

The Baby Sick?

Then probably it's a cold. Babies catch cold so easily and recover so slowly. Not slowly, however, when you use Vapo-Cresolene. Then a single night is all that is necessary for a cure. You just put some Cresolene in the vaporizer, light the lamp beneath, and place near the crib. While baby sleeps he breathes in the healing vapor. Cold loosens, inflamed membranes heal, and all trouble ceases. It's a perfect specific for whooping-cough and croup.

WRITING ACADEMY

CH'TOWN, P. E. I.
This College re-opened for the Fall and Winter Course on

THURSDAY, AUG. 14, PROX

Intending students will consult their own interests by entering as soon as possible after the date of opening. Last year we were most successful in placing our students in positions. To enable us to do the same this year they must enter early in the session. There are lots of splendid positions waiting for competent persons to fill.

Business men are acquainted with our course and method of instruction and apply to us for competent young men and women. Come and get a live education; one with some backbone in it. If, perchance, you have made a mistake in the past, try an education in which you will be rewarded as you exert yourself. The past is gone, the future is yours. A special course in Shortland and Typewriting will be given as soon as the term begins. "Phonography What it is and What it Does," by Ben Pitman; also full particulars relative to the College will be cheerfully furnished on application to

VIGOROUS PROTESTS AGAINST SALOONS,

The Management of the Steel Company Ask That the Liquor Traffic be Suppressed in That Town.

SYDNEY, Oct. 9.—Both the Dominion Iron and Steel Company and the Dominion Coal Company are directly affected by the sale of liquor in Sydney. In a letter to Mayor Crowe the management make a vigorous protest against the existence of saloons and that immediate steps be taken to suppress the traffic. They point out that it seriously interferes with the work and output and adds enormously to the danger of accidents. A crusade against the saloon keepers will likely be commenced in earnest and if need be Pinkerton detectives may be secured.

The letter to Mayor Crowe says in part: "It has been a matter of serious concern to the officials of this company that men who were not previously addicted to drinking to excess, have, since coming here, acquired the habit. Frequently after pay day, it has been difficult to find men enough to carry on the work of some of the departments.

"This state of affairs is a direct injury to this company, for it reduces the output, increases the cost, and injures the efficiency of its employees, and obviously has a very bad effect upon the life and progress of Sydney.

"This state of affairs also hampers, the growth of the town, because it deters other concerns from starting. The first thing considered by people proposing to start a new industry is the condition of the labor element. If that class is demoralized by excessive drinking, the people intending to commence a new enterprise or to make an investment would be prevented from doing so.

While it is the feeling of the company that the Canada Temperance Act is not the form of legislation it would recommend for this community, in as much as a good regulation of the sale of liquor is sufficient to meet the needs of industrial works, the unlimited sale of intoxicating drinks being now carried on, necessitates this appeal for the enforcement of the only law that can at this time relieve what it considers a bad situation.

A house in the course of construction on the Caribou marsh road, owned by James Brown, was lifted by yesterday's hurricane high in the air and came down a hundred feet from the foundation broken to pieces.

An invitation will be extended by the town of Sydney through Messrs. J. B. Lambkin and C. B. Foster of the I. C. R. and C. P. R. respectively, to the Canadian Passengers Agents Association to meet in Sydney at their annual session.

THE PALMIST AND THE POPE.

The diary of M. Desbarrolles, the clever palmist who for years traveled about Europe enlightening sovereigns and meaneer mortals on their various aptitudes, contains curious details about an interview he had with Leo XIII, who, strange to say, is inclined to believe in palmistry.

Desbarrolles begins by discussing the hands of the Holy Father: "Poor, bloodless little hands," he says, "emerging from white silk mittens which were evidently too tight for them. They are not fat and comfortable, like those of most of the church dignitaries who surround him; not hard and wiry as were said to be those of Sextus V., who was a worker and carved many of the chairs arranged against the walls of the antechambers in the Vatican; not energetic-looking, like those of the soldier-Pope Julius II., or bloated and swollen, like the hands of apoplectic and hydropic Pius IX.; they are like two tiny ivory jewels, colder than the big sapphire surrounded with brilliant which he offers to the lips of his adorers. These hands, the touch of which is weird and almost unearthly, never answer by a pressure ever so slight, to that of a friend, but are full of reserve and never responsive.

The lines which are in them are not so numerous as one would have expected, because there is only one set of these, those which correspond to the brain. There are none visible coming from the heart.

