WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk, and the world looks punk, don't think that a large cleaning out of the bowels will make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

It can't do it! You know it can't give you any lasting relief. For a mere cleaning out does not get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pints of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pints of bile flowing freely. Then you feel "up and up." Carter's Little Liver Pills contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at drug stores. © 1931 C. M. Co.

Challenges Debate On Rwy. Problem

(C. P. By Guardian's Special Wire)

TORONTO, May 20—Hon. R. J. Manion, Canadian Minister of Railways, was challenged today by E. W. Beatty to present a better solution to the railway problems than that offered by the chairman and president of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

Speaking at a Canadian Club luncheon, Mr. Beatty outlined his stand on the question of unification of the Canadian Pacific and Canadian National Railways and replied to 12 questions asked in a recent address by the Minister.

The entire discussion, said Mr. Beatty, must be kept free from politics for "even the most good-humored controversy with a Minister of the Crown in this election year might end in making the railway problem a party issue. The railway mess has very largely resulted from too much partizanship, and I plead that, in considering what I have suggested to deal with it, you treat the question as one transcending party boundaries."

Discharged By Court

(A. P. By Guardian's Special Wire)

BROOKLYN, N.Y., May 20.—Frederick Gross, 49, bookkeeper who was charged with murder after his wife and four children died mysteriously of poisoning, was discharged today in Brooklyn Homicide Court.

The $20-a-week bookkeeper was freed on the request of District Attorney William F. X. Geoghan.

Tunnel Project Is Debated

(C. P. By Guardian's Special Wire)

OTTAWA, May 20—Toronto's $1,000,000-tunnel to connect the Harbor Islands with the mainland again held up progress in the House of Commons today on the government's $33,000,000-construction bill.

For most of the afternoon Conservatives and Liberals argued about the tunnel. Government supporters claimed the federal authorities were bound by a 22-year-old agreement to bridge the harbor while Liberals contended the vote should be switched to some practical work like slum clearance, building of a court house or railway crossing elimination.

St. Patrick's Rd. Meeting Favours Potato Bonus

A meeting of the farmers of St. Patrick's Road was held on May 16 in the school house to draw up a resolution petitioning the Federal Government to grant a bonus on the 1934 potato crop. Mr. Owen Trainor was appointed chairman, Mr. W. B. Rogerson, secretary. The following resolution was moved by Mr. Eddie Birt, seconded by Mr. A. J. Grant and carried unanimously.

Whereas this province is especially adapted to the production of potatoes and the farmers have been depending to a great extent, on them for a cash crop and; Whereas owing to the unfavorable marketing conditions during the last few years and consequently low prices the farmers find themselves in a very critical situation financially and in debt on last year's crop; Whereas the necessity for planting another crop is before us, the farmers are badly in need of assistance; And whereas the Federal Government has assisted the Western provinces in similar circumstances and this province paid its share of said assistance in taxes and also sent many cars of produce, free of cost, to the needy farmers in the West. The said produce has little cash value here and farmers have realized no cash on the last crop.

We therefore resolve that we petition the Federal Government to grant a bonus on the 1934 potato crop of ten dollars an acre up to six acres to any one farmer and we further resolve that the meeting express itself in favor of the Provincial Government passing laws to restrict the acreage grown, by means of a tax of twenty dollars an acre for each acre any farmer grows exceeding ten acres.

Six Graduates Of City Hospital Presented With Diplomas Last Night

Edward Island Hospital. The equipment in both institutions is of the same type and is inspected periodically by experts from the firm supplying it.

He referred to Dr. Johnson who has completed 50 years in the medical profession and had for 30 years been a valued member of the staff of the Charlottetown Hospital.

In reference to the financial condition of the Hospital the speaker pointed out the need for greater financial assistance if the Hospital is to carry on in a satisfactory manner. The deficit, which was in the vicinity of $8,000, would be much greater if the nurses and staff were adequately paid. In conclusion he said he was pleased to see the large audience which signified the interest the public takes in the hospital.

His Excellency Bishop O'Sullivan, who spoke briefly at the close of the program, paid tribute to the Sisters at the Hospital who are devoting their service to the Hospital, not only as a refuge to the sick but as a training school for nurses. He expressed the hope that the graduating class would be a credit to the school as the former graduates have been. The nursing profession is one of the most honorable, being rooted in religion. It is not only important in the sick room but it is of great social value as shown by the number of nurses which were honored by His Majesty King George during the Jubilee celebrations recently. On behalf of the Sisters of the Hospital he extended his appreciation and thanks to Lieutenant Governor DeBlois for his presence and for his continued interest in everything for the good of the people.

