

LANCASTER, ONT. CARRIED BY "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

These Wonderful Fruit Juice Tablets Are Winning Friends on Every Side.

Lancaster, Ont., Sept. 16, 1908. I was a martyr for many years to that distressing complaint, chronic constipation. I tried many kinds of pills and medicines without benefit...

At first, I took five tablets a day, but now I take only one tablet every two days. I am now entirely well, and thanks to "Fruit-a-tives" I give you permission to publish this testimonial.

Dear Chum: I am enjoying my visit with grandpa and grandma hugely. Yesterday grandpa took me down to the docks to see the ocean liners. Great they're whoppers. I bought me my third box of Moir's Chocolates. They are the sweetest candies ever. The chocolate outside are awfully smooth and rich, and in the inside are cream, jellies and nuts. Those called Moir's Chocolate Chips taste like honey dipped in chocolate.

THE GUARDIAN'S WEEK END SERMON

Rev. D. Hemmon Halifax, preached recently from the following:—Text: II. Samuel 22, 36. "Thy Gentleness hath made me Great."

The quality of Gentleness was not that of the attributes of God that first influenced the lives of men. It is surprising to note how men looking at the Divine character see a reflection of their own natures. In war like times and among warring races God is frequently portrayed in the language of a warrior by his fierce but half-developed peoples. When man entered into the stage of systematic Government his picture of God was that of a law giver.

Nevertheless it is very instructive to learn how early in the history of man, revelations were given him of the deepest and loveliest qualities in the Divine Nature. We are prone to forget this fact and to ascribe to a late day the discovery of the higher characteristics of God.

The truth is that man has, in the fuller knowledge of a later time confused a deeper appreciation of high qualities with their discovery. How long it has taken man to come into a real appreciation of those finer attributes of God. Gentleness is without doubt one of these.

But the thing about this text that touches us most closely is not the early discovery or the late recognition of the Divine Gentleness, but rather the kind of effect it has on the nature of man. It is set forth as a distinct cause of his greatness. Thus we have at once two specific thoughts to unfold for ourselves as we study this text.

First we must try to find what this Gentleness of God is, and then, we must see in what kinds of ways it operates in our lives to make them great. What, then is Gentleness? For wherever you find it, it must be the same. Under what ever outward indications, it's acts possess a common factor.

The word is a very comprehensive one and refers to the spirit of life rather than to any specific act. Its origin alone indicates this because it comes from a word that refers to a race or a peculiar sort of people. It is an illustration of how the name of a class of people, living in a specific manner, comes to refer to that manner of life, whenever found, rather than to those peculiar people. The root of the word is dead but a divine democracy has made "gentleness" the living property of all who really wish to have it.

It appears then that we must seek for the meaning of this word Gentleness in its acts in order to find out what they possess in common. Let us begin with the acts of man, afterwards looking at those of God, because gentleness must be the same in both.

SEMON TAKE 2. You see manifestations of gentleness in many ways. In voice, in thought, in manner. A gentle voice is a quiet voice. A gentle hand is a hand controlled to quiet, orderly, deliberate ways. A gentle manner is a manner containing elements of ease, harmony, balance and purpose.

But, let us carry the matter a little further. There is something characteristic of all gentle acts that I am sure has impressed all of us at times. I refer to that manner of reaching a result by indirect rather than by direct methods. The gentle way always has at command the indirect method. It is the favorite resort of gentleness to be indirect. Let the swash-buckler and the roisterer, the "bluffer," and the fanatic, drive straight at their object. These are not the methods by which gentleness wins its victories. You can sometimes capture a man by knocking him down; but violence compels the unwilling and is the last resort of those who look for permanent results in human character.

The common element in the ways of gentleness already comes into sight, but before we indicate its nature, let us turn to those processes outside the control of the human will commonly called the laws of nature, but in reality the acts of God. See how gently the forces of God in nature do their work. How silently the most colossal of those forces works, yet with what power and delicacy. Heat and light and gravitation. The opening bud, the falling dew, the rising tide. How gently all these perform their tasks. Yet what tasks are more beautifully or more completely at work all around us!

And yet some little factory of man drops the loudest sound of nature. And then consider those forces operating in human life and consciousness by which God touches and influences men. What door "on golden hinges turning" ever opened so noiselessly as the entrance to a human heart when the hand of God turned the key? What angel's footstep ever went so softly as the entrance through that door of the Divine Presence?

