LIBERAL SURPLUSES

Liberal surpluses, of which we have heard much in our own province and more recently in New Brunswick and Quebec, remind me of the experiences of the late lamented Artemas Ward in hog raising. He bought a hog for two dollars, fed it three dollars worth of corn and sold the hog for four dollars. He made two dollars on the hog but lost by the corn. The Liberal government's of our own and our sister provinces are making surpluses with the revenue but unfortunately they are losing by the expenditures.

ARE WE PROGRESSING

If the world is not growing better it is not because of want of effort in that direction. Whether former ages have or have not seen such feverish efforts put forth for the betterment of humanity, as we see today might be ascertained by history itself only with results. Not details, but we cannot doubt that succeeding generations displayed the shortcomings of their day and did what they could to provide remedies.

The present generation has seen the greatest war in the world's history. It has also seen the world's greatest nations assembled to provide that there should be no more war. In their assembled wisdom they decreed that in order to prevent war the nations must scrap their ships and throw away their guns. Yet the nations which have only just emerged from the greatest war in the history are standing on what may be the brink of another world war.

In the lesser sphere of social life we are similarly endeavoring to eliminate poverty and crime and ignorance by removing the implements by which these conditions are being perpetuated. We are overcoming poverty by distributing food and clothing; overcoming crime by locking up the criminal; overcoming ignorance by compulsory attendance at school.

Yet, in this feverish activity for betterment, it is being slowly recognized that the road to reconstruction is not one of disarmament or of international treaties, that the road to law-abiding citizenship is not one from which means of law-breaking have been removed; that the road to knowledge is not one of compulsion. While the character is untouched we may look for reversion. What the world needs today more than written regulations is men and women of character who recognize the futility of reform which does not come from within, in return demanding recognition of the responsibilities of the individual for national welfare and international fellowship.

"The state is the citizen writ large," says the author of "Principles of Citizenship," "and the citizen is the state writ small. There is in the final resort no good state except where there are good citizens nor good citizens except in good state."

"ISN'T THAT SO GEORGE?"

The coolness of Hon. George P. Graham in replying, when appealed to by Finance Minister Fielding as to the latter's correct interpretation of the government's tariff policy is an illuminating example of the flexibility of Liberal policies. The Minister had told the farmers who had waited upon him protesting against the ruinous policy of permitting American farm products to be imported into Canada almost duty free while Canadian products were kept out of the American market by a prohibitive duty, that the governments policy was to lower the duty on all foodstuffs and turning to Mr. Graham for corroboration, asked, "Isn't that so, George?" George naively replied, "I did not state it so to my constituents."

We have had numerous examples of this in our own province during and since the last provincial election. "I didn't tell them in my manifesto that we were going to reduce the taxes!" declares the Premier. "Isn't that so, Walter?" To which Walter might have answered as George did "I didn't tell them that in my constituency."

A flexible policy is an excellent instrument to run an election with but it is a dangerous one on the second trial. Every elector in this province knows that the Bell candidates canvassed their constituencies with the claim that they were going to reduce taxation, to do away with the extravagances practised by the previous government, yet they now claim that the Premier's manifesto made no such promises. "Isn't that so Fred?" Well, I didn't tell my constituents that.

CANADIAN FISHERIES

Canada, says the Canadian Fiscal monthly review, has the most extensive fishing grounds in the world, and in the Dominion's inland waters and those off both coasts are to be found some six hundred varieties of edible fish. To date not more than about one hundred and fifty are commonly known, whilst not more than twenty have become really important factors of the market. The extent of the product of Canadian waters, however, indicates most clearly the potentiality of the Canadian fishing industry in quantity they could easily furnish the entire world with its needs without suffering any depletion and come very near filling all the demands for variety. As a matter of fact it is difficult to name a country of the globe where Canadian fish of some kind is not being regularly imported.

In the fiscal year 1922, Canada exported fish to the extent of $29,378,392 from a catch valued at $34,931,935 or roughly about 80 per cent of the actual catch left Canada. Every variety of fish caught in Canadian waters was exported, the sum total of exports being made up entirely of comparatively small items. Exports of pollock hake, and tusk took the first place, accounting for a value of $6,433,252; cod-fish was second with $5,509,323; canned lobsters, third with $3,756,442; and then in order, fresh lobsters, $1,403,257; white-fish, $1,150,511; swordfish, $1,064,358; dry salted herrings, $1,000,427; and salmon, fresh, $993,373. Other interesting items of exports were 6,871 cwt. of canned and preserved whalemeat worth $10,969; 4,256 seal-skins worth $58,498; and 393,598 gallons of cod liver oil, seal oil, whale oil and other fish oil worth $140,937.

