50th Wedding Anniversary

A very happy event took place on November 24th when Mr. and Mrs. Edward MacPherson of Cape Traverse had the honor of celebrating their 50th wedding anniversary. They were married at the old home by Rev. Daniel McLean, it being his first marriage ceremony. Their groomsmen of 30 years ago were Rev. J. J. Howatt, Cape Traverse and their bridesmaid, Mrs. Sarah Phillips of Summerside were both present at the delightful anniversary.

About 60 old friends and neighbors gathered to offer their best wishes on this happy occasion. A very complimentary address was read to them by their present clergyman, the Rev. J. H. Blahon and they were presented with a well filled purse, along with several checks and gifts from friends and relatives from U.S.A.

The presentation of the purse was made by their granddaughter, Miss Betty MacPherson, who in turn was presented with a lovely decorated birthday cake by her grandmother on the occasion of her birthday. After luncheon was served the balance of the evening was spent in social chat and song. "The National Anthem" brought the evening to a close. The Guardian joins in happiest congratulations.

NEW YORK, Dec. 5 (CP) - An NBC broadcast from Athens this morning said no American troops were in Greece, and quoted U.S. ambassador Lincoln K. Vegh as saying: "We will give liberal support to any government the Greek people may want, but with civil war hanging over the country, American aid to Greece has had to stop."

The ships Piraeus harbor may have to move out and all our relief work has had to stop.

The broadcast also reported the F.I.A.S. force said they had lost 150 men killed in a 15-hour battle near the Acropolis with royalists who finally were rescued by British tanks.

Gives Views On Political Situation In Liberated Europe

(Editor's Note: In an effort to clarify the complicated internal political unswerving parts of liberated Europe toward possible civil war. The Associated Press assigned John A. Parris, Jr., of its London Bureau, to investigate Parris, who has covered Europe's exiled governments for the last four years and maintained contacts on the continent itself, reports his findings in the following dispatch.)

By JOHN A. PARRIS, Jr. (Associated Press Staff Writer)

LONDON, Dec. 6 (AP) - An ideological struggle of mounting intensity between the left and the right has caught the great powers without a united policy for maintaining continental peace.

Swift in the wake of liberation, political dissension wracked Greece, Italy, Belgium, Poland, Yugoslavia and, to a lesser degree, France.

Britain stands committed to a policy of presenting order in the countries her armies have helped liberate - by force, if necessary - at least until free elections can be held to let the people decide their future.

The United States has laid down a clear policy of adhering to her traditional non-interference in Europe's internal political affairs.

Russia, which long ago renounced any campaign for world Communism, stuck firmly to her intention of seeing that her neighbor governments are friendly. But there was no word as to whether this would mean Communist comrades for her neighbors, whether the Soviet would step into affairs outside her immediate sphere.

Foreign Secretary Averley underscored the divergence of British-American policy when he said that Britain considered it her right to supervise the making of governments under conditions such as exist in Italy.

One of the first reactions to these events was that they might hasten the projected Churchill-Stalin meeting. With conditions approaching civil war in at least two countries, and with the danger of a one-on-one, one-out, one-not-saying basis, they argued such a meeting could not be held.

Bitter after years of privation and clearly influenced by Russia's progress under Communism, the working classes are beginning to feel themselves heard in what one resistance leader, called "a revolution to stamp out dictators," especially the banks, high finance, and pseudo-generals.

Certainly the trend has been fanned by resistance movements which fought on after their countries had been overrun by Germany.

In both instances leftist elements are taking the lead in situations which they charge are caused by failure of the governments to clean out collaborators and persons with fascist leanings.

When the Pierlot Government was reformed in Brussels two Communists were included, but have since resigned because of the decision to disarm the resistance forces.

The same thing occurred in Greece.

In France the left also is represented, and there is a growing belief that Gen. de Gaulle, now in Moscow, is looking more and more toward Russia.

Albert Camus, resistance leader and editor of the French newspaper "Combat," charged that old political gangs, now back in power, are falling to make their own in the Belgian population.