Who could utter such words as these but God? "My doctrine shall drop as rain and my speech shall distil as the dew." Again, I taught Ephraim how to go, taking them by the arms, but they knew not how I healed them." God's gifts are gently given, for "He giveth unto His Loved in their sleep," and He is heard gently in "the still small voice."

Dialogue—Teacher—Name the Greatest Empire on Earth scholar—Empire Liniment Teacher—It is an excellent article, but why do you class it with other Empires? Scholar—Because it cures while other Empires are exercising their ungodly ingenuity to kill Teacher—Correct. Go to the head

Now let us go back in thought to the easy search for that common element I referred to a little while ago. What is it that none of these acts in God and man that have passed through our thought is without? Is it not the quality of patience? I am quite sure it is.

The ways by which God effects His purposes in the world are very slow. He does not bring men and communities to a high degree of excellence by sudden upheavals and unexpected demonstrations of power—not even by those crises in life so often heralded as all-efficient. These have their places, but they are sadly overestimated in their power to effect a permanent work. The greatest forces of operate according to law and law works with steady patience. God can afford to wait. Only man gets impatient. The quality in the life of Jesus that is underestimated the most in His Gentleness. It is this that makes it so difficult for contemporary civilization with its poor petulance and tawdry haste to understand Him. He was never hurried, never lost His calm. Even in his bitterest invective and deepest sarcasm, He shares His essential gentleness.

But how can this gentleness make us great? I think we will find that its greatness in us will prove of the same sort and show itself in somewhat the same way as it does in God Himself. How could it be otherwise? Greatness is the power of accomplishment. Greatness is efficiency. It may be on a low plane or a high one. Great gifts are those gifts that do great things. A great life is a life that greatly influences facts or things or men.

It is not very true and very beautiful then to see—and we can see it so clearly now—that the greatness that God makes us capable of is the power of accomplishing things through our patience.

But there is one more link necessary in the chain that binds the gentleness of God to the greatness of man and that is the union of God and man in man's consciousness. God's gentleness could never have made a David great, as he tells us it did in the text—in the midst of all the care and turmoil of his life, unless David had co-operated with God. Nothing, however vast, can be really great unless God has touched it somewhere through its human agent. Nothing, however humble, can be anything but great if the hand that did it tried to do the will of God.

The greatest of men have been the gentlest. Turn the pages of history and see it. Look abroad and, if you have eyes to discern, perceive it.

No power of man, however noisy or insistent can compare with the gentle silent influence that comes from gentle lives within whose strong and lovely lives we have been permitted to live. Whose hand but God's shall guide them to their place and whose out His shall crown them?

Sigmund Cattle, 1 Fat cow This Ayrshire herd founded in 1892 is the greatest and best known dairy herd ever offered at auction in the Maritime Provinces. They are all the very choicest breeding. Such sires as "Chittin" and "Burdock" (imp from Scotland) Pure Gold a winner at the world's Fair, Joek Marshfield imp from Ontario and the great Imp. bred Silver King bull Dainty and of Elmshade a first winner everywhere and at all ages, have been used as stock bulls in this herd 18 of Dainty's qualities of this herd we may say that it is well known they were kept for milk and that they certainly produced it.

Look After Your Cook's Reputation. Provide your cook with the best flour—"North West Gem"—and she will delight you every time she bakes, with the lightest, whitest, tastiest, most wholesome bread and buns that have ever entered your mouth. The strength of "North West Gem" Flour is not destroyed or the flavor impaired by the "electrical bleaching process," which is often resorted to for an All Manitoba wheat flour in order to attain the desired color. Because of the high quality of wheat we use, we get the rich, creamy white color without any "doctoring" whatever. Many other flours may be a trifle cheaper, but "North West Gem" is so much stronger—makes so many more loaves to the barrel—that it is far more economical in the end. Buy it from the better class of dealers. Brant-Wood Flour Mills, Limited, Brantford, Canada.

"NORTH-WEST-GEM" FLOUR. The next Sunday we were talking about "Queen City" flour. Says the Miller's Wife: "Never disappointed yet with it." Says our Grocer's Wife: "It saves time, worry and expense because I can do any kind of baking with it." Says the Miller: "We are turning out a real good article and one that gives satisfaction, and if that is not a pleasure what is? Be happy, too and order "Queen City" flour, and make the old miller happier still. A "Model Mill" product. THE CAMPBELL MILLING CO., LIMITED WEST TORONTO.
