Interesting Pictures in Art Exhibit

Today and during the next two afternoons, including New Year's, there will be on view to the public at the Harris Memorial Gallery a collection of fifty-two pictures, the work of artists from Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia.

The greater number are in oils but there are also watercolors both in transparent paint and in tempera colors as well as one lithograph, a charcoal drawing, a color-gel crayon and a linoleum-cut.

Prizes there are fewer landscapes than in former shows. Artistic living in sea port towns are no longer permitted to do any outside sketching in the vicinity, as a war precaution, and accordingly some of them have turned their attention to flower studies, still life and portrait painting.

Here variety amply manifests itself. The work of recognized professional hangs beside that of amateurs and students just out of Art School. The visitor to the gallery would do well to bear this fact in mind. Among the pictures are those showing simple pictorial handling, decorative treatment, leaning towards a more formal design, certain studies and quick and fleeting impressions. They vary from strong dashy sketches to delicate work almost resembling that of the miniature painter.

There is one oil painting of Lunenburg fishermen at work beside their boats. The painter of this scene was crippled through illness in early childhood and lost the use of both hands and feet. His unimpaired spirit still prevails and confined to his wheel chair with his brush held between his lips he continually paints the life he sees around him. This is not the only picture in this exhibition with a story behind it were one free to tell it.

Wealth of Color

Two others which attract the attention are flower studies. They are noticeable because each is a composition of zinnias—the same kind of flower—Why then are they so different? One may ask. The flowers in the first are grouped against a dark background with the colors of the blossoms repeated in the drapery of the foreground. The bright sun is shining full upon the whole resulting in a wealth of glorious color—golden orange edged with vermilion, turning into deep crimson and still deeper violet. All this sparkles against the contrasting green of the leaves. The picture dances in the sun and makes one glad to be alive.

A little to the left is the other one of the same subject—a bunch of zinnias—It is none the less delightful but as different as can be. These flowers were arranged in a rich glazed dark colored pot against a window. They have a soft light coming from behind and the picture penetrates through the petals and sometimes merely glancing over the rim of a blossom leaving the greater part in shade. This picture is more solemn than the former but in this half light and darker is found a sweetness of color that is lost in the glamour of

Italy sets up Dinner table Dictatorship

ROME, Dec. 29 (AP)—Italy set up a dictator of the dinner table today with absolute control over the appeasement of the national appetite.

The man, chosen by law to regulate the production and consumption, exportation and importation of food for civilians and fighting forces alike, was the Minister of Agriculture, Giuseppe Tassinari, 49, perhaps Italy's foremost authority on agricultural economy.

The law, issued late Saturday night, was praised today by Virginio editor of Il Giornale D'Italia, as one which he claimed provided a long felt "united command" on the food front.

It decreed death penalties for extreme cases of food hoarding or destruction of prime materials and agricultural products and tripled already severe penalties for violations of laws on pooling, wholesaling and distribution of food.

brilliant light. Here is nobility of form and structure which results in a simple dignity. It is a picture whose charm ever increases the more you look upon it.

There is something lovely in all young things and Maritime Art as a united movement is still in its early childhood—but such a child—full of vitality, enthusiasm, and courage—and sometimes humour.

You who visit this exhibition are eye-witnesses to a phase of history in its making—to the beginnings of things which may have a far reaching effect in the future. You are viewing the work of people who believe that there is still a spark of balance and poise in an upset world and it must be kept alive.

TRINITY UNITED CHURCH

The speaker at the morning service of Trinity Church was Rev. Hugh Miller. He spoke on the words found in James 1:17: "Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning." There are great thoughts contained in this text, the concepts of God as the bountiful giver of all good things, as the creator and embodiment of light, and the unchanging, eternal Spirit. By making use of God's great gift in Christ Jesus, this unchanging, eternal spirit of God will abide with us throughout the years to come and make their burden lighter.

The choir sang the anthem, "See Amid the Winter's Snow," the solo parts being taken by Mr. Arthur Hertz and Miss Berna Huettis. A solo, "Come Unto Him" was sung by Miss Margaret Sterns.

