The Bank of New Brunswick is putting in circulation a five-dollar note that while in many respects similar to former issues has some distinctive features that give it a local character. For instance, a picture of the bridges with the city in the distance takes the place of the allegorical figures on the former bills. The coloring is different and the numbers are put on in blue instead of red. The new bill is the $5 issue to show a portrait of the president, James Manchester. The bank is the same design as formerly, but the new color is green, where the old was blue. The new bill, besides making a fine appearance is expected to wear better than the old, while patrons of the bank generally will agree that they cannot get too many of them.

On Wednesday afternoon, Nov. 24th, at 4 o'clock, the Methodist church Hunter River was the scene of a very pretty wedding. The building was none too large to accommodate the expectant and interested company, who gathered to witness the marriage of J. C. Pope Bag-nall and Miss Annie Pound. The church was nicely decorated for the joyous occasion. The bride entered the church on the arm of her father, Samuel Pound. She was daintily gowned in white silk. Miss Idella Bagnall, sister of the groom, was bridesmaid, while Thomas Pound, brother of the bride, supported the groom. Rev. George Sellar performed the ceremony. A pleasing picture was presented when the noble looking bridegroom, and his lovely bride passed down the aisle, to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march. At the door they received showers of rice and good wishes. A reception was held afterward at the hospitable home of the bride, where a beautiful supper was served to one hundred guests. A delightful evening was spent. The bride received many handsome presents, among which was a pretty lemonade set and a silver napkin ring, from her Sunday School class. Last, but not least to the bride's respects to her happy couple, were the band of serenaders, who proclaimed their approval by the blowing of horns. Their costumes, gotten up for the occasion, were most marvellously constructed, and strikingly exhibited. Mr. and Mrs. Bagnall have the best wishes to their host of friends. May their homejoyment be continuous during life, and their happiness never ending.—Com. (Examiner please copy.)