Governor DeBlois, called on by the chairman, congratulated the graduates and extended his best wishes to the Dean of the medical profession, Dr. Johnson. In reference to the Charlottetown Hospital he pointed out that it has been carrying on its splendid work for 56 years. He reminded the graduates that their profession is a very noble one and wished them the greatest possible success in their chosen calling.

DR. G. L. SMITH'S ADDRESS

Hon. Mr. Chairman, Your Excellency, Your Honor, Your Worship, Rev. Fathers, Rev. Sisters, Ladies and Gentlemen, and Young Ladies of the Graduating Class of 1935:

Your good Superior and Rev. Sister in charge of your training school have done me the honor of asking me to address you this evening. Their request practically equals a command, and you will therefore have to bear with me for a short time.

Naturally and appropriately, on such an occasion as this, one's thoughts run to sentiments of congratulations and good wishes. These I offer you under three headings.

Firstly: On having successfully passed all required examinations and tests which admit you to graduation.

Secondly: On your choice of profession.

Thirdly: On your choice of training school.

In dealing with the first, let me remind you, if need be, that the three years course of Nurses' Training, as required by Standardized Hospitals, is a very strenuous and exacting one. The Matriculation Standard has been continually on the up trend, and now Pupil Nurses entering our Training Schools, must have passed at least one year in Prince of Wales College; higher qualifications are given preference. The syllabus of training and lectures, covers a wide range of subjects, including Anatomy, Medicine, Surgery, Obstetrics, Bacteriology, Contagious Diseases, Domestic Science, etc. The curriculum followed by you is the same in the Standardized Hospitals throughout the continent. Our Island, as you know, is indeed fortunate in having its three General Hospitals rated as Class A under the Standardization System. Your disciplinary training, too, has been a fairly rigid one. Nevertheless, as we look on your bright faces tonight, it is quite obvious that you have borne well your arduous training, and that you have happily chosen your life work—which brings me to my second reason for commending you this evening, namely: Your choice of profession.

Honorable Profession

The nursing profession is older than the medical profession, and, as older, the more honorable. It was the benign influence of Christianity, which taught patience, pity, and love of neighbour, that first fostered the practice of nursing and the annals of the Church are thickly dotted down through the centuries with the heroism of devoted women. More recently we must pay tribute to those two marvellous women, Florence Nightingale, and Jeanne Mance, with the histories of whose lives and work you are familiar, and who as you know, laid the foundation of our modern training schools in Europe and America. With such great traditions coupled with the advances made in scientific medicine with which the modern training school must keep pace, the present day nurse has become an instrument of incalculable value in alleviating human suffering and spreading the gospel of preventive medicine and public health. Indeed you have chosen a noble profession, filled with possibilities for great good to humanity.

Finally I would like to say a word on your choice of training school. I believe you made a fortunate selection when you picked one of the three training schools of P. E. Island. The reasons are these: You receive a training, without leaving your own Province, which is equal to that received anywhere on the continent, because, as I have stated before, the curriculum is the same in all, and those responsible for the teaching of that curriculum are as capable as they are elsewhere. I say further that in some respects that your training is better. Why? Because the classes are smaller, and, there is, therefore a closer personal touch between teacher and pupil, and more time can be devoted to the individual. Our nurses are invariably a success, and in great demand for positions of responsibility and trust in hospitals in larger centres. We hear that frequently from those institutions. In fairness let me state that what I have said is largely applicable to the nurses of our training schools throughout the Maritime Provinces.

The Future

May I turn now for a few moments to a more personal phase of your future? Hitherto your steps have been wisely guided by the good Sisters and nurses in charge of your training. Your moral and ethical deportment has been carefully watched. You have been taught daily what a good nurse "must be," "must do," and what a good nurse "may not do." You must be sympathetic, patient, tolerant—a paragon of all the virtues, in fact. You must give the same tender care to all, without thought of race or creed or station in life. You must be discreet and tactful. The great Sir William Osler once said: "The good nurse must have discretion, tested by a hundred secrets; tact, tried in a thousand embarassments." In the course of your duty you will become the possessor of sacred confidences—known perhaps to no other soul. These must be kept inviolate by you. If any of you feel that the confidence of a patient is too heavy a load, you should quit the profession. Lastly, I would counsel you on loyalty. Be ever loyal to your school, to your staff, to your fellow nurses. By loyalty, I do not mean that spurious kind, which gives loud and fulsome praise to one institution or individual to the detriment of another. Your true loyalty will be exemplified for the most part in living up to the ideals expounded to you in the Charlottetown Hospital, and a strict adherence to the Golden Rule: "Do unto others as you would that they do unto you."

