EATING WITH BRITISH ROYALTIES

BY "A LADY OF THE COURT"
(EDITED BY ELIZABETH CRAIG)

A CUSTARD
Boil a pint of cream. When almost cold beat the yolks of 8 eggs with a little rosewater and grated nutmeg. Put to the cream and sweeten to your taste. Then strain through a sieve and set it over a gentle fire, stirring it constantly till it thickens, then bake very slowly in small dishes till set.

"GILT FISH IN JELLY"
Pour into two large fish moulds, presumably shapes in the form of fish, clear blancmange, and when cold turn out, gild them with leaf gold or strew over them gold and silver-mixed, and lay them upon a soup dish, then fill it with clear calf's feet jelly, thin enough to admit the fish to swim in it. Lisbon or any kind of pale made wine may be used instead of the jelly.
NOTE—I cannot decipher the word after silver. It looks like cran.
