to whom he had presented the Military Medal in Holland. (The Field Marshal's reference was to Sgt. W. B. Peters, M.M., of the 1st Battalion, who saved the Cape Breton Highlanders.)

"I thank you, Mr. Premier," he said, "for the very beautiful gift, which will go back with me to my home in the Old Country."

At Airport

The Field Marshal and party of British and Canadian staff officers and other ranks arrived on scheduled time, 11.30 a.m., at the Charlottetown airport in two shiny Dakota transport planes. The first plane, carrying the Field Marshal, was some minutes in advance, allowing for greetings by Lieutenant Governor Bernard and for a few minutes chat before the procession of cars got under way for the city. His Honour was accompanied by two of his aides, Lt.-Col. P. S. Fielding, M.C., and Capt. Robt. MacMillan, D.S.O. and Bar.

A rousing unofficial welcome was given by a crowd which had gathered at the airport, and whose greetings the Field Marshal acknowledged with a warm smile and hand-wave.

Joining the Lieutenant Governor and Field Marshal in their brief chat at the airport were Major-General Foster and Brigadier Stewart. The latter arrived by plane from Halifax immediately in advance of the Field Marshal's party.

The string of cars conveying the party to the Provincial Building was headed by a Provost Corps motorcade, with the Field Marshal, his aide Maj. N. G. Chevese, M.B.E., M.C., and the Lieutenant Governor occupying an open car in the lead. As they approached the Provincial Building, the Field Marshal stood up to return their salutations. He maintained this position practically all the way in.

Inspects Guard

On the steps of the Provincial Building the Field Marshal was welcomed by Premier J. W. A. Macdonald, who accompanied him as he proceeded to inspect the Guard of Honour provided by the 7th (P.E.I.) Rifle Regiment, comprising fifty war veterans under Capt. Ivan Harper, M.C., and Lieut. G. A. Brown. The Guard made a splendid turnout in battle dress, with the Regiment's newly organized band, and bandmaster Thomas MacFarlane in military dress uniforms with scarlet trousers and orange-striped black topcoats.

In the Confederation Chamber the Field Marshal sat at the table of honor, with the Premier, the Lieutenant Governor, and other members of the Confederation Fathers had sat.

The following citizens were then introduced, with whom he chatted and shook hands: Hon. Thane A. Campbell, Chief Justice of Prince Edward Island; Hon. W. J. P. MacMillan, O.B.E., Leader of the Opposition; P.E.I. Hon. G. H. Stewart, Minister of Public Works; Hon. W. F. A. Stewart, Minister of Agriculture; Hon. W. Hughes, Minister of Education; Hon. W. A. Central Guardian Air Of Expectancy Over Picket Lines As Police Move In

By TIM DICKSON (Canadian Press Staff Writer)

HAMILTON, Aug. 26—(CP)—Provincial police from many Ontario cities and towns were seen today as they moved in to help city police keep law and order as the showdown struggle loomed in the wage-hour strike by the United Steel Workers of America (U.S.W.A.) against Canada's basic steel industry.

Lacking official announcement of the number to be brought in, citizens generally estimated that 250 militiamen and an equal number of provincials would supplement the local force of approximately 150 men.

Over the picket lines today hung an air of tense expectancy. Crowds of 200 and 300 Union men stood in little groups near Stokoe's main gate as between 80 and 100 men marched in the picket line.

Opinion in this industrial community was that the police would try to break the picket lines outside the plant and sending in militiamen to open the picket lines.

Meaning sympathy strikes began to break out here with indications of others in other sections of Ontario.

Nearly everyone predicted trouble and recalled a Sunday night speech by C.H. Millard, National Director of the Steel Workers Union, which said the Union would resist the flow of materials to and from the plant and sending in militiamen to open the picket lines.

Estimates varied on the number of militiamen to be sent in. The biggest R.C.M.P. detachment was 90 men who left Ottawa today.

COMPLETES TOUR

His welcome to Prince Edward Island has been jubilant with his wife being cheered through the streets and girls blowing kisses at him.

The Charlottetown ceremonies followed the pattern as they did in Halifax and Fredericton. His inspection of veterans through the ranks of his first group of Canadian women ex-service personnel some of whom had served at his 21st Airborne Division headquarters.

Accepting a silver tray in the old Confederation Chamber of the historic Peter's Hotel, he warmly welcomed him as he was receiving was for himself personally, "because I am a soldier."

The keen-eyed soldier spotted a speech on condition that every body smoke and all the ladies were invited—because he had been told he merely wanted to say "hello" to the ladies.

When he reached the outskirts of the city he transferred to his open car, donned a British war hat and drove through the rain to cheer.

When he reached the lawn in front of the old Provincial Legislature, the cheering grew louder. Lieutenant Governor D. Laurence MacLaren read an address of welcome and Premier John B. MacNair invited the Field Marshal to lunch.

He lowered the microphones to match his stature and said he was enjoying his trip. He had got to know Canada overseas and now he was getting to know them at home.

At a brief reception he met many officers and men who had served in New Brunswick regiments under his command, including Major General Hardy B. Goring, O.B.E., of St. Stephen, N.B., retired Newfoundland commander, and commander of the Carleton and York Regiment when the unit was first to land in Britain after the declaration of war.

Appearance of the bill for second reading was the signal for an attack by Capt. John Probe (C.P.C.—Regina City) against a system which enabled permanent force to be raised by comparatively young ages with large pensions while old age pensions remain "unpaid pensions."

He complained that the system would saddle the country for 20 to 25 years with a financial load that was "out of all proportion" to other pension schemes. Official figures showed that pension contributions by the permanent force in 1944-45 amounted to only one-third of the amount paid. The excess was about $1,500,000.

Major-General John B. MacNair, O.B.E., of St. John's, Nfld., retired as a Major-General at the age of 47 and would receive $4,947 annually for the rest of his life. A Progressive Conservative member of Parliament received as pension "in the neighborhood" of the $6,000 he received as a seasonal indentured (Maj.-Gen. G.R. Peakes, V.C. (P.C.—Nanaimo) was not present due to a restriction of the bill but the reference was obviously to him).

The bill provides that time served on active service during the recent war may be included in the pensionable term of service of persons appointed to the permanent force prior to April 1, 1946.

The annual pension shall be one-fifth of the total pay and allowances received by the contributor during the last six years of his service, multiplied by the number of years of service not exceeding 35 years.

The widow of a man with more than 10 years' service would get one-half his pension. The rate for a dependent child under 18 is one-fifth of the rate for a widow, but also dies that sum can be increased to $600.
