Throat Trouble

Toronto, Ont.—"For about eight years I was subject to laryngitis, my throat would get very sore and I would lose my voice. I would have a spell of this kind a couple of times a year, especially in the winter when the weather was cold and disagreeable. It would be a couple of months each time before I would fully recover from these spells and get my voice back. I doctored and took medicine with little relief until I began taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and it has so completely relieved me of this trouble that I scarcely ever have a sore throat or suffer in any way from my former trouble."—Mrs. A. McDonald, 28 McMurrich St.

Golden Medical Discovery is put up in Dr. Pierce's Laboratory in Bridgeburg, Ont., and sold by all druggists in both tablets and liquid. Send Dr. Pierce 10c if you wish a trial pkg.

COULD NOT DO HOUSEWORK

Woman Suffered until Relieved by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

St. Charles, Quebec.—"I was married three years and had no children. I was always troubled with pains in the abdomen and was not able to do my housework. After trying all other remedies suggested to me I have at last found that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the best in the world for me. It has done me more good than anything else I ever tried. I am well now and able to do my housework and care for my family. I recommend it to my friends as I am sure they will be satisfied."—Mrs. J. The Unwilling Adventuress

BY MILDRED BARBOUR

THE ANGRY LADY.

"You husky!" The beautiful woman in the doorway fairly spat the words at Doris, who stared, wide-eyed, too amazed to rise from the chair in which she sat before the remains of her dinner. The exciting novel had fallen into her lap. A sudden appreciation of her unconventional attire caused her to draw the negligee more closely around her slim figure, and a burning blush crept to the roots of her blonde hair. "You—you—are you the housekeeper?" she stammered. "Housekeeper!" snorted the lady and turned in triumphant disgust to the two men. "Where's Fielding?" muttered one of the two. "Run upstairs, Hawkins, and see what you find." "Idiot!" the lady was plainly in a bad temper. "Don't you see? He went through the window when he heard us in the hall. It's only a alley. No doubt he's safely in his drop from the garage roof to the club by now." She turned her lovely, scornful eyes on Doris, who said hastily, "let me in and get away to keep an engagement."

"The less you say the better for you," one of the men cut her off grimly. "Well!" he turned to the lady. "I guess we've got enough of the girl—practically—the little dinner tete-a-tete—his gimlet-like eyes raked the remains of Doris' feast. "Even the liquid refreshments," supplemented the lady acidly, pointing to the open bottle of Scotch and the siphon. "He certainly did the thing thoroughly. Even to getting rid of the caretaker for the evening." "Please!" Doris was on her feet, "Mr. Fielding himself, told me to stay here. I don't understand—" "You'll understand all right in court," the lady informed her briefly, as she turned away, motioning the man to precede her. Through the open door, Doris, puzzled, frightened, heard the other man descending the stairs. He was saying: "The girl's effects are in a bedroom upstairs, Mrs.—Doris could not catch the name. As the front door opened, she heard a new masculine voice question eagerly: "Have you a statement for the press." And the lady replied emphatically: "I must certainly have!" The door closed with a bang and Doris was left alone in the silent house. "Well, what do you know about that!" she asked herself earnestly. "And she wouldn't let me explain a thing! And who was that woman anyway? And where on earth is the caretaker?" After another minute or two of cogitation, she thought: "Suppose they were thieves trying to ransack a closed house?" It required some courage, but she managed to make a tour of the house. Nothing seemed to be in the least disturbed. Furniture, swathed in ghostly white, greeted her in almost every room. A slight film of dust on the polished floors of the closed apartments showed no sign of footprints. The man who had discovered her bag and travelling frock in the suite above the library had not even investigated his find; everything was just as she had left it when the ring at the front door had sent her hurrying down to admit the water with her dinner. Doris returned slowly to the library. She spied some tiny cakes which had accompanied the long-since-consumed ice pudding and which at the time, she had been unable to eat. She munched them thoughtfully and felt better. In fact, she scarcely needed the twelve strokes of the clock, somewhere in the house, to tell her that she was sleepy. The last thing she heard was the rattling of an alley cat somewhere in the ruined garden. Her last conscious thought was that New York people, judging by the events of the evening, must lead queer, eventful lives. But, hers not to reason why, hers but to obey— She awoke to bright sunlight and a tapping at her door. It took a full minute for her to become accustomed to the strange surroundings. She rubbed her eyes, yawned and called sleepily: "Who's there?" "Doris!" exclaimed a perturbed voice which, nevertheless, she recognized as that of her cousin Henry Fielding. "Are you there? Are you all right? I say, Doris, get into some things quick and come to the library. There's the deuce to pay!" Doris obeyed. Now everything would be explained, she thought, in pleasant anticipation. She would find out who that woman was who had called her "a husky" and why. Her cousin was pacing the library agitatedly when she arrived, looking as fresh as a rose. His face was pale and troubled, as nearly as a rubicund, jolly sort of gentleman can look troubled. "Doris," he gasped. "What on earth has happened? My wife—Camilla—in the papers this morning—she is suing for—divorce!" (To Be Continued.)

