Ellen's Diary

By an Island Farmer's Wife

in their day upon earth had come through much toil and hardship for the sake of posterity, building, like others in the history of our Island Province even "better than they knew" for us who followed.

It is a sacred celebration, fraught with poignant thoughts, and often tears given in sad and loving remembrance fall unbidden. The speaker for the occasion, a guest, chose as a most appropriate text "Being dead, yet speaketh" and recalled as he spoke, the memory of many a sainted one, though most humble, whose influence had long remained and shall, I fancy ever remain in the hearts of those they had left behind, which of course is "not to die" in the delightful late summer day, many interested came from distances, and these were among the number who after service lingered beside the graves of their folk, doubtless recalling many scenes that returned to them from former years, pictures of family circles then unbroken, of hearing the Word together, from an old familiar pew.

A new grave in the old churchyard tonight, one which holds a small white casket. There all that was mortal of a babe, a little new, only child was laid to rest this afternoon. She was one who had been born most hopefully to her young parents, and then in ways that are mysterious to humans, taken suddenly away. Bonnie as the folks here sather, this small one was and already very precious to her loved ones. And when sometimes, even as that young mother might, I consider death to be dark and fearsome forgetting for the moment it is but a door which opens "unto light." I read the "Prayer for the Dead" and the "Vigil Service" who to have written the touching lines must herself have experienced a like sad loss.

"God, God, be lenient her first night there. The crib she slept in was so near my bed; Her pink and white wool blanket was so soft, Her pillow hollowed so to fit her head.

Teach me that she'll not want small rooms or me When she has You and Heaven's immensity!

I always left a light out in the hall, I hoped to make her fearless in the dark; And yet, she was so small—one little light, Not in the room, it scarcely mattered. Hark!

No, no she seldom cried! God, not too far, For her to see this first night, light a star!

And in the morning, when she first woke up, I always kissed her on the left cheek where Reverend K. MacDonald and Mr. L. Ayers congratulated the young couple with fitting remarks.

Just, just tomorrow morning, God, I pray, When she wakes up, do things for her my way!

Until tomorrow — Diary — Good-night.

MacPhee-Coady Wedding

In St. Joachim's Church, Vernon River on August 11th, 1947, Mary Mildred Coady, daughter of Edward and the late Mrs. Coady, was united in Holy Bonds of matrimony to George Joseph MacPhee, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Angus MacPhee of Cardigan, N.S. Rev. Mr. Maurice McDonald officiated.

The altar was beautifully decorated by Mrs. James Praught and Mrs. Joseph MacDonald, friends of the bride.

Present in the sanctuary was Rev. Dr. Louis P. Oallaghan, cousin of the bride. The altar was beautifully decorated by Mrs. James Praught and Mrs. Joseph MacDonald, friends of the bride.

During the Nuptial Mass beautiful hymns were sung by the young choir assisted by Mr. Alphonus MacIntyre and Miss Mary Collins, organist.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a lovely floor length gown of white sheer over taffeta, and a flowered halo with a shoulder veil, and carried a bouquet of sweet peas.

The happy couple were attended by the bride's sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. John A. MacDonald.

Mrs. MacDonald wore a floor length dress of blue net over taffeta with a matching flowered halo and veil and carried a bouquet of gladioli.

The groom's gift to the bride was a beautiful white pearl necklace and earrings. After the ceremony the wedding party and immediate relatives left for the Towers Restaurant, Ch'town, where a beautiful wedding breakfast was served.

Later in the day the bridal party left on a motor tour to different parts of the Maritimes.

On their return a sumptuous wedding supper was held at the home of the bride's parents, where many neighbours and friends gathered to celebrate the happy event with the newly wedded couple.

Their popularity was duly attested by the many beautiful and valuable gifts which they received on that occasion.

In addition the bride was given a miscellaneous shower before and after her marriage.

The pre-nuptial event took place at her home in Vernon River, and was given to her by her girl friends, while the post nuptial one was held in Vernon Hall and given by her new neighbours of Vernon.

Bridge where many beautiful and useful gifts were received.

All join in wishing Mr. and Mrs. George MacPhee many years of happy wedded life.

St. Eugene's Church, Covehead, was the scene of a pretty wedding on Wednesday morning of September 3rd at 8:30 o'clock, when Anna Marion, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. McCabe, Stanhope, was united in the Holy Bonds of Matrimony to Reginald Francis, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Duncan MacDonald of Charlottetown, by the Reverend Leonard Ayers, who also celebrated the Nuptial Mass. The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion with summer flowers and fern.

Mrs. Joseph Dougan was the organist, while appropriate hymns were beautifully sung by Clark MacAulay.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white satin having lace yokes and poplin, full skirt and long pointed sleeves. Her floor-length veil was arranged with a sweetheart headpiece. She carried a bouquet of red roses with long streamers.

Her sister Kaye as bridesmaid wore a gown of blue sheer, her fingertip veil of matching colors was held in place with a coronet of roses. She carried a bouquet of pink roses.

Supporting the groom was Mr. Cecil Costello while the ushers were Messrs. McCabe, brother of the bride, and Mr. Preston Curley. The bride's mother wore a pale blue figured silk dress with matching accessories and a corsage of roses and fern.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Queen Hotel for the relatives and friends of the bride and groom.

The toast to the bride was proposed by Mr. Connie Leclair, which was responded to by the groom, after which Reverend K. MacDonald and Mr. L. Ayers congratulated the young couple with fitting remarks.

After the reception the bridal party visited Sister James' sister of the bride, at St. Vincent's Orphanage.

On the evening plane the bride and groom left for Moncton to spend their honeymoon. The bride chose a light grey suit with black accessories for travelling, and a corsage of pink roses.

Mr. and Mrs. MacDonald will reside in Charlottetown.

THE KIRK PULPIT

Preaching last evening, the Minister, the Rev. T. H. B. Somers, said, "What the world needs above all else today is consecrated character, and that is just what service in small things shows. Great services reveal our possibilities. Small services reveal our consecration. And in the latter, rather than in the former, lies our best hope of influencing the world. Bridge-builders build our bridges seven or eight times stronger than the ordinary traffic needs. And bridges are rarely tested to the utmost. They do their best work carrying the daily loads. Still, if the strain should come, the strength is there. So you and I have latent powers and slumbering capacities. And some day, perhaps, all shall be needed. But now—today—it is in life's common traffic, and the brave carrying of life's common loads that we shall serve best and glorify God in a consecrated life. "Seekest thou great things for thyself? Seek them not." God brings the glory of the autumn-hills out of a million indecipherable golden leaves. God brings the glory of the rainbow out of a million indistinguishable raindrops. And God can bring the glory of a consecrated character out of that countless multitude of little deeds that form our daily life.

So we finally reached this decision: When I feel that the young lady really merits his approval, I will tell him when to whistle. The absurdity of this plan amuses him no end and has turned the whole matter into a family joke. With diplomacy and a sense of ridiculous, how unnecessary and foolish to tangle over trifles! MRS. JOHN S. K. ANSWER: How true and how blessed beyond his deserts is the man who has a wife with a sense of humor, instead of being over-pleased with her ducts. It is only too true that a wife can laugh her husband out of his follies, when she could never cure him of them with all the reproaches and nagging in the world. DEAR MISS DIX: My mother-in-law, who did not want her son to marry anyone, is trying to break up our marriage by spreading false tales about me. What shall I do to stop her? UNHAPPY WIFE. ANSWER: Have a lawyer go to her and tell her that you are going to sue her for libel, and that she will have to prove in court the truth of the charges she is making against you. That will stop her in her tracks.
