Gallup Poll Of Canada

OLD-AGE PENSIONS OVER $40 A MONTH URGED BY TWO-THIRDS OF CANADIANS 97% Have Formed Opinion On Pension Rates Poll Reveals

TORONTO, Nov. 20 - Canadians are keenly interested in old-age pensions. Almost everybody has a definite idea of the amount of pension they are.

While there are only three per cent of Canadian voters who have no opinion on what the pension should be, 27 per cent are completely ignorant of what present old-age pension rates actually are.

"If it were your job to decide how much money Old-Age Pensioners WITH NO OTHER MEANS OF SUPPORT should receive from the government each month, what amount would you set?"

The amounts advocated range from $9 per month to $200 per month, with the greatest proportion in the $31 to $50 range:

Table with columns: Amount, Proposed by (May 1943), Today. Rows show percentages for various pension amounts.

This record reveals a trend in current opinion towards higher pension rate demands than the public advocated in May, 1943, when the Gallup Poll surveyed Canadian voters with the same question.

More than half of them were unable to state the correct amount. In many of these cases, the answer was partly correct; full knowledge of the adjustments and special conditions in some provinces could hardly be expected.
