Science for this new hygienic pad that discards easily as tissue — no laundry

THERE is now an exquisite successor to the old-time "sanitary pad." A new way that offers far greater protection. A way that ends the old problem of disposal.

Eight in 10 better-class women now use "KOTEX."

Discards as easily as a piece of tissue. No laundry. No embarrassment.

Five times as absorbent as ordinary cotton pads.

Deodorizes, thus ending ALL danger of offending.

Obtainable at all drug and department stores simply by saying "KOTEX." You ask for it without hesitation.

Package of 12 costs only a few cents. Proves old ways a needless risk. In fairness to yourself, try it.

ISLANDER DIES IN MINNESOTA

Charles Clow died at his home in Humboldt on Monday, June 7, 1926, age 79 years, 3 months and 28 days. Death was due to heart trouble and came without warning. Deceased had been doing a little hoeing in his garden, apparently in his usual health and went into the house to get a drink of water. He dropped dead while standing near the wafer pad.

Charles Clow was born in Prince Edward Island. He came to this section in 1879 and had been a resident of Humboldt since that time. He always took a great interest in county politics and at one time was Clerk of the district court for this county and later was county commissioner for several terms. At different times he held many of the township and village offices and was at all times a careful and intelligent public officer.

A man of high ideals, a Christian gentleman who at all times through his long life took great interest in the churches of the community and the upbuilding of such Charles Clow was highly esteemed all over north Kiltown county. In his death this section loses a public spirited citizen who was a valuable asset to the community.

The funeral service was held at the residence at Humboldt at 1.30 p. m. Wednesday of this week. The service was conducted by Rev. Moore of Grand Forks, a friend of the deceased. The remains were laid to rest in the St. Vincent cemetery. The funeral procession was over five miles long and was a fitting testimonial of the high esteem in which the deceased was held in this community.

Surviving are the widow, three sons, Harry, Waldron and Chester the latter of Cavalier and two daughters, Mrs. W. F. Mackay and Mrs. Albert Brown.

The above is taken from the St. Vincent New Era of St. Vincent, Kiltown County, Minnesota, June 11th. Mr. Clow was a native of North Wiltshire, P. E. I.

The Man Nobody Knows

BY BRUCE BARTON

Instalment V THE ELEMENTS OF SUCCESS 2. Confidence

The second element in the success of Jesus was his wonderful power to pick men, and to recognize hidden capacities in them. It must have amazed Nicodemus when he learned the names of the twelve whom the young teacher had chosen to be his associates. What a list! Not a single well-known person on it. Nobody who had ever made a success of anything. A haphazard collection of fishermen and small town business men, and one tax collector—a member of the most hated element in the community. What a crowd! Nowhere is there such a startling example of executive success as the way in which that organization was brought together. Take the tax collector, Matthew, as the most striking instance. His occupation carried a heavy weight of social ostracism, but was profitable. He was probably well-to-do according to the simple standards of the neighborhood; certainly he was a busy man and not subject to impulsive action. His addition to the group of disciples is told in a single sentence:

"And as Jesus passed by, he called Matthew. . . . Amazing. No argument; no pleading. A smaller leader would have been compelled to set up the advantages of the opportunity. 'Of course you are doing well where you are and making money,' he might have said. 'I can't offer you as much as you are getting; in fact you may have some difficulty in making ends meet. But I think we are going to have an interesting time and shall probably accomplish a bit of work.' Such a conversation would have been met with Matthew's reply that he would 'have to think it over,' and the world would never have heard his name.

There was no such trifling with Jesus. As he passed by he called Matthew. No executive in the world can read that sentence without acknowledging that here indeed is the Master.

He had the born leader's gift for seeing powers in men of which they themselves were often almost unconscious. One day as he was coming into a certain town a tremendous crowd pressed around him. There was a rich man named Zacchaeus in the town; small in stature, but with such keen business ability that he had got himself generally disliked. Being curious to see the distinguished visitor he had climbed up into a tree. Imagine his surprise when Jesus stopped under the tree and commanded him to come down saying: "Today I intend to eat at your house." The crowd was stunned. Some of the bolder spirits took it upon themselves to tell Jesus of his social blunder. He couldn't afford to make the mistake of visiting Zacchaeus, they said. Their protests were without avail. They saw in Zacchaeus merely a dishonest little Jew; he saw in him a man of unusual generosity and a fine sense of justice, who needed only to have those qualities revealed by some one who understood. So with Matthew—the crowd saw only a despised tax-gatherer. Jesus saw the potential writer of a book which will live forever.

