Minor League Baseball Moguls Meeting This Week

BY JACK HAND

NEW YORK, May 21 — (AP) — Baseball commissioner A.B. (Happy) Chandler rules the minor leagues until Jan. 12, 1946 but there were indications today his reign of the smaller loops might end at that date.

Representatives of minor league baseball, feeling they were ignored in the election of Chandler after asking a voice in naming a Landis successor, converge on New York Wednesday to open a three-day session.

One of the most important matters to be discussed in drawing up a new major-minor agreement will be the first clause of the expiring pact calling for recognition of the position of commissioner.

Although none of the minor spokesmen would go on record in opposition to Chandler and all boosted him personally, there was an undercurrent of resentment against the majors.

The minors had no vote in the late Judge Kenesaw Landis' selection and paid none of his salary but had asked at a Feb. 26 session in Chicago for consideration in naming his successor. They said they were willing to bear a share of the cost.

Thomas H. Richardson, chairman of the executive committee, said the Chicago suggestion had never been answered nor had there been a reply from a similar offer sent to the majors' advisory council in Cleveland when Chandler was elected.

Ted Lyons, Chicago righthander, scored his 200th American League victory when the White Sox defeated Washington 9—3 seven years ago today. One of the best American League pitchers, Lyons was a rookie star with Chicago in 1919 at the time of the 'Black Sox" world series scandal. For more than 20 years he was mainstay of the White Sox mound staff until he enlisted with the U. S. armed forces in 1941.

Official Of St. Louis Browns Is Optimistic

ST. LOUIS, May 21 — (AP) — The American League champions St. Louis Browns have been up to their old tricks again—the business of kicking their visiting clubs around.

Now if the team, usually not nearly so formidable away from home, can come back from a long 24-game road trip with a 50-50 break, it will have established itself again as a very tough one to deal with, in the opinion of Jimmy Conzelman assistant to the club president.

That, generally, was the pattern by which the Browns worked out their first championship in 43 years in 1944.

The team just concluded a 10-game home stand with eight victories, one tie and one defeat.

Conzelman's answer to why the club isn't in first place right now is answered in part by "spotty batting."

"We have lost at least four games which a good-well-timed hit would have won," he said.; "we all feel here that the recent victories, though, are indicative of a change of luck and we can look forward to a successful road trip."

So far this season the Browns have won only two of seven games played on the road.

The American League was idle today, and will resume hostilities with one game tomorrow when the Yankees take on the Philadelphia Athletics in their first home twilight game in history.

Only two night games are on the National League schedule today, St. Louis at Brooklyn and New York at Pittsburgh.

Castilloux Wins Decision

SAINT JOHN, N.B. May 21, — Dave Castilloux, Montreal, successfully defended his Dominion lightweight boxing title tonight with a close, 10-round decision over Ralph Walton, Montreal Negro. Castilloux weighed 134 1-4 and Walton 133 1-4.

One judge gave the champion only two points more than Walton. The other gave Castilloux four rounds, Walton two and called the rest even. Referee Joe Irvine termed it a draw.

Many fans thought Walton had won and others favored a draw.

Failure to paint the edges of window screens which do not show when the screen goes up in the spring can be a costly error. Lack of paint on the unseen edges allows dampness to penetrate the wood, with resulting rotting and warping.

Attention Fish Pond Owners

Parties renting boats on fish ponds for angling purposes are asked to observe the following amendment to the Prince Edward Island Fish and Game Protection Act for 1937 and take necessary action in conformity with the regulations.

"All persons owning or operating a boat or boats used for fishing in any pond or river and whose boat or boats are leased, loaned or hired to the public for fishing or any other recreational activity whatever, shall be required to obtain annually, a license establishing that such boats are in a clean, safe seaworthy condition before such boats are leased, loaned or hired. The cost of such license shall be twenty-five cents for each boat and shall be issued by the Game Warden, only when he is satisfied that the boat for which the license is to be issued is clean, safe and seaworthy. Such license shall be cancelled at any time if the boat to which it applies is found to be in a dirty, unsafe or unseaworthy condition and shall only be reissued at an additional charge of twenty-five cents when the Game Warden is again satisfied that the boat has been cleaned or made safe or seaworthy. Any person lending, leasing or hiring an unlicensed boat or a boat for which the license has been cancelled, shall be liable on summary conviction, to a penalty of ten dollars or in default of payment to be imprisoned for a term of ten days.

SONGS, ROMANCE, HIGH HILARITY

Betty Grable assumes the most demanding and challenging role of her brilliant career. It's a dual role —by night she is a glittering, dancing, singing sensation as the queen of the pinups—by day she's a prim and prissy stenographer in hurly-burly, wartime Washington. But at all times she's La Grable — and no mistake. In one of the most lavish of the film's exciting dance spectacles, the "Merry Widow" number, Betty has five startling changes of costumes, and essays five distinctive types of dancing in portraying the evolution of the gay window from the period of the hour-glass figure to the military smartness of today.