Many Spheres of Usefulness

Now as to your future, I should hesitate to prophesy. In your profession there are many spheres of great usefulness open to you. One may prefer private duty, another institutional, another public health, or another may lean to one of the many forms of specialized work which so many graduate nurses, are now doing so successfully. Some of you may take your professional training with you to the religious life, a very happy combination. Those who do not, sooner or later will marry. I feel safe in that prediction. But, whether as wives, as sisters, or as highly specialized nurses, there is one thing of which I am certain, and it is: That you will be better women for the training you have received here in the last three years.

In conclusion, dear graduates, I wish to state, that it has been the earnest endeavour of your Alma Mater to mould you into nurses, proficient in the science and technique of your profession, and filled with the best moral and ethical sensibility. We believe that, so far as humanly possible, our object has been accomplished. My confreres of the medical staff will, I know, join with me in the prayer that a kindly providence may grant each one of you health and a long life in which to continue doing good.

VALEDICTORY

Your Excellency, Your Honor, Hon. Premier, Your Worship, Reverend Fathers, Reverend Sisters, Members of the Medical Staff, Student Nurses, Ladies and Gentlemen:

Time rolls its ceaseless course—and in so doing, ticks off with unalterable and unerring accuracy in its circuits periodical portions known as years. Thus in the long succession of years comes the closing year for the graduates of the Training School of the Charlottetown Hospital, and we, her graduates, have assembled before you tonight to bid a fond farewell to you who are our friends.

It is now twelve years since the first graduates in nursing at the Charlottetown Hospital left the shelter of her walls to seek fame and make a name for themselves in their chosen calling. Each year has seen a new group bid adieu to their Alma Mater and go forth to wrestle with the difficulties held in store for them. New students will come to take our places. The future is theirs, but today is ours. Today, Graduation Day, will be remembered by us as a day of mingled emotions of regret and rejoicement, gratitude and hope, tinged with fear. It is a day which naturally invites retrospection and as we look back and think over the Hospital years there arises within us a flood of thoughts that do lie too deep for words. Today will always be remembered by us, who are the principal actresses in this short scene of life's drama, and just as today brings to the minds of former graduates memories of their graduation, so in future will other graduation days recall to us pleasant memories of our own. Should it not be so? Is not this the day for which we have labored and studied during the past three years? Have we not longed for this day when we could realize our ambitions and set out to do our professional work? These ambitions are now realized, but with the joy of realization comes the bitterness of separation. We who have, during this time, studied and worked together and have felt the bonds of friendship tighten around us, soon, soon must part. We have become linked by that chain of mutual affection which we trust will bind us closer in the coming years. We feel that we have friends on whom we may rely as friendships formed in youth are lasting; they sound the depth of our finer emotions and bring out what is best in us.

The kind friends assembled here this evening merit from us the courtesy of a passing word. We appreciate the respect and the admiration that your presence indicates. We hope this occasion holds some thing of interest and entertainment for each one of you and we cordially bid you all a friendly adieu. Our Training School, under the competent guidance of our skillful doctors and devoted sisters, has striven zealously to impart to us the knowledge which is essential in our work. We have delved ever deeper into the depths of the fonts from which faith and science flow and our minds have been enriched. We have found that we made no mistake when we enrolled as student nurses in the Charlottetown Hospital. She has made our interests her interests, our advancement and success her especial concern, and now she sends us forth with the best she can give us, bids us to be heroes in the strife, each one to be "the ideal nurse."

The ideal nurse is the nurse who is actuated by the service ideal. She is one whose motto is, "Service to God, through service to humanity." In order for the nurse to render this service she must be prepared. The ideal nurse is prepared. She possesses the three essentials of preparedness—character, professional knowledge, and professional skill in the highest degree. She has gained them through the influence of her parents, instructors and supervisors, also through reading, experience and observation—all with the aid of God through prayer.