"Most likely a human and perhaps kind heart is beating under the Pope's red mantle, but he has always kept it under the mastership of a powerful mind—a mind decidedly inclined towards politics; too much so, in fact, for a holy prelate; and when I ventured to point out this trait of character I saw the lightless eyes of Leo XIII. blink and become as cold as those of a serpent; he was not pleased, and showed it by quickly withdrawing his hand from mine. I did not see avarice in the hand of Leo XIII. though he is said to be somewhat parsimonious; but he is at once a close reckoner and a strangely careless man about money matters.

"One knows, for instance, his almost ludicrous adventure with Monsignor Fochi, his ex-treasurer. An enormous sum of money, which had been sent in a bag of crimson velvet by the Roman Catholic people of New York, was nowhere to be found, and the wretched cardinal much distressed by the anger of His Holiness, was sent about in the Vatican and even to the police, with strict orders to trace the lost treasure. When he came back to the palace in a state of great distress—for his errand had been fruitless—he found the Pope blandly smiling. 'I must apologize,' he said quietly. 'You were scarcely gone when I remembered that I had placed the bag in this little recess.'

"The hand of Your Holiness is often full," Desbarrolles said. "And Your Holiness knows exactly what is in it." On which the prelate, with a sort of childish gesture, laughed softly, rubbing his knee with his left hand.

"I saw on the hands of the Pope," Desbarrolles continues, "the gift of a wonderful memory, and also the love of all that is gorgeous and imposing. When I told him so, he answered, naively, 'Are not our beautiful ceremonies the only vehicle for bringing people into our churches, the women especially?'

"Besides these lines, I saw all those which are visible on the hands of painters, architects, poets, and even engineers. No wonder that one sees installed in the palace all the modern inventions, and that the first thing Leo XIII. did when he came to live in the Vatican was to put into corners, as mere ornaments, the wick lamps used by Pius IX. Gas was installed at once, but a few years ago this was discarded, and electric light is now shining all over the palace. Leo XIII. has a hydraulic lift to carry him up to his tower in the gardens, and a cardinal related to me how His Holiness spent a whole day talking and listening at the new telephone which he had installed between his summer residence and the palace."

After Desbarrolles had told him all that he read in his hand, he heard His Holiness mumble between his teeth, "A Jack-of-all-trades, then?"

"Who would have become a master in each of them," courteously answered the palmist.

The Pope sighed. "Better be the Father of all men, M. Desbarrolles," he said; "at least," he corrected, "if you see in my hand that I am worthy of my mission!"

NOTHING LIKE

Paine's Celery Compound

For Cleansing and Purifying The Blood.

It Eradicates the Seeds of Disease, Invigorates and Rejuvenates.

Thousands of men and women who have neglected the work of physical recuperation in the summer months, are now carrying a burden of disease. In the majority of cases, impure and poisoned blood and sluggish circulation are the direct cause of suffering and misery. Are you reader, one of the victims? If so, do not hesitate a moment regarding what you should do. The life stream must be made pure, the catch-wrecking laxing of the blood vessels must be corrected, the nerves and tissues must be nourished, Paine's Celery Compound is the medicine that physicians recommend for the increase of pure blood in the arteries, and for arousing the purifying organs to cast off the impurities that give rise to disease. Mr. T. F. Mitchell, New Hamburg, Ont., writes as follows: "My mother suffered for five years with a sore leg, and her system was so far run down that doctors could not help her. She tried almost everything to procure a cure, but no good results came until Paine's Celery Compound was used, which gave her instant relief. She is now using the third bottle and able to do her own work."

"SAVED ME FROM DEATH."

A Toronto Contractor Says Dodd's Kidney Pills are Worth Their Weight in Gold to a Sick Man.

TORONTO, Ont., Oct. 13th.—(Special).—Five or six years ago Mr. W. J. Keane, of 86 Lippincott St., this city, was an invalid, confined to his bed with a severe case of Lane Back and Kidney Trouble. He says:—

"A friend advised Dodd's Kidney Pills but as I had used so many other medicines without any good results I had little faith that anything would cure me. I had only used part of the first box however, when I found that my condition was rapidly improving. I used altogether seven boxes and was completely cured. As this was over four years ago and the trouble has not returned in any form. I am now sure that my cure was a perfect and permanent one.

"I believe Dodd's Kidney Pills saved me from death. They are worth their weight in gold to a sick man."
