THE WESTERN GUARDIAN

—IT PAYS TO buy in this Province

—THE MORNING DAILY Guardian can be obtained at Laferty's Tansorial Parlors, Summerside.

—SUBSCRIBERS should renew a week or two before the time they have paid for has expired and thus not miss an issue, as all papers are discounted promptly on expiry date.

—EXAMINATION—The semi-annual examination of the Freehold School was held June 23rd and despite the inclement weather a large number attended. The pupils were examined by Miss Murtagh, teacher at Conway, and Miss Allen, teacher of the school. The programme consisted of recitations and dialogues. The farewell song was exceptionally well rendered, and was very appropriate. The teacher is leaving after spending two years in the district. Commendatory remarks were made by the trustees and teachers present, all left feeling that they had spent an exceptionally profitable and pleasant afternoon.

—ARLINGTON SCHOOL.—The School took place Monday the 29th, and was largely attended by pupils and parents. The pupils were examined by Miss Nina Philips, Mr. Raymond Brown and the teacher, Miss McNeill, and acquitted themselves with credit. The marked progress and the thorough knowledge of the different subjects goes to show that Miss McNeill is a competent teacher and her resignation is keenly felt by parents and pupils alike. After the classes were all examined an address was read accompanied by a souvenir in the form of a beautiful gold watch fob. The address read as follows: Dear Teacher—We the pupils of Arlington School take this opportunity of thanking you for the kindly and capable manner in which you have guided us in our school work during the past two years. Those years were very pleasant and profitable to us and will always be remembered as such. You were ever ready to help us out of the difficulties which we met with, and did so in such a kind and pleasant way that we were never discouraged, but rather encouraged by them. Again in expressing our thanks we ask you to accept this humble gift as a simple token of our esteem for you. Wishing you continued success in all your undertakings, we sign ourselves the pupils and parents of Arlington School.

—PORT HILL.—The thunder storm which passed over the western part of the Island on Saturday morning was somewhat severe in the vicinity of Port Hill. The barn of Mr. Percy G. Ellis, Port Hill was struck by lightning and set on fire but Mr. Ellis was on hand in time to put the fire out before any damage was done. A cow belonging to Mr. John MacLean, Lot 14, was killed in the field by lightning, being found beside a wire fence. The posts of the telephone line at Port Hill were badly shattered and splintered by the storm. Miss Gertrude Montgomery, Worcester, Mass., is visiting her parents Mr. and Mrs. Arch'd Montgomery, Port Hill. She will remain home for a few weeks. Mrs. Jennie Young, Concord, N. H., is visiting her sister Mrs. Percy G. Ellis, Port Hill. On Tuesday evening, July 14th an ice cream social was held on the rectory grounds, Port Hill. There was a large number of people present and the young people enjoyed themselves by playing games of various kinds. The young ladies of Port Hill are noted for the good quality of ice cream which they always furnish on such occasions as this, and we must say that they surpassed themselves on this occasion. The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was dispensed in the Presbyterian Church, Lot 14 on Sunday last. Rev. J. S. McKay preached an appropriate sermon from the text, This do in remembrance of Me. Ten new members were added to the church roll, one by card and nine by profession of faith.—The Cemetery Committee and Congregation of Lot 14 Presbyterian Church have just completed putting up a new fence in front of their cemetery which is a credit not only to the committee but to the congregation. The cemetery grounds have been greatly improved and beautified during the last year and is now one of the best kept cemeteries in the county.—P.

MUSCLES NEED REST

The clerk, the brain and nerve worker of the twentieth century who neglected his muscular system needs more rest for his muscles, and reclining chairs, special office chairs and invalid chairs have come to be used. The long distance railroad traveller and the school child desire back supports for a tired back. "Whatever style of chair may be made the sitter never for any length of time sits exactly in such a way as to fit the shape of the chair. He shifts to alter the strain on the muscles or ligaments.

The man sitting upon the ground clasps his arms around his bent knees or rests himself on leaning against an upright, but, if fatigued, he lies upon the ground, and is thus given great freedom in altering the position and muscular strain. The advantage of the chair is that a man is not obliged to alter his body weight, he has freedom in the use of his legs, his back muscles are eased and, if the chair has arms, the pressure upon the lower portion of the spine is diminished. If the back is thoroughly tired, however, a reclining position is needed and a ready change of attitude is a help.

The chair injures it if fails to furnish adequate support to the weakened portion of the spine. That an ill-fitting chair may do harm is evident, for the chair also injures if it favors a faulty position which is allowed to continue for a long time. This not only strains the muscles and ligaments of the back, but in children favors the development of deformity. Chairs, being a convenience rather than a necessity, may be abused and permit the development of muscular weakness.

Man was built anatomically so that a chair was not a necessity. It is to be regarded as a convenience and at times a luxury, but like a luxury, if abused, a weakness of the muscles follows. The natural man used chairs but sparingly and it is clear that the exercise obtained in rising from the floor and in lowering the trunk to the reclining position gives a daily play to the muscles of the hip and trunk which is of value, and is not obtained to the same extent by those using chairs alone.

But, theoretical considerations aside, the chair is essential in our civilization. The active man of affairs must conserve his strength for his work, and brain-workers of the future will not follow the habits of the Moor of the past; hence, the question arises in the multiplicity of chair designs to know which is the best to select. Much will necessarily be left to fashion and taste, and, in the majority of cases chairs are to be regarded as furniture."
