Baked Cucumbers

Paré and remove the seeds from one large, ripe cucumber. Slice in medium slices and place in a well-buttered baking dish alternate layers of the cucumber and sliced fresh or canned tomatoes. Finish each layer with a dusting of cracker crumbs, pepper, salt, a little Parmesan cheese and lumps of butter. Over the top pour the following mixture; three tablespoons of ketchup, one teaspoon of Worcestershire sauce, a gill of melted butter and one well beaten egg. Bake a delicate brown and serve with a dinner vegetable with the meat course.

KILL WEEDS

Sir:—Despite all the warnings repeatedly given us of the dangerous nature of some noxious weeds in many sections of our province nothing is apparently being done to keep them in check. A few years ago it was rare indeed to see a plant of the orange hawk weed or (devil's paint brush) as it is commonly known; now it can be seen growing along the roadside of some of our best farming communities, and in many instances overrunning the adjoining fields. With all the information now available on the recommended weeds, surely every farmer knows that he is breeding trouble and great financial loss for himself and the immediate neighbors at an alarming rate, by this neglect, as a farmer seeded with this well named pest will soon greatly depreciate in value. It is hard enough to keep weeds in control before we start growing our own seed but after this villainous weed gets well established the community will bitterly rue the day they first neglected to destroy it. In the Province of Quebec so persistent a grower has this weed proven to be that farmers have in many instances given up the fight against it and been driven off their farms. Now before this parasite gets any of us on the run I think everybody should unite to drive it back off their farms and the roadside adjoining where the plants are just starting, hand pulling or hoeing will kill it out as it is only a shallow rooted plant but when firmly established unless the land can be broken up and put under a hood crop it is very difficult to eradicate.

Badly infested meadows and pastures should be ploughed and put under some short rotation, and for roadsides and other clearings where plowing would be difficult or impossible a dressing of dry salt soon broadcast is recommended. At the rate of 1 1/2 tons to the acre (17 pounds to the square rod) if this is sown so as to fall on the leaves of all the plants it will destroy them. Everybody should be on their guard against this weed. We have grown so accustomed to the one eyed daisy and a few other weeds (that have some feed value and do not entirely crowd out the growing crop) that we are not inclined to take this pest seriously until it has become a very real loss to most of us realize. They use considerable plant food, are gross consumers of moisture, and those of the nature of the "devil" we are discussing that spreads by means of other plants, will choke out every other plant.

I have often thought it is a wise provision of nature that every very bad weed has a bright flowering top which makes it easily conspicuous in almost any growing crop. The thistle family including the bad saw thistles have all this peculiar trait. The paint brush, the mustards, close cousins to the former (as an evil doer) and many others that can be classed with the list of bad weeds are all easily distinguishable by their bright flowering top warning us of danger. Now let us all get after this parasite. Keep a sharp watch at this season in which it is in bloom and carefully root out every plant that we can locate.

I am Sir &c.
W. M. LEA.

TRENCH WARFARE—THE FIRING TRENCH

(Guardian Special)

The close contact of the enormous forces engaged in this war, equipped as they are, with the most destructive weapons known, is possible only by the highly developed modern trench.

Each side can completely cover the ground before it for several miles at advance, and effectually prevent the open advance of the enemy. Because of the powerful search-lights, rockets, star-lights, and other illuminants, it is equally true at night. So the contending armies have for the most part, in the western field, resorted to sapping. The engineers will select any sheltered spot such as the leeward side of a hill, or a gully or ravine. They then start a trench leading toward the enemy line. It will continue directly toward the enemy line until it reaches a point where it would be exposed. Here it makes a turn to prevent exposure. From such first step it zig-zags toward the enemy, the continual change of direction affording complete protection to every portion of the trench. From this leading in trench, branches are lead off, like the fingers of a hand, but are directed, in zig-zag, toward the enemy's battle line. At the end of each of these is a firing trench parallel with the enemy's front. These firing trenches are about five feet deep and wide enough for the men to move about in. It is from these exposed trenches that the enemy's attacks are repulsed by rifle fire, and from them that the last dash at the enemy takes place. They are too exposed for a force to remain in them longer than necessary. A very short distance in the rear of them is the first line of "ever trenches." These are deeper and set simply as passage ways connecting a series of undergrounds. In these, the trench guard waits. At the first word, they rush from their shelter to man the firing trench.

Back of the first line of shelter trench, there are successive lines of similar trenches for reinforcements. The men in the first line shelter trench remain only forty-eight hours at a stretch, and are then relieved for four days, at the end of which time they again return. In the more stubbornly contented sections, there are lines of shelter trenches all branching off from the leading in trenches. As far as possible, the trenches themselves are roofed in by timbers covered with earth and sod and thoroughly proof netting.

As the trenches advance toward the enemy, the older ones are improved and made more substantial. Their walls are reinforced and they are faced with concrete and drains are put in to carry off the rain water. Where possible, even water mains have been laid to supply water. Before long, these trenches become semi-permanent fortifications. Where ever an enemy trench is taken, it is simply made over and converted.

LETTER OF CONDOLENCE.

From Cambridge Lodge I. O. G. T., No. 112,
To Mrs. Percy Boehner,
Dear Sister—We, your brothers and sisters in the Lodge, take the opportunity of tendering to you our sincere sympathy in the loss you have sustained by the death of your beloved husband, who by his unobtrusive life and manly qualities, endeared himself to all who had the pleasure of his acquaintance. Please do consider this letter formal, but a sincere expression of sympathy from every member of the Lodge. While afflictions that seem very grievous enter at various times into our lives be consoled by the thought that they come from a loving father in Heaven who knows what is best for us, and who is behaving you of your partner in life would have you look confidently to Himself who hath said: "WMM I to thou knowest not now but thou shalt know hereafter." We would direct you to look forward hopefully to a glorious reunion in a better land, where we shall be able to understand the Provisions of God, that enter into our lives here. Please convey to your children our heart-felt sympathy as they are bereft of a father's love and care at very tender ages. May you all seek the Kingdom of God and His righteousness and rejoice in anticipation of a glorious reunion in Heaven, where parting is unknown. Yours with deepest sympathy, on behalf of the Lodge.

SOME DIFFERENCES

Here and there amongst our dairymen are such splendid results attained that one can only be astonished by the complacency with which other so-called dairymen continue to be content with the pitifully small average yields of milk per cow. Why do the huge differences exist?

Just a few miles from here is one of those poor herds, six cows with an average of only 3,338 pounds of milk; the highest yield only 4,000.

In contrast to that, two good herds in Western Ontario indicate the possibilities for the man whose eyes are open to what milk records have to teach. One herd of 12 grades average 16,657 pounds of milk and 317 pounds of fat; the second herd of 22 grades averaged 10,542 pounds of milk and 250 pounds of fat.

These marvellous differences in herd yields drive home hard facts. Men differ in their methods of feeding and handling cows, feeds differ in value, cows differ considerably in their inherent capacity as milk producers, they are not all cast in the same mold.

In the above two herds the constant use of milk records has proved an excellent lever in raising the production. Cow testing pays.—C. F. W.
