Happenings Of The Week

With the approach of Princess Elizabeth's eighteen birthday on April 21, when she legally comes of age, the King is facing four problems concerning his daughter. They are: (1) Her future title, (2) the question of national service, (3) her higher education, and (4) her appearances in public. So far the King has not finally decided whether to bestow a new title on the Princess or not. If he does, it will be a life dukedom, which would not entitle her to sit in the House of Lords, since peeresses in their own right are debarred from the House, and which would not descend to her children. In this case the King may either revive one of the former royal dukedoms or create an entirely new title, like the Duchess of Cymuru or Glawia, as suggested by Welsh enthusiasts.

Beatrix, "Bringer of Joy", is the name of Princess Juliana's eldest daughter who Monday celebrated her 6th birthday. Though Holland and the House of Orange have lived through many dark years since that happy day in January 1938, Princess Beatrix and her little sisters have continued to be the hope of the future to Hollanders all over the world and particularly in the occupied Fatherland. Princess Beatrix, Wilhelmina Armgard, who some day may be Queen of The Netherlands, has as yet little knowledge of the important position she will have in a liberated Holland—nor of the burning love with which the return of the Royal Family is awaited there. But she does know that she and her sisters Irene and Margriet Francisca are Dutch children, that Holland is their Fatherland and that some day they will go back there. Six years ago a happy young couple called their first child Beatrix. And some day that child will make the deep significance of her name come true, when again she will set foot on Netherlands soil.

Bright Phrases Win Friends

Gay, friend-winning repartee! A girl needs it these days, for chances to make friends are brief—a casual meeting, a few minutes between dances, that's about all.

So, if you get stuck on "yes . . . no . . . I don't know" at such times, learn a few bright phrases.

Then, meeting Jack on the street, you slip easily into talk with a smiling "This is nice. . . . What are you doing in this part of town?" and what to say next is no problem!

As you get the trick you sail smoothly into a party with a "So nice of you to ask me" to your hostess; you get your dance partners to beaming with a deft compliment, "How well you rhumba!" In letters, too, you sound sincere with a warm "all my love and sympathy," instead of a chilly "sorry to hear."

Our 32-page booklet lists dozens and dozens of ways to make your conversation and letters sparkle.

CHAPTER VI
A SUBMARINE APPEARS

As a companion Hugh preferred the comparatively taciturn Martin to the lively Mason crowd, especially since it included a girl who taunted and threatened physical violence.

"Darned tomboy!" he grunted aloud.

"Muriel Mason, I guess", Martin remarked.

"Eh! Was I talking to myself? Yes, you're right. Some of these modern girls are the limit."

"She's not so bad."

"Huh! You'd have changed your mind if she'd biffed you on the chin. And for two pins she would have done.

"What's the sense in worrying over might-have-beens?"

"I don't like her. In fact, I don't like any of them."

"Nor me?"

Hugh glared. "You included", he agreed. "The whole human race doesn't match up to the birds. They don't barter and bicker over business."

"Only over food," Mr. Martin interposed. "Comes to the same thing, if you ask me."

"I wish you'd all clear out! What a sanctuary!"

Strangely enough, for a self-advertised recluse, his path took him frequently in the direction of the encampment. Two tents had been erected in a sheltered spot half a mile from the sea, overlooking the western cove, and near the largest clump of trees the island boasted. Pewsey Mason busied himself taking photographs.

"Father's so keen he thinks of staying until spring" Muriel said, with calculated malice.

"He won't find the winter pleasant."

"Then we'll accept an invitation to move into the house."

"No room," said Hugh hastily.

She cocked her head on one side. "Mr. Martin tells us he proposes to leave by the first boat. If the worst comes to the worst we can run him across to the mainland."

"Shortages of stores, too!"

"Same applies. The Elder Duck has exceptional carrying capacity. So you needn't make plausible excuses. Between you and me and the gatepost, I'm disappointed in you."

"For not having a scraggy beard?"

"For making a bigger fuss of Mr. Martin than my father."

"Does that go for George as well?"

She regarded him quizzically. "If you weren't a hermit I'd suspect the intrusion of a serpent into this garden of Eden."

"Good heavens!"

"For my part I wouldn't be impressed if you were the only girl".

"Ah, but I am," she laughed, turning away and leaving him to puzzle over the implication.

Going back to the eastward side he discovered Martin in the act of pitching a bottle into the sea. "In the hope it will reach my friends and tell them the fix I'm in," he explained.

There was nothing untoward in this, and Hugh dismissed it as an example of picturesque optimism until he discovered the following day, a broken bottle washed ashore. Among the fragments was a sheet of paper closely covered with letters and figures in what was obviously a code. At the foot of the document was a six-letter grounding, sufficient of a coincident to suggest "Martin" as the signature.