Such old political gangs, however, have the support of Allied commanders. Mr. Camus asserted, "to put it in a nutshell, we are now watching, in a vicious way, a latent conflict between European resistance and the armies of liberation."

Fernand Demany, Belgian resistance leader who resigned from the government, asserted that other ministers "do not seem to understand the enormous evolution which has been taking place in the Belgian population."

"A relentless battle is going on," he said, "between those who profit from the enemy, the war profiteers and collaborators on the one hand, and, on the other, the elite of the nation - the resistance, which consists of decent people, from laborer to middle class."

Words Condemning Gov't Expunged From House Record

OTTAWA, Dec. 5 (CP) - An estimated 900 words were expunged from the Commons record today, considered by critics to be a record for recent years.

The words struck out were uttered by Hon. Dr. H. A. Bruce (PC-Toronto Parkdale), George Black (PC-Yukon) and Armand Choquette (BP Stansfeld) and in discussion when the speaker ruled their statements out of order.

Objections were taken to brief quotations in speeches by Dr. Bruce and Mr. Black suggesting that government policy would be responsible for the deaths of men now overseas. After brief discussion, the words were withdrawn and expunged from the Commons record.

Mr. Choquette had said in part that men were being sent to their death on the battlefield to allow a government to find its way out of a cabinet crisis.

Speaker Glen said Mr. Choquette's remarks were a blot on the Escutcheon of the House and they were ordered expunged.

Yank Sailors In Bermuda Annoyed

HAMILTON, Bermuda, Dec. 6 (CP Cable) - Many United States sailors are boycotting shops and transportation companies here in protest against a speech delivered last week in the Bermuda House of Assembly by Morris A. Gibbons, in which he criticized the "behavior and lawlessness of certain men in the United States Navy."

Twenty-four hours after Gibbons' speech, Rear Admiral F. A. Braisted cancelled shore leave after 6 p.m. for all American naval ratings.

As a result of the boycott, the railway company's business fell off in the last weekend because of the loss of sailor's fares.

Meanwhile, the Bermuda public is expressing disagreement with Gibbons' criticism, and newspapers here are flooded with letters condemning the assemblyman's speech.

Gibbons himself, in a later speech before the House, made it clear his criticism referred only to a small percentage of the U. S. naval forces in Bermuda.

Graydon Request Re Clothing Grant Will Be Considered

OTTAWA, Dec. 5 (CP) - Navy Minister Macdonald said today in the Commons that he would discuss with Defence Minister McNaughton the possibility of making retroactive increases made this year in the clothing allowance granted service personnel on discharge.

Replying to Gordon Graydon, Progressive Conservative House leader, Mr. Macdonald said that early this year the clothing allowance had been increased from $35 to $65 and later from $65 to $100. When the increases were granted the government decided against making them retroactive.

He would, however, reopen the question and discuss the matter with Gen. McNaughton.

Tomorrow is Forever

by Gwen Bristow

"Honestly?" Dick exclaimed. He laughed incredulously, and Kessler laughed too, thinking of Dick's lean sunburnt body and the strong young figures of Chey and her friends.

"Honestly," Kessler assured him. "So naturally only a lunatic would think of any change. It is just when a few lunatics did begin to adopt socialist suits, the suits were called indecent, and were to be scolded, an insult to womanhood and threat to the home. The scander the suits were the more the uproar increased."

"Dick found this very funny. 'Of all things,' he commented.

Kessler continued, "However, if you've noticed, it is not a new idea, and laws to prevent anybody's accepting it, nearly all can be regarded as a signal that the new idea is just about to be taken for granted."

"You mean that? Why?"

"As long as nobody thinks of trying to do some particular thing, why go to a lot of trouble to prohibit their doing it? There's no law to prevent citizens of Beverly Hills from climbing up to hang their laundry on telephone wires."

Dick nodded slowly. "Say, wait a minute. You know, I believe your idea is true. Wait a minute, let me think it over. I've got to be mind fumbling among the bits of his knowledge. 'The anti-evolution laws were like that, weren't they? I mean they didn't start making laws to prohibit the teaching of evolution until everybody was about to take it for granted.'"