Contends Poverty Threatens

Contending that "a million homes will be invaded by poverty, sickness and despair," unless effective steps are taken to prevent the plans of "big business" to decrease employment, he said the C.C.F. plans to provide 5,000,000 jobs in Canada.

"But there will be no 5,000,000 jobs unless finance is made the servant and not the master of the people," the C.C.F. leader continued.

"There will be no 5,000,000 jobs unless the people's war plants are taken out of the hands of the monopoly interests and operated to meet the peacetime needs of the nation.

"There will be no 5,000,000 jobs unless we as a nation undertake great social projects, including power development, irrigation, conservation of resources and the opening of the rich northland."

Col. Whitney's Jeep Seen Strong Derby Contender

NEW YORK, May 21 — (AP) — The Kentucky Derby stock of Col. C.V. Whitney's Jeep took a decided upturn as racing got away to a delayed start in the New York area with 42,179 fans packing Jamaica's compact plant today.

Carrying the famous Eton blue and brown-capped silks, Jeep stepped to victory in the experimental handicap in a manner that stamped him as a contender for the three-year-old classic at Churchill Downs, June 9.

The experimental is only a six-furlong dash but at the finish the son of the English Derby winner, Mahmoud, was two lengths in front of William Helis' Greek Warrior, indicating that he would favor the 1 1-4 miles of the Kentucky blue ribbon event. Greek Warrior, also sired by Mahmoud, had another three lengths over Mrs. P.A.B. Widener 2nd's Polynesian with Ric's Raft, hailed as Helis' No. 1 Derby eligible, fifth in the field of 13 three-year-olds.

Montreal Royals Lead International League

Montreal Royals went into undisputed first place in the International Baseball League today by whipping the visiting Rochester Red Wings, 6-2, while the Jersey City Giants were idle.

Johnny Radler, who started for Rochester, was touched for all of the Royal's seven hits and six runs in the six innings he worked before giving way to Herman Neuberger in the seventh. Radler didn't pitch bad ball but he made mistakes with Roland Gladu and Red Durrett, each of whom hit homers out of the park with a teammate on base to account for four of the Royal's runs.

John Gabbard, on the mound for the Royals, gave up only six hits to mark up his fifth win of the season.

RECTOR'S REPORT

The following report was given by the Rector, Very Rev. Father MacKenzie.

"This the 91st commencement day of St. Dunstan's College still finds the world awaiting the peace we have longed and prayed for. Students graduating today have made their full course under the shadow of war and have, consequently, suffered limitations and distractions, which, necessary though they were, interfered with ideal educational effort. Today as we cautiously emerge from that shadow, or at least approach its edge, we peer ahead in an effort to glimpse the shape of things in the post-war years. We see things there which unmistakably must give us pause.

"For several years we have been buoyed up by the hope of a universal new order, based upon the four freedoms. But, as we become acquainted with the various agreements and disagreements and impasses which occupy the attention of world diplomats, enthusiasm cools, and silently we say, "The old leaven is not yet purged out." Moreover, some thoughtful men, who are by no means alarmists, tell us we are now far advanced on the road to socialism; and we know that socialism inevitably means totalitarianism. Should we be victims of such misfortune, what a vicious circle it would be!

"My point in making such reference is not to spread a spirit of pessimism or despair, but rather to face squarely a problem widely discussed by educationists today: viz, that many college graduates have not the liberal background that will enable them effectively to contribute constructive thought towards the betterment of a chaotic world. Highly specialized education, especially in the scientific and technical fields, without a foundation in the liberal arts does not give young men or women a cultural development sufficient to cope with the complex problems of modern life. They are thus unable to detect the trend of thought and affairs, and may unknowingly walk into the toils of totalitarianism Germany, at whose educational shrine western civilization long worshipped, and whose methods it imitated, shows this gross failure.

"Citizenship of Eternity"

"Earlier ages saw Christianity; i.e., Christian principles inform the whole fabric of life; but as centuries went on one department of life after another fell from that fabric. Politics gradually claimed the state as an end in itself, and the citizen but a robot, existing for that end. This had its logical culmination in the totalitarian states. Commerce adopted money as its god, and greed perpetrated countless crimes behind the slogan "business is business". Art took "art for art's sake" as its motto, heedless whether the thing expressed was worthy of expression. Education kept both eyes on a job, developed personality, instilled habits of health, aimed at making good citizens of the world but gave little thought to citizenship of eternity; it too often forgot that it must train how to live as well as how to make a living. There is much evidence today that these errors are being widely observed, and we are hopeful of remedial action resulting.

"Most interesting experiments and suggestions are being made. Chicago would demand a liberal education first as a basis upon which to specialize. Others suggest a synthesis or unification of the courses in arts and sciences. One Canadian University is giving courses in philosophy to its students in applied science. These may be isolated efforts, but they give hope at least that there will be a more general endeavor to rebuild an educational system that will enable a citizen the better to understand freedom and its accompanying obligations, and his own dignity as a man.

