QUEEN CLIMBS LADDER.

Queen Wilhelmina of Holland takes the greatest interest in her army. During the last two weeks she has made several tours of inspection along the border looking into matters strictly military and paying special attention to the health and comfort of her men.

The Mellerische Courant tells of her most recent trip to the Limburg border, where she visited a barn and climbed a ladder to visit some of her soldiers who were housed on the upper floor.

The Queen is no longer the sweet girl of yore, but with advancing years has increased in weight considerably. Despite this handicap she ascended the ladder and greeted her subjects with: "Are you satisfied, boys?"

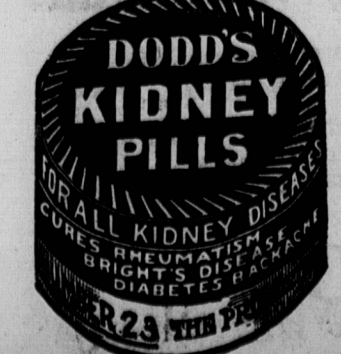

One soldier replied that they were, adding that the food was good. To other questions he replied that it was getting cold and that another blanket would be welcome.

The Queen is an authority on military matters, such as organization and equipment, and is credited even with a comprehensive knowledge of military engineering.

SMALL PROPORTION OF UNDESIRABLES

Fifty "Misfits" Include Aliens; Canadians Start on Division Manoeuvres

LONDON, Nov. 30.—The intimation made by the Canadian Associated Press ten days ago that forty-six members of the Canadian contingent have been sent back to Canada is now public property. These undesirables, as already stated, are mostly of alien extraction and will be interned in Canada.

A few others are being returned to Canada for quite other reasons there is naturally nothing remarkable that something less than fifty men are considered better out of the contingent.

For the first time the whole Canadian division is today out on manoeuvres which will prove a most welcome change. Keen spirits for some time back have been eager to get busy at the real kind of drill which is necessary before they can be fit for the front. The only combined movements so far have been route marches and brigade drills. A considerable amount of leave is still being granted. The work of erecting wooden huts goes on well. ORIGIN OF THE "UNION JACK."

The other day six well-known politicians at dinner were discussing the British Union Jack. Questions arose as to how it came to assume its present form, how it is composed, etc. Only two of the well-known politicians knew anything about its history. It is to clear away ignorance on this subject that the following is given.

In the first place, it should be explained that the name, "Union Jack," is more often than not wrongly applied. That name really belongs to a miniature union flag, displayed from a staff at the end of the bowsprit on his majesty's ships, and known for many years past as a Jack; whence the name of "Union Jack," which has come to be wrongly applied to the larger as well as the smaller Union Flag, the correct name when displayed otherwise than on his majesty's ships. The Jack, properly so called, is never flown on ship the fifteenth century, England, Scotland and Ireland had separate flags. The English flag consisted of the Red Cross of St. George on a white ground, that of Scotland the white diagonal cross of St. Andrew on a blue ground, and that of Ireland the red diagonal cross of St. Patrick also on a white ground, and it was from a combination of these three flags that we get the "Union Jack."

It was James I. who first began the formation of the Union Jack by combining the crosses of St. George and St. Andrew. He laid the cross of St. George on the cross of St. Andrew and thus formed the Union Jack, which was the national flag for two hundred years.

It was after the union of 1801 that the cross of St. Patrick was added. In this case the diagonal red stripes were narrowed down in order that they should not obliterate the white stripes of St. Andrew's cross. It will thus be noted that the latter shows on either side of the cross of St. Patrick, while the narrow white margin around the inside of the cross of St. George was added to separate the red of the cross from the blue field of the flag. It will be noted, too, on looking at the Union Jack that the Scottish and Irish crosses are so arranged that in the first and third quarters, continuing from left to right, the white of Scotland has precedence, while in the second and fourth the red of Ireland is uppermost.

The easiest rule to remember in displaying a Union Jack is that the broad diagonal white stripe, the St. Andrew's cross, should be uppermost in the first and third quarters, i. e., nearest the staff, and the red diagonal St. Patrick's cross uppermost in the second and fourth quarters.

WONDERFUL.

"For the making of billiard balls 500 elephants are needed every year," said the famous big game hunter in his lecture on India.

"How strange," whispered Mrs. Winsome to the lady who sat next, "that people can teach such great beasts to do such delicate work!"

S. D. C. REPLIES

Sir:—In reply to the challenge from the Aberdeen Football Team which appeared in Saturday morning's Guardian. I wish to state that we cannot accept it as they have not agreed to certain conditions named by us when the "League" was talked of earlier in the season. Furthermore we now consider the football season closed for this year, as the condition of the ground renders it unsafe for the game. Their challenge was well timed and is typical of the newspaper games they have been playing all the fall.

I am, sir, etc.

CAPT. S. D. C. FOOTBALL TEAM.

THE 'WELCOME' PHOTOGRAPHIC EXPOSURE RECORD AND DIARY.

Each year there is more and more evidence that the brains concerned in the production of this book are intensely practical ones. We hazard the guess that it is the work of experts who can remember the time when they needed information themselves and could get it only with great difficulty. Our reason for this guess is that the 'Welcome' Photographic Exposure Record and Diary gives not only the obvious information, as to exposure, development, just those questions which are frequently asked by amateurs but, frequently left unanswered in the ordinary text books.