CRIME AGAINST HUMANITY

Mr. Bonnell pointed out that in this case the family had difficulty in meeting financial obligations on account of the burden of the member of the family who was seriously ill and he characterized such exploitation of sickness as a crime against humanity. He took up also Mormonism, theosophy and Chirochirology, an inquiry into Christian Science which will be completed next Sunday night. Mr. Bonnell pointed out that many of these new cults were called protestant, but there was no justification for giving them that title because practically all of them had departed from Protestant principles and doctrine and some of them were definitely sub-Christian and pagan. He stated that in order to meet the existing situation a greater knowledge of the Bible must be given to church people with sane interpretation and that the teaching function of the church must be revived immediately. On next Sunday night he will speak on "Faith Healing a Fad or a Fact."

To Unveil Life-Size Statue of Champ Clark

BOWLING GREEN, Mo., Nov. 16.—A $25,000 memorial to the late Champ Clark, statesman of Missouri, will be unveiled and dedicated on November 13. The Clark home has been located here for years. The memorial is a life-size, bronze statue mounted on a huge, red granite base. It will depict Champ Clark dressed as he appeared for many years in Congress, in a long, Prince Albert coat and flowing, string tie. An old-fashioned barbecue and basket picnic is planned in connection with the memorial dedication. Senator James A. Reed may make the feature address. Funds for the monument were appropriated by the 1925 Missouri legislature.

Modern Painters Busy Fall Paris Salon Shows

PARIS, Nov. 13.—The financial and economic situation in France seems to have left the production of ultra-modern art untouched, as there are more than 5000 canvases before the jury passing on the Autumn salon, which opened today. Cubists futurists and impressionists have been about 50 per cent busier during the last year than in 1925, when only 3600 canvases were offered and less than 3000 were sold. The severity of the jury's judgment has increased in even a greater proportion because this year's show comprises a more than usually liberal representation of retrospective art. There is less room for freaks. The retrospectives include an important exhibit of the works of Meryon, the water color artist, whose productions already have been shown in New York. Other retrospective collections are those of Ramon Pinchof, Felix Vallotton, Georges Dorignac, Roger de la Fresnaye, Leon Bakst, and Maxime Maufret. Another polar mystery is why the civilized world should go hunting new continents when it is having so much trouble with the old ones.

