THE RAREST.

In the bewildering round of fox deals, fox companies, fox purchases and fox, fox, with which the ears of the unfortunates are being constantly assailed and into the whirl of which the moneyed fortunes are plunging almost daily, the uninitiated wonder where all this is going to end. Men talk of money in hundreds of thousands today where, a few years ago, the present price of a pair of foxes would have been regarded as sufficient to retire upon. And the end is not yet by any means. There has been more money put into the business within the past few weeks than ever before. Outside capital is seeking investment with us whereas a few years ago our loose change was sent abroad to earn a living. The amount of money taken out of our savings banks and other ordinary securities and invested in the fox business during the past year would, if known, be an eye-opener. And similar investments are being made almost daily with even more eagerness than at the beginning of the business. Many are asking "where is all this going to end?"

In this as in all human ventures the end can only be conjectured. There are however some interesting facts in connection with the business from which legitimate deductions may be made. In the whole world today there are only four of what are classed as the most valuable furs. On these four the fashionable world depends for its fashionable furs. These are the Russian sable, the fur seal, the sea otter and the silver fox. While winters come and while men and women—especially women—look for the rarest and the best, these four classes of furs will be in demand, not because they are a great protection against the rigors of winter but for the simple reason that they are, financially, beyond the reach of all except society's "top notchers."

Those who would court the envy of their neighbors and at the same time keep themselves fairly comfortable with garments of Russian sable find themselves confronted with the fact that the Russian government has passed a law absolutely prohibiting the killing of sables during the next three years and prohibiting their exportation during the next fifteen years. This practically shuts out the sable.

The fur seals, which have been fairly abundant until threatened with extinction a few years ago, are now being protected by the British, Japanese and United States governments by a close season of five years, so that during these years we shall be obliged to seek warmth and the afore-said envy from other than the fur seal.

Should we wish to array ourselves with sea otter fur we are told that on the London market last year only sixty pelts were offered for sale and the animal is practically extinct. So we shall have to look elsewhere.

The silver fox is all that remains of the rarest, so that, humanly speaking, the life of the silver fox fur trade should be fairly insurable for some years to come.

This, from a casual, cursory glance at the fur situation, without malice aforethought and without any guarantee of the perpetuity of the present bewildering prices. We are neither advising nor warning but simply stating facts which appear to us to be interesting at the present interesting period in the history of one of the most remarkable stampees into any business in the history of our province.

MONEY TO BURN.

The expression is an old one. A man who is more than ordinarily lavish with his money is said to have "money to burn." In this modest little province of ours, where the year's receipts barely exceed the year's expenditures, it is only on stated and exceptional occasions that men give the impression that they are enjoying a conflagration of this kind. Usually the conflagration is of short duration and, not infrequently ends in the police court. Our experiences in burning money, therefore, are not extensive.

It is true that there are those, elsewhere, however, who have money, if not to "burn," have it so abundantly that they are constantly on the look out for opportunities in which to expend it. Go into any one of the world's largest cities and men and women will be found in hundreds who are constantly engaged in this search—and successfully, though not satisfactorily.

On the other hand, and we do not need to go into the world's largest cities for them—we can find them nearer home, there are those who are looking not for opportunities to spend but to make money. By the principles of ordinary mathematics, when there is abundance together with anxiety to spend, on the one hand, and want together with anxiety to acquire, on the other hand, the satisfying of the demands on both sides should be a comparatively easy matter. But evidently it is not. The spending is as much a problem as the acquiring, and in order to mate the two certain conditions must be complied with.

To spend money in a way that the common herd cannot afford to do is one of the difficulties on one side; to provide these opportunities is the difficulty on the other side.

How do we, as a province, which may fairly and without offence be regarded as belonging to the latter class, stand towards the proposition? The favorites of fortune are looking for enjoyable and "classy" opportunities to spend their money. We have means of enjoyment upon which they can spend to their hearts' content and delight as well. Right here in Charlottetown we have a harbor with river stretches second to few harbors on the continent, yet not one in perhaps fifty of the yacht owners who have "money to burn" know anything about it.

We have a climate which is credited in the mortuary statistics with being the best in the world and we are saying little about it. We have summer days and nights for the cooling, invigorating breath of which the perogians, struggling denizen of the city would gladly pay out his wealth but he has never heard of it.

We have the means to afford the kind of outlet that the money burners are looking for. Why not tell them about it.

NOTES.

The latter part of January and the first of February will see an addition of some four or five hundred to the population of Charlottetown. This will mean, first, that the newcomers must have accommodation. This we understand is being arranged by the Department of Agriculture and it is hoped that all who can furnish accommodation will co-operate in every way with the department. It will mean, second, that representative men from all over the province will be given an opportunity to see how Charlottetown lives, moves and has its being. It will therefore be an advertisement for Charlottetown which will be spoken, not read, all over the province. Here is an opportunity for a profitable advertisement. It will be remembered that our relation with the newcomers will not involve bleeding them to see how much we can get out of them but rather to see how much we can do for them. In doing this we shall help them, make it pleasant for them and give them a desire to come again and incidentally we shall be helping ourselves.

IN MEMORIAM.

There passed peacefully to his eternal rest on Tuesday, Dec. 17th, 1912, Abney Gay, an old and respected resident of Mount Hope, at the age of 79 years. Mr. Gay was a son of the late Howard Gay of Pownal and when a very young man settled in Mt. Hope where with his wife and family he had lived till death called him beyond. Mr. Gay had been in poor health for many years but was not confined to his bed till two weeks before his death. He was a consistent member of the Methodist Church and bore his sufferings with patient resignation to the divine will. He leaves to mourn a sorrowing widow, two sons and five daughters, namely: Samuel S. Gay, Sheriff, Las Vegas, Nevada; Archibald T. Gay, Perbeck, Alberta; Mrs. William Schroeder, Cedar Cottage, B.C.; Mrs. Emil Anderson, Harvard, Mass.; Mrs. Charles Blair, Aburndale, Mass.; Mrs. Fred VanWormer, Aburndale, Mass.; and Mrs. Alex. McKay, of Mount Hope, who with her mother waited on him during his last illness, and two brothers and one sister, namely: J. J. Gay of Charlottetown, P.E.I., and Reany Gay of Ohio, and Mrs. Benjamin Jenkins of Mount Albion, P. E. I. All that kind friends and medical skill could do was done but of no avail. The funeral services were conducted by his pastor the Rev. Mr. W. M. N. McLeod, assisted by the Rev. M. N. McLeod. The remains were laid to rest in the family plot at Dundas Cemetery.