If you want to know—how to tone bromides green how much flashlight powder to use, how to intensify colour plates, how to get warm tones on gaslight paper, about focal development, about photography at night, about exposure of bromides, about sepia or blue toning, about staining prints or about the hundred and one other things connected with photography, refer to the above photographic guide. It is a veritable encyclopaedia of photography, containing all the clear simple directions for every process; information, general and particular, figures, tables, factors for all purposes and pages for exposure-records, diary and memorandum. Here all the wrinkles and dodges—tracks off the expert and dodger—tracks led by experiments and long experience are analysed and set forth in simple formulae and precise directions which not only help the beginner, saving him much time, trouble and material, but also serve as a useful reminder to the expert photographer. Independent exposure factors are given for all British and American plates and films. Fixed inside the back cover is the 'Welcome' Exposure Calculator, the ingenious device which, by one turn of the scale gives the correct exposure for any plate or film at any time of day or year. By its use the percentage of spoiled plates is immediately reduced; it enables the beginner to "hit the mark every time," thus considerably lessening the unnecessary expense often incurred when taking up photography. Plenty of room is left in the specially ruled pages for particulars of exposure, stop, light, time of day, etc., also memorandum pages for additional notes.

The book issued in wallet form complete with lead pencil.

Three editions of the 'Welcome' Photographic Exposure Record and Diary are published, one for the Southern Hemisphere, one for the Northern Hemisphere and the third, a special edition, for the United States of America.

The 'Welcome' Exposure Record may be obtained from all photographic dealers and booksellers. Price in Montreal, 35 cents.

OUT TO MEET GIRL MET ENEMY INSTEAD

Irishman, Breaking Rules, was Able to Warn His Comrades

LONDON, Nov. 30.—A new story of a British encounter with the Prussian guard was told by a corporal of the Warwickshire Regiment who is now at home wounded.

"The night the Prussian Guard attacked us around 'pres'" he said, "it was only by the merest chance and a fine piece of heroism that we were warned in time. There was an Irishman of the King's Liverpool Regiment who had strayed out of bounds to meet a girl whose home was off the line of attack. Coming back late, he quietly towards our position. Without thought of consequences to himself he dashed toward the spot where the knew our guard to be, to give the alarm. The Germans spotted him and a cavalry patrol went at his heels instantly. He had a good start, but toward the end he was hit in both legs.

"He got through with the warning and is now in the base hospital pulling through. He does not know whether he will get a medal or a wigging for being out of bounds, but he is hoping for the best."

JELICO'S ESCAPES.

(From the Fall Mail Gazette.)

(From the Fall Mail Gazette.)

Sir John Jellicoe, to whom it has fallen to command Britain's fleet in the supreme hour of its history, has twice escaped by a miracle. In 1880 when lieutenant on the Monarch, he volunteered to rescue the crew of a wrecked steamer off Gibraltar. The boat in which he and seven others made the attempt was capsized by the heavy seas, and only after a terrible struggle for life did the gallant officer reach the shore. His second escape was from the ill-fated Victoria. Commodore Jellicoe, as he is ranked, has been in the high fever when the collision occurred, but made for his appointed station on the bridge, and when the ship went down, was towed into safe waters by a gallant midshipman.

EYEGASSES FOR SOLDIERS.

(From the London Chronicle.)

The large number of Territorials with spectacles or eyeglasses has been noticed. On this point the late Mr. Eustace Balfour, brother of Mr. Arthur Balfour, wrote to the London Standard, "Some members who have passed the medical tests on the assumption that they will shoot in spectacles are no humiliation? The Germans wear them in war. They are in some respect even a protection against the gas. I, personally, have been all my life a deer-stalker, and have always had to wear glasses. I do not think I have ever lost a stag which I should otherwise have hit by having spectacles on. The prejudice against them is childish and artificial, in my view."

LIFE ON "MUSTARD MIKE."

Life at the wheel of London motor vehicle how playing the role of transports at the front is humorously described by a colonel column. He writes:

These heavy motor vehicles bear the names of various English firms in London or the provinces. Not content with the name blazoned in gold letters on the side of the vehicle, Chauffeur Tommy christens his own van anew, and such names as "Blundering Sam," "Furlous Fanny," "Blundering Bill," "Lumbering Luke" and "Mustard Mike" are painted in neat white characters on the side of the bonnet. The leading lorry contains an armed guard to protect the precious contents of Sam, Luke and Fanny.

The assaults of lurking Uhlans who may have escaped the vigilance of the first-line troops. Sometimes Fanny skids into a soft place and has to be extricated by a first-aid lorry with jacks and towing ropes. As darkness draws on at the front the sound of the motor is heard, and "Rule Britannia," the "Marseilles," and finally "God Save the King" are rendered by the choir. Roll call is at 8.30 and then, sampling under the shelter of hospitable Sam or Luke, the men are soon asleep.—English paper.

THE RECRUITING KISS

(London Daily Mail) . . . .

An amusing incident occurred at the New Galery Kinema, after Miss Kate Holbrook had finished singing the recruiting song: Your King and Country Want You, the chorus of which concludes: "We shall cheer you, thank you, kiss you, When you come back again."

A soldier, bearing traces of having been wounded, stepped up and challenged Miss Holbrook with the remark "I've come for my reward." Miss Holbrook, seizing the situation immediately leant over the platform rails and kissed the blushing soldier amid the delighted cheers of the audience.
