E. E. PARKMAN, Register of Optometrists' Montague will be at Harbor View Hotel, Georgetown, on Friday, Sept. 15th, from 1 till 5 to examine eyes and fit glasses. Sept. 9-5.

TALENTED TEACHER.—In the item which appeared recently in the Guardian re the Montague school teachers, Miss Neilson's name was inadvertently omitted. This is to be regretted as Miss Neilson has been one of our teachers for the past year, and has proved herself a capable and efficient official.

CORRECTION.—In announcing the arrival of Mrs. H. F. James, in Montague, it was mentioned in this column that she was accompanied by her three children. This was an unintentional error, as the three children who accompanied Mrs. James were a nephew of Mr. James, and the two little nieces of Mrs. W. A. Cumming.

—KENSINGTON SCHOOL AGAIN The adjourned meeting of the ratepayers of the Kensington High school was held in the town Hall there recently to further consider the providing of additional room in the school or elsewhere to accommodate the surplus pupils that the present conditions can offer. Dr. Lochart was elected chairman and Mr. A. L. Rogers Secty. Supplies were voted to cover expenses which passed on vote with little discussion. It was decided to install a fifth department in the school and to secure the best means to this end; so that during the winter preparations would be made to enlarge the present building. Principal Lowther tabled statistics to prove the necessity of increased accommodation and with little discussion and less conception, the rate-payers at once showed their intelligent conception of the situation by their efficient determination. The needs were rationally and consistently recognized and measures were taken to meet the exigencies of the evident demands. Y.

ALTITUDES

The recent magnificent attempt to scale the summit of Mount Everest reopens interest in the various methods by which heights can be ascertained.

The instrument which is used by the majority of mountaineers is the aneroid. This instrument has no mercury, but depends on a mechanical contraction of a thin metal plate for its method of registering the air pressure measurement. Ordinary mercurial barometers were also carried by the Mount Everest expedition, and the readings obtained from them were used to check the figures given by the aneroid.

Another method, which might be described as an unofficial way for above sea-level, is to determine the temperature at which water will boil. Water, owing to a curious phenomenon of the atmosphere, boils at about one degree (Fahr.) for every 590 feet climbed.

An instrument called a hypsometer, or boiling point thermometer, registers the boiling point at any altitude reached and therefore indirectly registers as well the height above sea-level.

The fact that the boiling point of water changes at varying altitudes, leads to many very strange situations. It is possible for the pressure of the air to be reduced by mountain climatic conditions, the boiling point is the same level as the freezing point.

In parts of South America there are monasteries on the mountain's sides, at heights of 10,000 to 14,000 feet, where water boils so quickly that it does not get hot enough to cook meat, potatoes, or other foods.

Fortunately, at that height human beings do not feel the urgent need for food felt at lower altitudes. During the last few days necessary for the final rush to a peak, such as Mount Everest, the mountaineers only require a little soup, chocolate, or biscuits.

PEACHES ROT ON TREES

ST. CATHERINES, Sept. 9.—Many peaches in the Niagara fruit belt will rot on the trees this season, while the rest of the country is clamoring for the fruit. The intense heat of the last day or two has ripened the crop fast, and the problem of getting it harvested and shipped is hard to solve. Thousands of baskets are going out daily from the fruit belt, but the vast crop, perhaps the biggest on record here, will not be all harvested by a large margin. As in the case of plums, the high carrying rates will be responsible for much wastage, because growers, discouraged by small returns will refuse to ship. Some have already stoned reports claim.

Marketing activities generally speaking, however, are widening this week Niagara peaches started on their way to England, and the experiment proves successful. It is expected that the Old Country market will prove a profitable one.

A FARMER'S COW

A dual purpose or farmer's cow, says the Breeders' Gazette, weighs 1,100 to 1,500 pounds, in good condition; gives 5,000 to 10,000 pounds of milk between her calvings; swings a capacious rudder, and when in fattens readily on good grass or ordinary feeds, grown and mixed on the farm. When slaughtered she yields a high percentage and a large poundage of marbled beef of good quality and flavor. She is accustomed to outdoor life and compelled to exercise her muscles, use her maternal instincts, and develop a well-knit skeleton of strong bones. She is, therefore, robust, possesses a strong constitution, and is more resistant to catch diseases than the average special beef or special dairy cow. For the same reason she is a more reliable and regular breeder. In a word, she is better adapted than any other kind of cow to the conditions and practical purposes of the thousands of farmers who cannot or will not engage in either specialized dairying or in beef cattle breeding and feeding as a major enterprise.

