TROUBLE BREWING.—The Guardian war correspondent in Mexico, P. E. Island, writes as follows: 'Cur usually quiet and peaceful community is now on the verge of civil war. Every effort is being put forward by the more peace loving portion of our citizens to prevent open hostilities, but their efforts are seemingly all in vain.'

It seems some time last summer Miss James organized an Institute in our district. For some time all went well. Cooking contests were held, papers were read, and we have no doubt discussed with ability. But after solving every problem in connection with the culinary art and reducing the once laborious household duties, as performed by our mothers, to a science, our good and public spirited ladies began to long for other realms to conquer.

But here the trouble started. It was thought the newspaper accounts of those concerts were very unfair. Some of the performers got too much advertising while others were compelled to bear their blushing honours without being mentioned at all, and that was hard to stand.

Be it known unto you there are a number of swains in this 'Burg' who think it is much better to flirt some other day, than it is to stand up and promise to love, honour and obey and then go home and fight it out.