Notes By The Way

Yesterday we were discussing in this column the two months limit within which time the public had been told the prohibition of the importation of liquors to this province would take effect. This turns out to be an error into which a good many people, both those who favor prohibition and those opposed to it have fallen. It now appears that ninety days must elapse between the plebiscite vote and the date at which the vote becomes effective. And as the plebiscite was taken on January 22nd it cannot be made effective until April 22. It follows that the cry to "fill up the tanks! Only two months remain!" issued by the liquor trade was a false alarm. It was only a hurry-up call to stimulate trade in the immediate future. Two months stretch out to three and the string is still elastic and capable of further stretching if the two governments lend an ear to their friends in the liquor trade and permit further delay.

In Quebec Premier Taschereau, who boasts that his government made a clear profit last year of four million from liquor sales, claims that the law as it is in his province is a temperance measure! He further excuses the action of the provincial government in passing it by pointing out that the Dominion Government made a profit of six millions and British Columbia a million and a half from the liquor trade last year. He might have added that the New Brunswick Government also got half a million from the same source last year in a different way.

All of this is true enough. The Dominion Government permits the importation and collects high customs duties on imported liquors; it licenses brewers and distillers to make the stuff and collects heavy excise duties on what they make. They make more than they can sell in Canada and are permitted to export it freely abroad. Thus the Dominion and a number of the provinces in which brewing and distilling are carried on are officially connected with the liquor trade and making profit from it.

We have yet far to go before we get real prohibition in Canada and before such prohibition as we have can have a fair trial. It can only get a fair trial when the manufacture, the importation, the sale and use of intoxicants as a beverage are prohibited by law. The plebiscite of January 22nd will carry us forward one step further than we were before when the result of the voting is given effect by proclamation three months hence. As long as intoxicants could be lawfully imported they would be bootlegged through the province. Prohibiting importation is therefore an important gain.

But it is no time for prohibitionists to rest on their oars. The liquor traffic can never be driven from Canada until the law of the land shall prohibit the importation, manufacture and sale of liquor within the Dominion boundaries and until we have governments honestly disposed and determined to enforce such a law. So far successive governments have not honestly tried to enforce the imperfect prohibitory laws we have had. Most of them have aided and abetted the liquor evil by merely playing with enforcement.

The above recitals may seem to some persons to be discouraging, but are not really so. In any case it is prudent to look the facts squarely in the face. All great reforms have required time for their accomplishment. More than a century the anti-slavery advocates labored in their humane but seemingly hopeless task before it was crowned with success. The great temperance reform began less than a hundred years ago. The first liquor-prohibitory law, then viewed as a very doubtful experiment, dates only from the middle of the nineteenth century. In our days we have seen it sweeping over scores of states, provinces and countries.

Nothing can stop its progress or prevent its ultimate triumph. Just as surely as human slavery has been swept from all civilized lands, so surely will the liquor traffic be abolished. Prohibition may meet with set-backs. Its greatest present danger is the sordid desire of governments to get revenue out of a traffic which is accursed as the common enemy of the human race. That danger must be met and grappled with. An awakened public conscience in regard to rum revenues is an urgent present need.

The Public Forum

What's the Matter?

Sir,—There has been a great deal in the Guardian recently on the above heading. In my mind it is a very easy question to answer, as far as Prince Edward Island is concerned. Regarding the Potato Growers' Association meeting held in Charlottetown recently, I see by the report that there has been a great deal of kicking regarding fertilizer received from foreign firms, especially in superphosphate. The trouble lies just here, the association calls for prices on fertilizers, and of course, will always give a foreign firm the preference just because its few cents cheaper, sending all loose money off the island where it is earned and should stay. But let me say right here, Sir, the only way foreign firms can supply fertilizer so cheap is to give the farmer of P. E. Island just what he pays for and to be able to get their own, they must give short weight or an inferior quality. It is quite prevalent abroad that the Prince Edward Island farmer, or at least some of them, thinks no one has a right to make a cent but Mr. Now. Sir, unless the farmer gives our home dealers in all lines the preference, all things being equal, it will not be asked, "What's the Matter?" There is an old saying which I consider never ought to be uttered, namely: "Buy in the cheapest and sell in the dearest," when it should be, "Live and let live." Let me ask, would these cheap foreign firms take our pork, our beef, our eggs, butter or milk and all our farm products without making a profit? The fact of the matter is, we cannot possibly get along as a family community without our city and country merchants a bit easier than they can without the farmer. Now, I want your readers to think the matter over carefully before they condemn what I say.