NO NEED TO CLIMB

It was a very wet night, and the last omnibus was full inside when the conductor asked, "Will any gentleman ride upon the top to oblige a lady?"

There was no response, so the inquiry was repeated. But again there was no reply.

"At last one of the male passengers remarked, "Are you sure she is a lady and not a poor woman?"

"Oh, yes, she is a lady," said the conductor without hesitation.

"A well dressed lady?" again asked the passenger.

"Yes, a thorough, well dressed, fashionable lady," said the conductor.

"Then I should think she can afford to take a cab home," said the passenger.—London Mail.

OILCLOTH FISHING BOATS

The oldest form of fishing boat is the coracle, which is still used by fishermen in the Cardigan district of West Wales.

Coracles were used by the ancient Britons. They are very fragile being made by covering a wicker frame work with leather or oilcloth. They hold one man only and are propelled by means of a hand paddle. When fishing, two of these craft work together with a net slung between them.

At the present moment coracle users are disturbed by the Fisheries Act, which controls the number of net licenses issued and empowers fishing boards to select the individuals to whom licenses may be granted. If this act passes Parliament, they declare, coracle fishing will become extinct.

FIRST THANKSGIVING
The first Thanksgiving was conducted by an English minister named Wolfall in 1578, on the shores of Newfoundland. The first celebration in the present territory of the United States was held in the Popham colony at Sagadahoc, on the coast of Maine, in 1607. The first regular appointment of a Thanksgiving day was by Governor Bradford, the first governor of Massachusetts bay.

AS THE ARABS SAY

Arabic, the language of most of the people of Northern Africa, contains some strange and often very wise proverbs and expressions.

When a Moor or Algerian undertakes to do anything, however small, he always qualifies his promise with the words "Cha Allah," meaning "God willing."

Another expression which you will often hear in Arabic is, "Never talk badly about those people whose bread and salt you have tasted." Europe would be an ideal place if this rule was strictly observed.

When a Moor does not wish to give to one of the persistent beggars who abound in Morocco, he says, "God will provide," and the poor wretch has to go away.

The Moorish saying that "A bad beginning foretells a good end" is the very opposite of our expression, "A good start is half the battle."

The extent to which they respect Britain and the British is shown by the two expressions, "The British hold the keys of the world," and "On the word of an Englishman," this latter expression being regarded as a binding oath, and for the use of which we may well be proud.

TYPES OF FEET

Among the various races of men three types of feet occur. Certain pure races have one type of toe which is characteristic of each race. Thus, the Zulus, the Basques and probably most pure Celts have the even toed foot, while the Papuans, the Boschmen and a number of African tribes, as well as both ancient and modern Egyptians, have the arch toed foot. Many European nations, however, have a mixture of the three types. But it is certain that among the English, and probably among the Germans, French and Greeks, the even toed foot is the commonest.—Strand Magazine.

SHOW VARIATION OF SUN-FLOWER

The commercial varieties of sunflower, tested so far at the Central Experimental Farm, have shown a variation in yield from as low as 10 tons per acre to as high as 23 tons. The most satisfactory of these varieties available to the farmer is the Mammoth Russian. The published results of other sunflower experiments in Canada and the United States are also fairly well in accord in recommending this variety as the safest proposition at the present time for the man who desires to grow sunflowers for silage.

OLD FAMILIES UNITED

LONDON, Sept. 9.—Members of two families famous in British and American history were quietly married to-day at Chris Church, Down Street London. The parties were Guy Edward Spencer Campbell, great grandson of Lord Edward Fitzgerald, the Irish patriot, and Miss Natalie Magruder, of Washington whose great uncle was a member of the cabinets of Presidents Monroe and Adams. Great precautions were taken to ensure privacy for the ceremony. The license was only obtained yesterday, and only about twenty friends were present in the church.

CUCUMBER BEETLES

Cucumber beetles, those little yellow and black striped pests which attack cucumbers and melons, can be controlled by the following mixture:

One part powdered calcium arsenate and 20 parts gypsum or land plaster by weight. Dust this on the plants, using a sack or metal dust-er so that the surface of the leaves and the ground around the plants are thoroughly coated. It is best to make the application early in the morning.