Character includes many things. The ideal nurse with the good character has a strong, healthy body, is energetic, refined, polite, and has a good standard of taste. She has sound principles of conduct and lively faith and always thinks first and most of her soul which God has given her. She has a well trained will with many acquired habits or virtues. She not only has a strong will power but it is active and persevering.

With character alone the ideal nurse could not fulfill her desire of service but she has more than that. She has knowledge and skill which she must possess in order to render effective service. Florence Nightingale had a good, strong character and an overwhelming desire to serve humanity, but she fully realized she was not capable of doing this effectively without professional knowledge. It was because of her intelligent preparation that she was able to give the service for which she is remembered today. Good, sound knowledge is essential to all successful work.

The ideal nurse fulfills all her duties cheerfully and obediently. She knows her first obligation is to her patient; her second, to her doctors and, her hospital, and the third is to her fellow students and nurses. In every respect she thinks first of her patient because she is to act as God's messenger in comforting suffering people.

The ideal nurse's life is not a life of sacrifice, it is just a fulfillment of her dearest wish—usefulness. She is not merely a self-sacrificing heroine but a girl who loves her work. To her, nursing is not only a profession but a calling, and while she is leading this life of an intensely physical and intellectual activity, there is another life that must be lived along side it or rather conjointly with it—her spiritual life. For she is not a machine created merely for the service of her fellowman, though that itself is high purpose, but her's is the mission of every other reasonable being—to glorify God through the sanctification of an immortal soul. The very success of her life professionally will depend in no small measure on the success of that life which is within. For it must ever be true that it profits a man nothing to gain the world, much less a diploma, and do so with the loss of spiritual treasure.

A discreet silence in all things professional must ever be the watchword of successful nursing. There is a particular fascination and attraction in gruesome things, and the nurse who does not keep a well guarded tongue may easily become a social attraction as a narrator of the events and incidents which go to make up her daily routine.

In the future we behold good and evil, the pleasure and pain of life mingled in a frightful confusion. We recognize the bode of hope and fear and the evil effects of the snares which are set to entrap those who are easily led astray. But one also beholds the great store of opportunity for each one of us and so, with these ideals in mind and sustained by hope and trusting to this training we have received, we step forward in the march with the bright motto, "Minimis Mihi," enscrolled on our ensign, to join the ranks of many others who are so admirably helping our suffering people. Is it any wonder then, that on such a day as this, your graduates should pause to say, "Farewell!"

This word has aroused the deepest feelings of our hearts. It has moved men to tears and furnished such beautiful sentiments for poetry.

So loathe we part from all we love,
From all the links that bind us,

So turn our hearts, as on we rove
To those we left behind us.

To Your Excellency, our beloved Bishop, and Reverend Fathers, our debt to you we cannot repay. Your guidance and advice have been the counsel of God Himself. Your work has been imprinted on our characters and it will be our staff in the struggles to come. With a knowledge and appreciation of this gift from you we say, "Farewell." To Reverend Sister Superior, Sister Superintendent and Sisters, and members of the Medical Staff—words cannot express the emotions of our hearts.

During the past few years we have been entrusted to your intimate care and instruction. The prudence, patience, and perseverence you practised in preparing us to become worthy graduates has made on us a lasting impression. We humbly and sincerely hope to cancel at least a part of our indebtedness by striving to keep you as models before our minds' eye and so regulate our conduct in life in a manner becoming graduates of the Charlottetown Hospital.

From morn till noon, from noon till night,
From night till hours of wakening light,
From days to weeks, from weeks to years,
Through rain and shine, through smiles and tears.

God bless you—farewell.

To fellow graduate nurses, the friendships formed during our training period have been the closest and without doubt they will be lasting. The words we have spoken to one another, the light quips, the mutual jokes, and the friendly chats will remain forever in our memories. Even when we have been parted we shall yet remain united mentally and the success of one will mean happiness to us all. Farewell! A word that must be and has been a sound which makes us linger.

To the students who remain after us, the sands of time will soon run their course and you also will be standing at the entrance of your careers. Take advantage of the opportunities and teachings and apply yourselves assiduously to your work, and above all, enjoy the friendships of your fellow nurses while you can.

So, treasure the time that remains, make good use of it so that you may go out into the world with a fuller and more complete knowledge of the obligations you owe to life. Farewell to you and to all.