"Religious Fads," Sermon Subject

ST. JOHN, Nov. 16.—"Religious Fads of Today" is the subject of a series of sermons which Rev. J. S. Bonnell is delivering each Sunday night in St. Andrew's Kirk. Sunday night his text was "That we henceforth be no more children tossed to and fro and carried about by every wind of doctrine, by the slight of man and cunning craftiness whereby they lie in wait to deceive." Mr. Bonnell pointed out the tremendous growth in new sects and cults that are gathering about the fringes of Christianity. The United States has 202 different religions, Great Britain an even larger number and in Canada the number is about 100. In Saint John, Mr. Bonnell said, there had become established a half dozen new sects or cults recently. He charged that there were some of these that were preying upon the credulity of the residents of the city and further that there was one in particular, that he definitely was "thing stickiness." He cited a case from among several that had recently come to his notice. In this case increasingly large sums of money had been expended from a family in the city of which one member was ill of an incurable disease. The case had been pronounced hopeless by the family physician and was steadily becoming worse but the followers of one of these cults had taken the case in hand to "cure" the illness.

Premier Poincare As School Inspector

METZ, France, Nov. 15.—Raymond Poincare, Premier of France and Minister of Finance, recently took a few days off from the problems of the economic and financial situation and had been acting as a school inspector in the cities of Alsace and Lorraine. He dropped in during classes at Hebrew schools, Catholic and Protestant institutions and the denominational establishments of the French State. He sat patiently through lectures on Egyptian history in the "Lycees" or high schools and patted many a little blond Lorraine head in the kindergartens of Metz and vicinity. M. Poincare says this contact with the rising generation has renewed his own youth. Schools and colleges have always had a fascination for him. He comes of a teaching family. His uncle Lucien and his brother Henri were both famous scientists. It was only his early taking to politics that kept him from becoming a law professor.

Monument To Middleweight Champion

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Nov. 16.—The Lawrenceville district of Pittsburgh plans to honor the memory of its noted son, Harry Greb. A monument to the former middleweight champion of the world is to be erected in Lawrenceville Park and contributions to a fund for that purpose are being solicited. Greb was born in the Lawrenceville district.

KING AND FOCH AT ODDS OVER WAR FACTS

PARIS, Nov. 16.—King Albert of the Belgians, and Marshal Foch generalissimo of the Allied forces in the war, are at odds on a question of war facts. The controversy came into the open, today with the publication of a letter from the King to the Marshal, dated Saturday, categorically denying Foch's quoted assertion that he persuaded Albert not to allow the Belgians to retreat from the Yser in 1914. The King's letter replies to statements attributed to the Marshal by Stephane Lauzanne in an Armistice Day article printed in Le Matin. Albert says that when "Foch first called on him, on Nov. 16th, 1914, his (Albert's) proclamation of retreat would be the most treasonous act of his life. His staff considered retreat ten days later, but says that he absolutely opposed it, and the Belgians held the line. Marshal Foch's revelation of the "inside story" was incidental to his observation that he seldom commanded but generally persuaded. He recalled that he was without authority at that time, but "although I hadn't the right to command, I commanded." Marshal Foch today refused to comment on the King's letter. Among his intimates, however, it was pointed out that the article to which the King refers was not an interview, but a recital published on the responsibility of the author, M. Lauzanne, and that the Marshal could not be expected to interpret it.

N. S. Commission For Feeble Minded

(Canadian Press) HALIFAX, Nov. 16.—It was announced from the Premier's office yesterday afternoon that a commission under the chairmanship of Hon. W. L. Hall, Attorney General for Nova Scotia, had been appointed to make a study of the feeble minded and mental defectives in the Province with a view to ascertaining their number and their needs and to recommend what action might best be taken by the government in their interest. It is planned that the commission will have completed its deliberations and rendered a report before the next session of the legislative assembly early in 1927.

Champagne to Be Costlier

PARIS, Nov. 16.—Champagne of the 1926 vintage will be the most expensive in the history of France's sparkling wine. The quality, flavor and bouquet of the wine, however, will be on a par with its price, say wine agents who are visiting the trade. They have been warning their customers to stock up as the "price is likely to double within the next year." Already there has been a big increase. Fifteen francs per bottle was paid last year for Al Extra Dry in baskets of 25 bottles. Today the same wine is being quoted at 25 francs. The fundamental cause of the increase is in grapes. The best marks are being sold at Rheims for forty francs per pound. They cost 2.50 francs last year.