Kessler nodded. "They were like that. So were the old church dignitaries, threatening to put Galileo on the rack unless he stopped saying the earth moved around the sun. It didn't occur to them to insist that the earth was the center of the universe until just before everybody was about to stop believing that it was."

"Why the old gods didn't get some telescopes and go out and see what moved around what, before they did anything else, is just beyond me."

"Why Dick," said Kessler, laughing again, "you don't notice Hitler asking for scientific tests to show that Nordic blonds are superior to Jews, or the Japanese trying to prove their descent from the sun-goddes of the white-flooding Americans favoring intelligence tests for Negroes. Hell, hath no fury like a fanatic who has a good reason for what he's doing. He simply wants to do it, and generally he goes on to do it because he observes, often unconsciously, that something new is coming in, and he's going out in fire and sword to hold it back."

"But it comes into existence anyway," Dick asked eagerly.

"Yes, Dick, it does. When a new idea is about to be born, nothing under heaven can stop it. Sometimes it is stopped by a government or two if Jefferson did lose his fight to get slavery out of this country, it would be one of his hardest defeats. But looking back on those days, we have no doubts as to how doomed and how much longer incidentally, we might remember that the proponents of slavery didn't go to war to keep it until a time when the moral victory was only morally won, and it was really impossible. It would have come about a year, conquered by the great ideas of the time, and a particular change is on the way, not even a war can do more than mark the beginning of the end of American slavery. The slave speed it up because the side of the future destroys the side of the past."

"And sometimes," Dick suggested thoughtfully, "the side of the future destroys the side of the future?"

"Yes, as the Persians destroyed the Greeks at Thermopylae. But they never did succeed in establishing Oriental despotism in Greece because while Greek democracy was a long way from what we call democracy now, it was at the hide of the future. We're up against something of the same sort today."

"Dick nodded, thought a moment, and asked, "What would you call the current what's coming in now?"

"We call it by a lot of high sounding names - the Four Freedoms, the dignity of the individual, postwar security. But essentially it's the idea that nobody is born with a natural right to beat up anybody else, and that the product of his labor, it's the idea that everybody - not merely the your own race, or your own family, or your own nation, but everybody should be allowed to develop whatever brains he was born with and do what ever sort of work he's capable of doing. That's the new idea, the one you and I believe in. Our opponents are fighting to re-establish the past."

"Gee, don't stop!" Dick exclaimed when Kessler paused. "Just how do you mean re-establish the past?"

"Well, as the Nazis worked it out in Germany, that's the way it's being set up. It's the restoration of feudalism. The Nazis' purpose was to be recognized by having the great industrial corporations take the ruling place that used to be held by the great landed estates. These not born to power are to work servants of the rich, regardless of what intelligence and energy they might be born with, just as the Middle Ages the peasants served the lords regardless of the fact that a peasant might be brighter, more honest and more excellent in every way than his lordship. It is that concept that Kessler - is that correct?"

"Holy smoke, Mr. Kessler - but that won't work! It doesn't make sense in these days - it won't work."

Killed in Action

Word was received from the War Department by Mrs. Laura M. Cadigan that her son, Sgt. Ivan C. Cadigan was killed in action on October 18th on the Peleliu Island.

Sgt. Cadigan was home on furlough in February of this year and was transferred overseas in July. He was Chief Radio Signal Operator for the Joint Assault Signal Company of the Wildcat Bist Division.

He was the son of the late Rubeen E. Cadigan of Palmer Road, who served overseas in World War I in the 101st U.S. Division. His mother was the former Laura M. Driscoll, daughter of Daniel Driscoll, Cadigan's River.

Sgt. Cadigan was a graduate of St. Thomas Aquinas Grammar School, High School of commerce, attended in the Bermuda House of Assembly and was employed in the New England Freight and Passenger Association when he entered the service and was born on Prince Edward Island.
