

The Guardian Pictorial Page

These chorus girls of a popular show recently became interested in the warming up work before a baseball game. Now they have a radio installed in their theatre, and they, too, warm up before each performance.

The rumored curse over those concerned in the opening of "King Tut's" tomb holds no terror for Walter Houser of the Metropolitan Museum. He is on his way to Egypt.

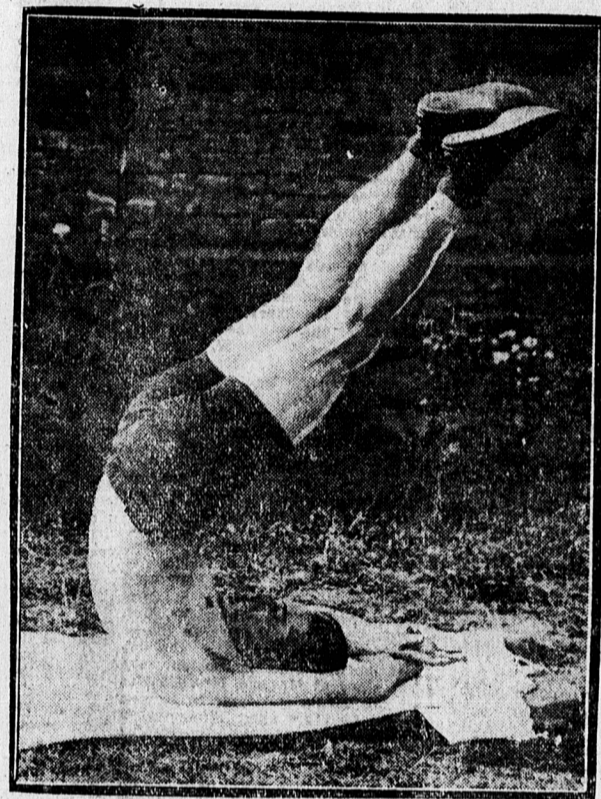

This photograph of Spain's "bloodless revolution" shows soldiers surrounded by an excited crowd, in the streets of Madrid, declaring that the country was "in a state of war".

Miss Margaret C. Bondfield was recently elected chairman of the central council of the British trades union congress. She is the first woman to hold this important labor post.

A spire has recently been completed on Chicago's skyscraper church. The structure towers above the other buildings in the vicinity.

Carpentier went through rigid training in preparation for his fight with Beckett, whom he defeated in short order.

Amelita Galli Curci is seen with her husband at their summer home in the Catskill Mountains. The couple have been resting for the summer prior to the start of a concert tour this fall.

A year ago Mlle. Flora Jasiane was selling shoes in a little shop in the suburbs of Paris. She has now signed a large contract to dance at a Broadway theatre.

His Grace, Nathan Soederblom, archbishop of Upsala and primate of the Church of Sweden, has recently arrived on this continent to deliver a series of lectures on world peace.

Here's a new method of keeping children from roaming across the road in the path of traffic.

Women have taken their place in nearly every line of sport, including javelin throwing. Miss Birchenough, of England, is seen training for the international contest against France.

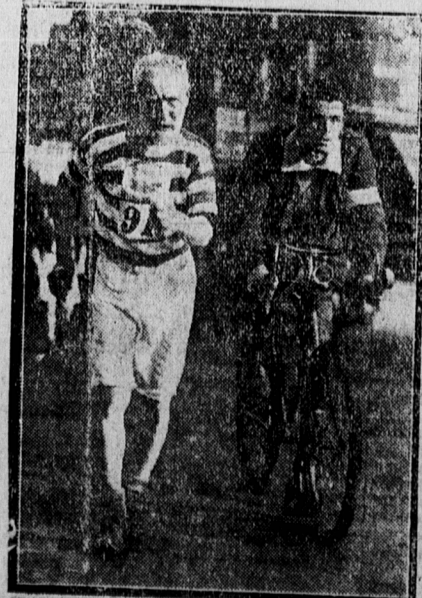

Fifteen barrels of alleged hard liquor were destroyed in Chicago recently as a result of the efforts of the mayor who is determined to make the city dry.

It is Mr. Sol Lesser, well-known film producer, who is responsible for the discovery of Jackie Coogan and the production of his pictures. He is seen with his wife arriving from a recent trip to England.

The Emir Abdullah is reported to have suppressed a revolution that broke out against him in Trans-Jordan by his tribesmen.

T. Hall of Sheffield, aged seventy-three, was the oldest competitor in the annual London to Brighton walk held recently. He completed the distance well up to the leaders.

J. M. Hale, eighty-six years old, demonstrates the way that he and "Honoré Abs" Lincoln "knuckled down" to marble Lincoln, who was at that time a country boy, when joined the boys in their sport.