JAP ARMY LEAVING NAGASAKI-

This splendid illustration shows the curious mixed state of the Japanese mind at this time. The army leaving for the front is equipped with the most modern weapons. The men are well trained in the use of smokeless powder, and understand the range-finding and the manipulation of the scientific adjuncts of up-to-date warfare methods perfectly. Nevertheless this poor savage army has been accompanied to their transports by the most glaring and barbarous customs with which we are acquainted in the most grotesque robes of yellow and green cotton cloths. The troops have entered, flat-footed, bareheaded and are being towed out to the big steamships, which are to carry them to the theatres of war.

Chauvinism.

Chauvinism is a term that has come to mean an extravagant and absurd patriotism and pride in one's own country, with a corresponding enmity toward and contempt for foreign nations. It is the French equivalent for the jingoism of the London music halls after Lord Beaconsfield's return from the Congress of Berlin in 1878. The origin of the word is due to Chauvin, the name of a figure in the comedy "La Cocarde Tricolore" (1831) by the brothers Theodore and Hippolyte Cognard, the action in which includes the conquest of Algeria. Chauvin is a young recruit who speaks much, displays great courage and sings several couplets with the refrain "Suis Francois, Suis Chauvin, J'tape sur le Bedouin." The authors of the comedy, however, borrowed the name from that of Nicholas Chauvin, an old soldier of Napoleon, well known in his time in Paris for his devoted enthusiasm for the Emperor. Chauvin is a Latinized form of the same family name.

Thibetan Praying Wheel.

"To the Yellow God, the Black God, the White God and the Green God—Please kindly take us all up with you and do not leave us unprotected, but destroy our enemies." Such a prayer is to be found on a Thibetan praying wheel. The Thibetan is a martyr to folklore, conceiving, as he does, his spiritual life to be a struggle against demons which are just as hard to conquer as the passes and deserts of his country. A novel feature of this prayer wheel, which the Thibetan spends much of his time in turning, is that if turned the wrong way everything done before is undone.