In the evening, Rev. Donald Boothroy spoke on the theme "The Church Looks Forward." This is the season in which every one reviews the past and cherishes hopes for the future, and it is well at this season for Christians to think of the future of the Church. Church betterment must have its root in individuals, and it is only as each church member cleanses his heart of sin that the church as a whole will prosper. The ideal toward which we must strive in this new year is a working, working church which knows no creed or color, but is the living expression of Christ, our Lord.

The choir greatly enriched the service by an admirable rendition of the following Christmas carols: "Angels From the Realms of Glory," "See Amid the Winter's Snow," "Carol, Sweetly Carol," "The Holly and the Ivy," "As Joseph was A-Walking," "Whence Is This Goodly Fragrance?" a duet by Miss Doris Pratt and Miss Margaret Sterns.

LONDON. (CP)— Flashlight batteries will be "plentiful" this winter, the Board of Trade has announced. However, citizens are asked to use their "torch" sparingly to conserve shipping space in import steamers.

In Memoriam

In loving memory of John MacQuarrie who died two years ago today.

Gone but not forgotten by wife and family.

In Memoriam

BROTHER HUGH F. CONNORS
Died December 30, 1939.

There are two graves now on the hillside. Death called both away. Their memory still lingers as they lie behind to meet those above who were waiting for them in their everlasting home where pain and suffering end and happiness prevails for evermore.

They suffered long in silence till God called them away. Their friends stood around with faces bathed in tears, Hands powerless to help, And their grief and sorrows were over And we are left to bear ours alone Their souls have gone aloft to be with their Creator.

I love the days of childhood When all of us were there, In our dear old home our paths in life parted.

The ties of childhood broken when they passed away, Never will their memory fade! Thoughts shall ever linger Round the spot where they are laid, Now they are gone to their long home where pain and suffering are ended And happiness evermore reigns. Interred by Sister M. C. Amherst, N. S. L-810-12-30-11.

THE BAPTIST CHURCH

The importance and responsibility of the home was eloquently emphasized in the morning sermon by the Rev. I. Judson Levy, B.A., in his sermon on Religion in the Home. At home, they ceased not to teach and to preach Jesus Christ," says the book of The Acts of the Apostles regarding the practice of the early church.

There are two assumptions on which we may make our stand this morning. The first is that in an age in which we are living many people are becoming acutely conscious that there are certain values so great to us as individuals, as a nation that they must be preserved at any cost. Some of these have been long taken for granted. Freedom has been taken for granted, religious values have been taken for granted and today both are savagely menaced. Reconstruction is before us and this presents a greater task as to be beyond the power of this generation. To preserve the values of the past we must make plans and preparations that reach into the indefinite future.

Accepting these assumptions it is ours to become more truly conscious of the childhood in our homes, our schools, our communities. Our hope is in the childhood of the world. For a better world our chief influences are the church, the school and the home, and the greatest of these is the home. If the home ceases to be the challenge and need of the time a better world will emerge. If the home fails the cause is hopeless and the cause is lost. The home must co-operate with the church. The home must live in an atmosphere with high Christian and moral standards. The home must be zealous in the task of definite religious instruction.

The morning anthem was "Infant Jesus," with Mrs. John Inch taking the solos. The church school with its various organized classes and groups met at 2:30 p.m.

At the evening service Mr. Levy's sermon was "A Voice Out of the Past." Van De Water's "Night of Nights" was the evening anthem. It was intimated that on Tuesday evening, December 31, there would be a Watch Night Service in the Baptist church, from 11:30 p.m. to midnight.

The elephant down in the trench at right is Babe, 25-year-old pachyderm of San Francisco's Fleishacker Zoo. Fracing around, she over-pranced herself into the ten-foot deep barrier around the elephant pens. Keepers hope to have her out of the trench by Christmas. Meanwhile, her pal Mae, left, seems to be offering her a helpful foot.