"This College year now ended was not marked by any outstanding event. The grave state of a world at war does not make youth more prone to study or think seriously, he must often be decoyed if he would drink of the Pierian spring. Any scheme which aims at higher education or even complete secondary education for every boy and girl is destined to meet with great problems; for, some cannot profit by it, and some will not. The best we can do is to provide the opportunity and encouragement for those who desire it, and are able to profit by it.

The Honor Roll

"I wish to take this occasion to pay tribute to those gallant young men, once students here, who purchased for themselves undying glory by meeting death in freedom's cause during this war. Of approximately 400 names which grace our honor list 25, i.e., 6 per cent will not return. Some of these young men especially the graduates, who were with us longer than others, we came to know intimately and we can say with assurance and pride, no finer boys donned the uniform of their country in any land. To all of them we offer a tribute of respect and gratitude, and prayerfully trust they may have found peace in eternal life.

"Today we welcome to this platform for the first time our new Chancellor, Most Reverend James Boyle, Bishop of Charlottetown. Bishop Boyle comes to us well experienced, both in academic training and in the practical ways of life. We look forward with confidence to his leadership and to his guiding St. Dunstan's through the important and difficult role she must continue to play in the education of our youth. You will be privileged later today to hear from him, and I wish to express on my own behalf and that of the Faculty our appreciation and thanks for his accepting the duty of addressing the graduates.

"That there is need for the extending and improving of our facilities to cope adequately with the work expected of us, is a well-known fact. The minimum facilities of a generation ago will not satisfy the youth of today, even though the content and fiber of the education acquired be not improved upon. The problem of rehabilitation of service men will make further demands on those material facilities, and the extending of them becomes an immediate problem.

"Our enrollment, slightly lower than that of last year, reached a total of 196. Last September Reverend Wilfred Pineau, M.A., joined our staff as instructor in French and Reverend Howard Wight came with us as Assistant in the High School Department.

"The Extension Department under the direction of Reverend M.E. Francis has continued to do effective work among Credit Unions, Fishermen's Unions and other Co-operatives. With the assistance of the Department of Fisheries and the Provincial Department of Agriculture, three short courses in rural centres were conducted last fall. During the winter other courses of shorter duration were held especially for fishermen. The whole effort is directed towards bettering the condition of these various groups through their understanding of and particapating in collective action.

"The St. Dunstan's Contingent of the Canadian Officers' Training Corps has continued to function efficiently under a capable staff. Chief Instructor, Major Tierney and Sergeant Major MacIntyre are not only efficient men but are zealous in their work and leaders as well as commanders.

"We present for graduation today fifteen young men fortified with a reasonably good educational foundation, upon which we hope they will build in the future, and continue to develop and expand as long as life lasts. They have reached an important goal, but we believe that they understand it is not a final goal, only a breathing place on a lengthy and arduous journey, along the remainder of which we wish them a generous share of success.

"Before closing I wish to extend thanks to the special guests who have honored the occasion by their presence, and to our other many friends who are with us this afternoon; and our sincere gratitude to the many donors of prizes for their unfailing interest in our work."

Address To Graduates

The Chancellor in his address to the graduates admonished them against thinking the conferring upon them of graduation diplomas meant they were educated. Education, he told them, was a process beginning with birth and only ending at death. No man, the Chancellor said, could afford to stop learning, for if he did, then he must inevitably fall behind. The study of theology, of law, of medicine, of agriculture, or of any other calling or profession required continuous study. Graduating students were only on the threshold of knowledge, but he commended and congratulated them in that theirs was now the foundation upon which they could build to higher and sublimer heights.

The one great asset of St. Dunstan's as an educational institution was, the Chancellor said, the supreme value it placed upon religion. No education, he asserted, which embraces scientific or technical training to the exclusion of the cultural can be a complete education. Teaching in the humanities is essential if one is to have his feet on more solid ground. But even the humanities, as studied by the Romans and Greeks, were not enough. It is the inculcation of Christian doctrine and principles which supplies the leaven for the bread which alone assures worthwhile educational training. No man, the Chancellor said, can be a great teacher in the fullest sense of the word unless his teaching is animated and motivated by his belief in and solicitude for the perpetuity of Christian principles.

The Chancellor warned against the tendencies of modern educational systems which, he said, exalted the thing created over the Creator. He quoted Dean Inge of St. Paul's as having said that "ancient civilizations were destroyed by barbarians from without. We breed our own." That, the Chancellor said, was what the Nazi and Fascist systems of Germany and Italy had done to a masterful degree, but to a degree which, in the end, brought chaos and ruin to both countries.

In closing, the Chancellor exhorted the graduates to "hold high the torch" in any profession or calling they might embrace and not to be afraid of any honest homely toil. He had no use for the man ashamed to work with his hands. All labour was honourable and enobling if inspired by lofty motives. Because of the lessons they had learned at St. Dunstan's, the Chancellor expressed the hope none of the students would ever do anything to degrade their Alma Mater nor the professions or callings to which they may devote themselves.

Other Speakers

Lieut.-Gov. LePage, Hon. Mr. Stewart, Mr. Shaw and Mr. Holmes all spoke briefly. They congratulated the graduates and the students generally and commended the work of the institution.