Instead of turning it over to the probable writer he placed the paper in his wallet, a tacit admission that he was again querying the motive of his first and stickiest visitor.

"Silly idea", he mused. "If the blighter wants to write in code why shouldn't he? But how would his business friends get it? There isn't a legible address. Only a person conversant with the code could read the message."

Whenever he harboured suspicious thoughts he always came up against the blank wall of why anyone should be mysteriously interested in Ovarn.

It was understandable that a naturalist, like Pewsey Mason, should come to study the wild life. At this point he pulled up short. There was no better cause to trust the crew of the Elder Duck then the man in the rowing boat. What if they were in league, and pretending to be strangers But nothing untoward had occurred—unless there was anything in those imagined footsteps, or the coded message. And he had no intention of precipitating trouble.

No further references were made to the bottle on either side. Martin was beginning to chafe at being cut off from the shore, yet he always declined to venture forth in his cockleshell.

Hugh was at the Mason's camp when the astonishing visitant of all finally put an end to his expectations of finding Ovarn Island

HINDERS BREATHING—SPOILS SLEEP

3-PURPOSE MEDICINE

Here's mighty good news . . . If your nose "closes up" at night and makes breathing difficult, put 3-purpose Vicks Va-tro-nol up each nostril.

Va-tro-nol does 3 important things: (1) shrinks swollen membranes; (2) soothes irritation; (3) helps flush nasal passages, clearing clogging mucus, relieving transient congestion. It brings more comfort, makes breathing easier, invites sleep. ...And remember, it helps prevent colds from developing if used in time.

Living & Leisure

The Woman's Realm

Thirty days hath September,
April, June and November;
All the rest have thirty-one
Excepting February alone:
Which hath but twenty-eight, in fine,
Till leap year gives it twenty-nine.
—Common in New England States

The time measured by the sun's revolution in the ecliptic from any equinox or solastice to the same again contains 365 days, 5 hours, 48 minutes and 57 seconds. This is called the solar year, and is the only natural or proper year, because it always keeps the same seasons to the same months. Now the civil or common year consists of only 365 days, therefore we should lose 5 hours, 48 minutes, and 57 seconds; but a day being added every fourth year, brings the solar or civil years very nearly equal. This is called the Julian year, on account of Julius Ceasar, who appointed the intercalary day, thinking thereby to make the civil and solar years to keep together; and this day being added to the 23rd of February, which in the Roman calendar was sixth of the Calends of March, the sixth day was twice reckoned, and called Bissextile Dies, and thence comes the name Bissextile for leap year. But in our almanacs this day is added at the end of February.

Burns are almost as frequent as falls in the list of accidents in the home. If the burn is serious, you should call a doctor. But if it is slight, here is a simple treatment used in the armed services, and in many industrial plants. Before treating the burn, wash your hands thoroughly with a mild soap. Then cleanse the burned area gently with the same pure, mild soap and water. Do not break any blisters. Cover the area with fine sterile gauze coated with petrolatum (petroleum jelly), and bandage firmly but not tightly with a thick dressing.

NO MORE TREATS FOR SPARROWS

What to do with not-so-fresh cake and cookies is always a problem. What about cutting the cake fingers, adding fruit and uncooked custard mixture. Set in a pan of hot water and oven-poach until set. Ever tried stuffing baker apples with stale cookie or cake crumbs? Good, but don't forget the spices!

PAINTING POINTER

A paper plate or a piece of cardboard glued to the bottom of a paint can will catch the drippings from the can and will also serve as a rest for the paint brush.

TABLE PROTECTION

In order to prevent the meat grinders from scratching or marring the surface of the table, it's a good idea to put a piece of wood or masonite on the kitchen table before clamping on the grinder. If there is trouble in getting a bowl to fit underneath the mouth of the grinder, the extra height that the wood or masonite gives, will often take care of the bowl problem.

DOUBLE DUTY

Even the weatherman has been helping Canadians conserve fuel. In many parts of the country the winter has been mild compared with other years. But even so, there are times when a cold breeze sneaks in over the window sill. To keep the cold where it belongs ...outside... try putting a folded newspaper between the storm windows and the inside window. Catches dust and dirt too...and helps keep your curtains clean.

SPLASHY FLOWERS ON LIGHT GROUNDS

NEW YORK — Large, splashy, flowers on white backgrounds and pastels indicate, by their spacing, a lack of the use of abundance of dyes.

