CHAPTER XVIII

"IT'S ABOUT SOME PAPERS"

"'Noon, gent.' It had seemed as if I would meet you on the way, but who were waiting to stop him, but Lorbrook stepped forward.

"Charley Monkford, aren't you?" he asked, and without waiting for a reply, "We'd like to see you for a few minutes."

"Charley appeared to stoop even lower almost as if he were cowering. Bill was sure the man was attracted. His little eyes darted about as if seeking an avenue of escape.

"After a while confidence returned. I think the 'sure you ain't made no mistake, mister? Wot can you want to see me for?'"

"He suggested they might go into the cottage to talk, and again these eyes came the look of fear into Charley's eyes. He demurred until Bill almost insisted.

"All right, come in. I'm just going to get some tea. I ain't got much time. Busy on the marshes now. Always busy, come to that."

"Lorbrook's nose wrinkled in disgust as they entered the cottage, and Benny's eyes opened wide in astonishment at the collection of lower animals which were crowded into the room.

"Run out of oil," he explained. "It was clear that he could not settle down to listen to what his visitors had to say. He could not keep still, and certainly could not meet Bill's eye."

"It's about the two men you found down the road, isn't it?" he asked. "I didn't find two men, Monkford declared. 'I found one, like I said. Proper gives me a turn, too, it did. I didn't see 'em seeing 'em laying about like that.'"

"'Sorry!' Lorbrook believed Monkford was speaking the truth so far. Of course, you found only one of them."

"Now, it's about some papers that man had, and Charley looked up sharply. He was angry, and even more afraid than before.

"I don't know about no papers. I ain't seen 'em. Wot you all keep on at me for? First is the 'p'ice, then the other blokes, now it's you. Ain't a man never got 'ave no peace, 'just 'cost he finds a dead dog?'"

"Bill might have seized on Monkford's words and asked for details about the 'other blokes,' but he did not. He was the slightest doubt responsible for the killings, and the men, who, because they wanted food, had stolen the change of diet, had stolen the Doctor's change of diet."

"The most important thing revealed by the questioning Charley Monkford was that they certainly had not secured Mother's formula."

"When the police get the idea anyb'ody was in the room, they'll search a warrant and look for themselves," he said suggestively.

"Monkford was not slow to see the point of what he was saying. 'Nothin' 'ere,' he declared truthfully. 'All this stuff is mine. I found it on the marshes. Stuff wot other folks 'ave 'ave, it's mine, and no one can't say it ain't in spite of his bluster, it was obvious that Monkford was shaken and apprehensive."

Liquor Regulations In "Wet" Provinces

(By The Canadian Press) Canada's eight legally "wet" provinces have met the Dominion Government's demand for a 30 per cent cut in liquor consumption in three ways: shorter vendors' hours, adoption of more rigid enforcement of a permit system; limitation of purchases in terms of quantity.

A Canadian press survey discloses the varying provincial systems operating with varying degrees of success. The problem is short supply. The wartime alcoholic beverages order was announced last Dec. 18. It called for a 30 per cent cut in consumption in the year Nov. 1, 1942—Oct. 31, 1943. Thus, if a province's Nov. 1-Dec. 18 sales equalled the preceding years, it was over the 30 per cent cut for that period. That had to come off the rest of the year's lowered ceiling.

Quantities an individual drinking man may buy range from 40 ounces in two months in British Columbia to a bottle a day, technically in New Brunswick. Restrictions in other provinces, in terms of purchases permissible in one month, are: Nova Scotia, one quart Quebec, 80 ounces; Ontario, 130 ounces; Manitoba, 35 ounces; Saskatchewan, 52 ounces; Alberta, 26 ounces. The New Brunswick limit is something of a technicality because stores may limit sales of any given brand to the same amount sold on the corresponding day last year, the store hours are short, and the lineup of purchasers long.

Would Boost Old Age, Blind Pensions

FREDERICTON, April 14—(CP) Notice of motion regarding an increase in old age and blind pensions was given in the New Brunswick Legislature today by Premier J. B. McNair. He stated that on Saturday he would move a resolution that the government should request the Dominion Government to introduce in Parliament an amendment to the old age pensions act (Dominion) to provide for an increase in the maximum amount payable as old age pensions and pensions for the blind from twenty dollars to twenty-five dollars per month, the additional cost to be shared between the Dominion and the provinces on the same basis as the present cost. Also under the resolution, the government would "join with other provincial governments favoring such action in the necessary representations to the Dominion government."

Income Tax Collections Up

OTTAWA, April 14—(CP)—The revenue department collected $2,106,241.04 during the fiscal year ended March 31, compared with $1,340,462,792 during the previous year. Revenue Minister Gibson announced today.

Not Wasting Words Or Ammunition

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, April 14—(AP)—FO. Gordon Lisle May, 23, of Lethbridge, Alta., and Sgt. Fred Lethbridge 21, the British observer in May's bombardier aren't wasting words or ammunition in fighting this war. They came back from a flight off the coast of Sardinia with the following entry in their log book: "11.13 sighted JU-52 11.14 JU shot down into sea. 11.15 resumed course"

AIRMEN RESCUED BY RAILWAY CAR FERRY

Four airmen of the R.C.A.F. were rescued from the waters of Northumberland Strait by the Canadian National Railway's car ferry "Prince Edward Island" after they had been stranded on an ice floe for five days. Their bomber encountered difficulties when over the Strait and they had to bail out. After being sighted from the air an attempt was made to rescue the airmen by plane but without success and the assistance of the ice-breaking car ferry was requested which was dispatched to the rescue. All but one of the four airmen were able to climb up a rope ladder let down from the side of the car ferry. The fourth was lifted from the ice in a bosun's chair. They were brought to Cape Tormentine, N. B., by the car ferry and then taken to hospital at Moncton, N. B.