Farmer's Co-operative

Sir,—I wish to say a few words in connection with the Farmer's Co-operative. I am informed that the Bank of Montreal has in collateral notes to the amount of $4,000,000, which the farmers signed to finance the business of the Farmer's Co-operative. Now the Bank is demanding payment for these notes. By all means the Bank should be paid.

When the people of Prince Edward Island joined the Egg Circle they never suspected they would be fleeced in this way. When Mr. Kerr organized the Egg Circle he collected in cash from the farmers between twenty-five and thirty thousand dollars to run the business which I think most everyone belonging to them also those that do not belong are in favour of it. It was the stimulus of putting good eggs on the market and commanding the highest prices.

It appears that in 1919 the Egg Circle ran on its own basis and the farmers co-operative run on theirs. When the latter went out of business it had a debt of $44,000 to its credit. Now, is it fair that the farmers should pay this amount when they received no value for their money? The directors are the ones responsible. I am informed that there is all kinds of machinery in the warehouse in Charlottetown and Summerside and also a vast amount of bills through the island to be collected. Now why do not the directors who boosted the Farmers Co-operative, get after those and collect the outside bills and sell all of this machinery that is lying in the warehouses and wind up the business and if there is not enough money to pay the debt then tax the people for the remainder. If the farmers pay off those notes in the Bank, what will become of those uncollected bills that are out through the country and the money worth that is to be disposed of yet. Let the directors get down to business and do their duty in a business way.

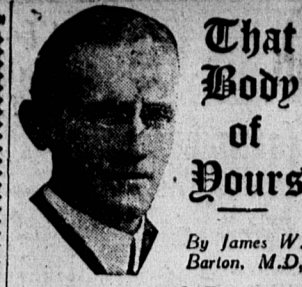

I am, Sir, etc.,

JAMES MORRISEY.

More Facts for Disbelievers

Sir,—In the Guardian of January 19th there appears a letter signed, A. Moffatt, New Glasgow, P. E. I. attempting to discredit my letter of January 10th, in regard to the enforcement of prohibition in the United States. He picked out what seemed to him the weakest link in the chain of evidence I presented and attempted to show I was telling an untruth as to liquor coming into New York Harbor on December 30, 1922.

When I wrote my letter, I carefully tested every link in the chain of evidence I presented and found each and every one to have equal strength. Now, as there are two classes of people—Socialists and Prohibitionists—whom I never find to believe anything, except that which may coincide with their own peculiar and disastrous ways of reasoning, it is now necessary for me to give Mr. A. Moffatt a little further information on this disastrous prohibition subject and while doing so I am not over anxious whether Mr. Moffatt believes my statements or not. When those rum ships were hovering around outside New York Harbor, we find the flag ship Hansen of the so called dry

HAVE YOU CRAWLED IN TO WINTER QUARTERS?

In visiting a small place on the St. Lawrence River one day in December I was told that it was a wonderful place in the summer. The women then blossom out in gorgeous sport dresses and the men in flannels and tennis shoes. Add what of this fine bracing weather now? Are they not indulging in skating and snow-shoeing? "Oh, no. They have crawled into winter quarters. Even the women are wearing heavy wraps of all kinds with no pretence at style because they practically stay in the house all winter." How wrong that is when you think about it. That men and women should for that for months the ordinary common sense rules of health. I know the weather is cold; and everybody loves the warm fireside at times, but why put ourselves on the same basis as the bear who was especially built for taking a winter sleep. If you will all outdoors and get your children out doors, well wrapped of course you will not only stimulate your heart and lungs to retain their vigour, but your entire body will react to the tingle of the weather and the coursing of the blood throughout your body. Your appetite will be a joy to you and you'll throw off the poisonous waste matters of the body that render you and yours such likely subjects to colds and sore throats.