IN MEMORIAM

JOHN T. HARRINGTON

On the 6th instant the parish of St. Theresa, Morell, lost one of its most distinguished citizens, through the death of Mr. John T. Harrington. The deceased was a son of the late Peter E. Harrington and a nephew of the late Chief Justice Sir W. W. Sullivan. He was born at Norboro, P. E. I., in 1869 and lived there as a prosperous farmer until 6 years ago. In 1929 he sold his farm at Norboro, and bought another near Morell Village, where he lived until the time of his death.

Mr. Harrington was a sociable neighbor, an intelligent conversationalist and a devoted husband and father.

The many messages of condolence and expressions of sympathy offered show the high esteem in which Mr. Harrington was held by his fellow parishioners.

He leaves to mourn him his widow, and two children, Miss Molly and Mr. Kempes; and two sisters, Miss Ida Harrington of Souris, Mrs. Patrick Hughes of Norboro, one brother, Mr. William of Souris.

The funeral service was held in St. Theresa's Church, Morell. Rev. Father Rooney officiated at the grave.

The pall bearers were: Mr. Ernest Rossiter, Mr. Edward Rossiter, Mr. Frank Kelly, Mr. John Burns, Mr. John Keefe, and Mr. James O'Brien.

May his soul enjoy eternal peace.

Aged Man Found Dead In S'side

Body Of James Mayhew Discovered Lying Over Table In Home.

Mr. James Mayhew, an old man of 89 years, who had been living alone for some time, was found dead yesterday afternoon about 12.40 lying on his back across the table in the kitchen of his home on East St., Summerside.

John Harkness, who lives on King Street, was returning to his work at Robinson's Mill and as he was passing the house some children told him they had not seen any smoke from the flue for two days and had not seen the old man about. He went into the yard and looked in the window and saw Mayhew lying on his back over the the table. He tried the door and found it was locked. He immediately notified Chief of Police Kinch, who on arriving upon the scene broke open the door. The police found the old man's body, which was cold as indicating that death had occurred some time before. The deceased did not have his boots on and it would appear as if he had got up to kindle the fire and had been taken suddenly ill.

Dr. Tanton, coroner, was sent for and on finding the man dead called a jury together who viewed the body in the house. The following comprised the jury: Foreman, Chester Palmer, Ben Tanton, George Keyes, Golding Delaney, Elias Bishop, John Harkness and Alex MacArthur. The inquest was then adjourned until this morning at nine o'clock.

An autopsy on the body was performed last night. As the deceased had no near relatives the police took charge of the man's affairs and notified his daughter, Mrs Minnie MacPhee of North Cohasset, Mass.

Mr. Mayhew was born in Tryon and had farmed for many years in North Carleton. About twenty years ago he came to Summerside to live. He leaves four daughters and one son. His wife predeceased him some few years ago. The man was last seen by the neighbours on Saturday night. It is thought that he had been dead since Sunday.

Valleyfield Meeting Favours Potato Bonus Plan

At a meeting held in the hall at Valleyfield on Wednesday, May 15th, attended by the potato growers of the district, and members of the Women's Institute, the following motions were unanimously adopted.

Moved by Mr. Wallace MacPherson and seconded by Mr. Munro Bruce that the potato growers of Valleyfield join in a movement with the other districts on Prince Edward Island in petitioning the Federal Government to pay a bonus on the Island potato crop of 1934. That this bonus be $20.00 per acre on and up to 5 acres. For the 1935 crop, it was moved by Mr. B. A. Weatherbie and seconded by Mr. Wallace MacPherson that up to and including 100 acres, the acreage planted should not exceed 5 acres, after that 2 acres planted for every 100 acres additional. The Federal Government has from time to time come to the assistance of farmers in other provinces, and no such assistance has ever been given to the P. E. Island potato growers, notwithstanding the fact that they have for several years lost considerable money in the present crisis.

Signed,—J. A. MacPherson, M. Bruce, J. K. Martin, A. McLeod, Secretary.

The meeting opened with the Institute President Mrs. W. A. Bruce presiding. She explained the object of the meeting and stated that similar action had been taken throughout the province. The Institute Secretary read a letter from Sanford Phillips, O'Leary requesting that a meeting be held and resolutions prepared and forwarded to him at an early date. Discussion was entered into concerning restriction of acreage. A great many of the farmers felt that the future of the potato industry was endangered by speculators, who did not have agriculture as a primary interest and therefore the financial stability of the industry depended on a restriction of speculators.

DUBLIN — The Abbey Theatre's board of directors has been strengthened by the addition of Senator Ernest Blythe, Brinsley MacNamara and F. R. Higgins.