So also with that "certain Centurion," who is one of the anonymous characters in history that every business man would have liked to meet. The disciples brought him to Jesus with some misgivings and apology. They said: "Of course we have no Roman employee, and you may reprove us for introducing him. But really he is a very good fellow, a generous man and a respecter of our faith." Jesus and the Centurion looking at each other found an immediate bond of union—each responding to the other's strength. Said the Centurion:

"Master, my servant is ill; but it is unnecessary for you to visit my house. I understand how such things are done, for I, too, am an executive; I say to my man 'Go' and he goeth; and to another 'Come,' and he cometh; and to my servant, 'Do this,' and he doeth it. Therefore I know my servant will be healed."

Jesus' face kindled with admiration. "I have not found anywhere such faith as this," he exclaimed. This man understood him. Both were executives. They had the same problems and the same power; they talked the same language.

HARTSVILLE SCHOOL EXAMINATION

On June 30th, the semi-annual examination of Hartsville school was held with a large number of visitors and pupils present. The classes were conducted by their teacher, Miss Frances Bradley, and showed by their prompt and accurate answers that they had been skilfully instructed during the year. At the conclusion of the examination a short program, consisting of instrumental music, songs and recitations, was rendered. The teacher then presented Eugene Murray and Donald Nicholson, after which the pupils presented the teacher with a well-filled album. Miss Bradley thanked the pupils for their kindness and consideration. Many complimentary remarks were extended by those present to the teacher and pupils for their good showing. All present were treated to ice-cream refreshments. The singing of the National Anthem brought a successful examination to a close.

Them, James and John, got their mother to come to him and ask that her sons might sit, one on his right hand and one on his left. When the other ten heard of it they were angry with James and John; but Jesus never lost his patience. He believed that the way to get faith out of men is to show that you have faith in them; and from that great principle of executive management he never wavered.

Of all the disciples Simon was most noisy and aggressive. It was he who was always volunteering his advice, forever proclaiming the staunchness of his own courage and faith. One day Jesus said to him, "Before the cock crows tomorrow you will deny me thrice." Simon was indignant. (Though they killed him, he cried, he would never deny! Jesus merely smiled—and that night it happened. . . . A lesser leader would have dropped Simon. "You have had your chance," he would have said. "I am sorry but I must have men around me on whom I can depend. Jesus had the rare understanding that the same man will usually not make the same mistake twice. To this frail, very human, very likable ex-fisherman he spoke no word of rebuke. Instead he played a stroke of master strategy. "Your name is Simon," he said. "Hereafter you shall be called Peter." (A rock). It was daring, but he knew his man. The shame of the denial had tempered the iron of that nature like fire; from that time on there was no faltering in Peter, even at the death.

The Bible presents an interesting collection of contrasts in this matter of executive ability. Samson had almost all the attributes of leadership. He was physically powerful and handsome; he had the great courage to which men always respond. No man was ever given a finer opportunity to free his countrymen from the oppressors and build up a great place of power for himself. Yet Samson failed miserably. He could do wonders single-handed, but he could not organize. Moses started out under the same handicap. He tried to be everything and do everything; and was almost on the verge of failure. It was his father-in-law, Jethro, who saved him from calamity. Said that shrewd old man: "The thing that thou doest is not good. Thou wilt surely wear away, both thou and this people that is with thee, for thou art not able to perform it thyself alone."

Moses took the advice and associated with himself a partner, Aaron, who was strong where he was weak. They supplemented each other and together achieved what neither of them could have done alone.

John, the Baptist, had the same lack. He could denounce, but he could not construct. He drew crowds who were willing to repent at his command, but he had no program for them after their repentance. They waited for him to organize them for some sort of effective service, and he was no organizer. So his followers drifted away and his movement gradually collapsed. The same thing might have happened to the work of Jesus. He started with much less reputation than John and a much smaller group of followers. He had only twelve, and they were untrained simple men, with elementary weakness and passion. Yet because of the fire of his personal conviction, because of his marvelous instinct for discovering their latent powers, and because of his unwavering faith and patience, he molded them into an organization which carried on victoriously. Within very few years after his death, it was reported in a far off corner of the Roman Empire that "these who have turned the world upside down have come hither also. A few decades later the proud Emperor himself bowed his head to the teachings of this Nazareth carpenter, transmitted through common men.
