm. These he turned over to a mechanic with instructions to attach them to his car, and then he began outlining to me where he intended driving that afternoon. Right there I called a halt, and suggested that it might be advisable to watch the mechanic and not be crossing bridges before he came to them.

"If you want to know your car intimately," I said, "better keep your eyes and ears open whenever the car is in the care of a mechanic. Thousands of motorists are content to trust everything to mechanics; that is why they are up against it when they have trouble on the road."

I stopped a moment to take the instruction book from one of the side pockets. Opening the book I pointed to a typical line of instruction which read: "The idling adjusting screw should be screwed in until it stops, then screwed out in counter-clockwise direction 10 notches, which is normal adjustment."

"Now that," I said, "tells how to adjust the gas mixture, but such instructions are often difficult for the car owner to understand. If the expense were not prohibitive, manufacturers would doubtless send representatives to explain these directions in person. But here is the point. The mechanic understands the car as well as any representative the manufacturer might employ, only he is not bound to tell you what you want to know. By watching him you see, and by asking him questions you can get the equivalent of expert advice."

"Guess you're right," Smith admitted, "but hadn't we better get started; he's got his plates on now? I had it all planned to drive it out of here yesterday, but you always seem to have something else to think of. I'm itching to get at the wheel!"

But I kept him itching. I told him that I would drive the car till we were out of traffic. Though pleased in a way with this arrangement, he protested on the grounds that I was trying to make it easy for him.

"Nothing of the sort," I explained. "When they taught you to swim they threw you overboard in deep water, but as you probably remember quite vividly, you came near not learning it; it is the same with driving a car; a lot of people will be telling you to go right down into the thick of the traffic before you do anything else. I don't agree with them; I'm willing to ride in traffic with you after I have seen you make a neat start and stop before you're own house."

So Smith let me do the swimming till we got where the streets are safer for the beginner. After we had pulled up before the house, and after the family and all had cast admiring glances at the new car, Smith and I went off by ourselves.

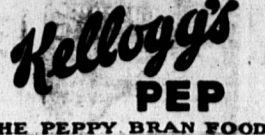

Selfish? That depends upon how you look at it. Of course the family wanted to go out with him for that eventful first ride, but it was for that very reason that first ride as you know, that Smith decided to try it alone with me.

"Now, what caused that?" he asked at length, referring to the jerking of the car when he started. "Simply that you let the clutch in too quickly," I replied. "If you will feed gas in moderation and let in the clutch gently at the same time, the power will be transmitted to the rear wheels without jerking. There is considerable slack in the transmission, pinion and differential gears and in the universal joints. By letting in the clutch gently it is possible to double the life of these vital parts."

Smith made a pretty good showing for himself that afternoon and drove into the garage like a regular member of the clan. Here, however he made a mistake. He tipped the garage attendant and told him to back the garage into a stall.

Air Bombardment Worse at Peking

PEKING, April 5.—Air bombardment of this city grew more intense today and in some quarters was interpreted as the beginning of the real siege of Chinese capital by the attacking armies of Chang Tso-Lin, Manchurian leader and Marshal Wu Peo, his powerful ally. According to certain reports these forces now have drawn a complete cordon about Peking. But there is word also of impending disension between Chang and Wu, with the latter inactive in expectation of an alliance with the Kuomintang (National armies) who are still in control of Peking.

While the air bombardment did not accomplish much damage, it added considerable confusion and distraction to the already harassed population. Chinese residents are indignantly asking why the foreign legations are not protesting against the air raids.

I warned him against making this a habit, for it is difficult to handle a car in a garage and that is all the more reason why a new driver should try it, provided he has someone around to guard against damaging the other machines.

Smith stepped back into the car and, ten minutes later, was boasting of having successfully backed his first car into a difficult space. That's Smith for you!

MALPEQUE A special meeting of great moment to Princeton Congregation was held in Malpeque Hall on Friday afternoon March 26th. The matter for consideration was the call from Trinity United Church, Summerside, to Rev. A. N. Gillis pastor of this congregation. As the only available means of travel was on foot what would otherwise have been a crowded house proved to be only a fairly representative one. Mr. Arch. Woodside, Chairman of management, presided. Mr. Herbert Donald Sea View had been appointed by the Session to draw up a resolution. In the unavoidable absence of Mr. Donald, Messrs Howard Ramsay, John Simpson and James Donald, representatives from the session gave expression to their attachment to Mr. Gillis and their appreciation of his devotion and loyalty to his work. Mr. Ray Lockerby spoke in complimentary terms of the work Mr. Gillis had done, this was followed by Mr. Gillis, presenting the claims of the Trinity Church, yet considering carefully the needs and wishes of his own people. Extensive addresses were given by Messrs John Peake, W. MacNutt, Geo. Bryenton, G. W. Ramsay and COCONUT OIL MAKES A SPLENDID SHAMPOO Do not use prepared shampoo or anything else that contains too much free alkali, for this is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle. The best thing is to use is Mulisified coconut oil shampoo, for it is pure and entirely greaseless. It is inexpensive and beats anything else all to pieces. You can get Mulisified at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months. Two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulisified is all that is required. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy, and easy to manage. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust dirt and dandruff. Be sure your druggist gives you Mulisified. Beware of imitations. Look for the name Watkins on the package.

Geo. Cozier, all of whom recognized his unsurpassed efforts in the congregation and while emphasizing the difficulties in filling his place did not wish to bring any undue pressure to bear on his judgment of the matter. A resolution was drawn up by Messrs G. W. Ramsay, John Simpson and John Peake giving further expression of the wishes of the people. The meeting was then adjourned. It is believed that Princeton congregations will rise to its opportunity with renewed effort and co-operation if Mr. Gillis decides to remain.
