GENEROUS CATTLEMAN
MELBOURNE-Sir Sidney Kidman, Australia's cattle king, has just passed his 78th birthday. From a lad of 13 working at $5.50 a week he rose to a foremost position among pastoralists. During the war he presented several fighting planes to the Empire and later gave his beautiful Kapunda, South Australia home, to the Education Department.

MINERS DUEL
DARWIN-Two miners fought a lengthy duel at Tennant's Creek, near here, and the worst wound was several pellets of shot in the arm of one man. After a quarrel, one grabbed a sawed-off shot-gun and the other a rifle. Twenty yards apart they entrenched themselves. Running out of ammunition they decided to finish it with fists in "no man's land."

Messrs. John Maclean, Jack Gordon of New Glasgow, N.S., who were spending a short vacation in the Island renewing old friendships, leave today on return home.
Mrs. James Sutherland, who has been visiting Mrs. Freeman Leslie of St. Peters, has returned to her home in Patauket, R. I.

In Kensington they called upon many former friends and did not forget the representative of the Guardian, a paper that they always read.

Election Brings Many Groups For Nation's Voting

Ottawa, July 26-(G.P.)-Canada's political lineup has altered considerably since the war, and the forthcoming election emphasizes the greatly varied character of political thought in the country. The historic old parties-Liberals and Conservatives, legitimate successors to the Georgian Whigs and Tories-no longer stand alone. Development of political thought, coupled with the complexities in the duties of national administration, has caused the emergence of other groups.

Contesting the forthcoming Dominion election will be members of the new party created by Hon. H. H. Stevens, minister of trade and commerce, the Reconstructionists, and a number proclaiming themselves Communists. Thus the balloting will see Conservatives, Liberals, C. C. F., Reconstructionists, Communists, Progressives, Liberal Progressives and Independents.

The first post-war insurrection against the old line parties was in 1921 when the Western farmers sent an almost solid bloc of Progressives to the House of Commons. Subsequent elections saw this group split asunder, the majority aligning selves with the Liberal Party with some clinging to the distinctive title of "Liberal-Progressive."

A small body of survivors, however, resisted absorption. These were the members chiefly from Alberta. They became somewhat loosely knit with a few more who owed allegiance to neither of the two main parties-members representing Labor, one an Ontario and another a Saskatchewan Progressive.

Subsequent elections saw this group split asunder, the majority aligning selves with the Liberal Party with some clinging to the distinctive title of "Liberal-Progressive."

The first attempt to merge this group into a distinct party was when J. S. Woodsworth, veteran Labor member, formed his Co-operative Commonwealth Federation. Several of the "Ginger Group" adhered to the new organization.

Additional to these, two members of the House sat as Independents-Henri Bourassa and A. W. Neill.

Explorers Find New Wonderland

CANBERRA, July 26-Bringing stories of a "new wonderland" in Central New Guinea, H. G. Hides, assistant resident magistrate, arrived with an expedition of 38 men at Port Moresby on the southern coast of Papua today after traveling hundreds of miles through unexplored territory and filling in one of the last remaining blank spots on the maps of the world.

Mr. Hides reported the discovery of a huge valley with great rolling slopes, strong streams and green cultivated squares, peopled by 100,000 natives utterly cut off from civilization. Undoubtedly he saw the same fertile plateau whose discovery was announced last year by E. M. G. Chinnery, Australian Government anthropologist, but the latest explorations extended further westward and southward than any land which Mr. Chinnery reached.

Mr. Hides located the newly explored area between the sixth and seventh parallels south latitude and 142nd. and 144th. meridians east longitude. Most of this area is not marked on any Government maps and lies along the northern border of Papua. The land which Mr. Chinnery described last year lay on the other side of the frontier in the mandated territory of New Guinea.

Mr. Hides said the natives, who received him graciously, tilled the soil with wooden spades and decimated gifts of steel implements. He described them as short in stature with light brown skins and huge mounds of hair adorned with daisies.

Leaving the valley, the expedition crossed a high grass tableland, still among this strange people of Asiatic type. No communal life as individual families. The plateau, according to Mr. Hides is absolutely self-contained and enclosed by high limestone rock containing extensive tracts of rich alluvial land.

Returning to the coast after crossing the limestone barriers where there is no life, the explorers encountered warriors with wigs like Cossack hats and tusks through their noses. Some of them attacked the explorers with battle axes until they were driven off. The warriors refused food to Mr. Hides and his companions who showed obvious signs of hunger, although huge potato fields abounded. The explorers reached Sikori on June 20, exhausted and practically starving. They lived, largely on sago. Two carriers and one native policeman perished on this stage of the journey. The explorers travelled hundreds of miles up the Strickland, Fly and Carrington Rivers, then overland to the Pulirai River and arrived at Port Moresby.

BID TO INCREASE EATING OF BREAD
LONDON, July 26.-Millers of Great Britain have launched a five-year campaign, involving an expenditure of $505,900 a year in newspaper and poster advertising, with the object of inducing people to eat more bread.

The government census of production for 1930 showed that during the four preceding years there had been a fall in consumption of bread equal to 11,000,000 quarter loaves, or 112,000 sacks of flour a year.

Her research work at Cameron Bay will deal especially with electrical developments and she intends to visit all mines of the area.

CHIPMUNK ADDS TO GOLF HAZARDS
GUELPH, July 26.-Add to the handicaps on the Cutten Fields golf course one industrious chipmunk. The little creature, with a penchant for golf balls, has been industriously searching the course for lost pellets from which he gnaws the covers. Twentyseven balls, peeled thoroughly, were found in a pile on the course the other day.