Border prints, generally in patterns borrowed from our Latin-American neighbors, remind us how well the Guatemalans use purple and yellow in their borders, and how with simple changes they may be adapted to our taste. Red splashed with yellow and green flowers on rayon crepe give us the sultry tropical feeling of Mexico, as do prints of leaves and bright flowers. One of the new prints features two tones—light blue medium print on a brown background, or perhaps a shocking pink on green, or white on gray. Peacock blue and a deep "hot" pink, slightly darker than last year's shade, are often background colors for small rather indefinite prints in black.

HELPFUL HINTS

1. If you are using corn syrup, honey or molasses in cake making, measure your shortening first Rub inside surface of cup with any fat remaining in it. Then measure your syrup. You'll find it a lot easier to get the syrup out of the cup.

2. When you make apple sauce leave the skins on apples, cut into quarters and cook until tender in small amount of water. Put apples through coarse sieve to remove the cores and skins before sugar is added. You save time and labor and get more real apple flavor.

3. Save the water in which vegetables have been cooked and use in meat pies, cream sauces or in soups. This liquid contains valuable vitamins and minerals.

CLEAN CARDS WITH TALCUM POWDER

If you're a bridge enthusiast and your playing cards aren't what they used to be—here are several ways to make them new again Try cleaning them with talcum powder. Yes, it really works! Just place the cards in a pie tin, sprinkle with talcum and rub with a soft dry cloth.

Linen cards can be cleaned very successfully if you wipe them off with a cloth dipped in gentle suds.

A Job Only You Can Do

Price Control Questions And Answers

Questions and Answers on Price Control will appear in The Guardian as a regular feature each day. The questions are those which have reached the Wartime Prices and Trade Board from housewives in this region. The answers are provided by the Board Readers. Persons who have intelligent questions to ask no price control are invited to send them in writing to the Women's Regional Advisory Committee of the War Times Prices and Trade Board.

Q. Does the new regulation on the increased value of "D" coupons refer only to those becoming valid on and after February 3rd?

A. The increased value of "D" coupons covers all those "D" coupons that are valid in the hands of the consumers on February 3rd.

Q. Does the increase in the value of "D" coupons double the quantity of baby foods that I can get?

A. Yes, you are now able to get two tins of baby foods where formerly you could get only one. Canned fruit is increased from 10 to 20 fluid ounces per coupon.

Q. Why is there such a variation in the price of raisins? I thought there was a price ceiling on them.

A. There is a price ceiling on raisins. Raisins are bought in bulk by a government agency, and then sold to the trade at a price which enables them to be resold to the consumer at approximately the basic period price. However, because of individual ceilings the price is bound to vary from store to store. In addition the raisins from Australia are cheaper than those from California, and both are imported into Canada.

THE COOK'S CORNER

CRISP MOLASSES COOKIES

There is a nice rich deep color to these cookies which, like the extra food value and flavor it gives them, they owe to the molasses in the dough. The cookies have a nice tangy flavor, sweet but not too much so.

6 tablespoons shortening
1 cup (lightly packed) brown sugar
1½ teaspoons baking soda
¾ cup molasses
1-3 cups sour milk or buttermilk
3 cups once-sifted pastry flour or 2¾ cups once-sifted bread flour
2 teaspoons ground ginger
1½ teaspoons salt

Cream shortening and gradually blend in sugar

Dissolve soda in molasses and add gradually to creamed mixture, then add sour milk or buttermilk.

Mix and sift flour, ginger and salt and add to first mixture. Chill thoroughly.

Roll thin on lightly floured canvas or baking board and cut with a floured cookie cutter.

Bake in a rather slow oven, 365 degrees, about 15 minutes.

A Morning Smile

SHORT HOLIDAY

A sturdy old farmer had a wife who had long rendered his life anything but a bed of roses. In a fit of pique, she packed her goods and left him, vowing never to return. The news went round among the neighbors, and at night several of them arrived to condole with him. He sat on his front post, pulling away at his pipe. "Jim," remarked one of his neighbors, "I pity you."

"My boy," replied the honest man, as he knocked the ashes out of his pipe, "you're right. She has just come back."

MAKING IT CLEAR

Captain—Well, Pte. Smith, what did you have for dinner

Private—Taters, sir.

Captain (to sergeant) — What does he mean by "taters," sergeant?

Sergeant—It's only his ignorance, sir. He means "spuds."

Your medicine chest will give you another good cleanser—camphor spirits. Remove the surface dirt from your cards with a soft cloth lightly moistened in the camphor.

PARSLEY PREVIEW

There's no charge or priority demanded for the extra ration of iron in tangy flavoured parsley. Its fresh dark green colour has become utility battledress this year, and when it goes "active" it adds iron and vitamins A and C to our diets. Chop it up fine and float it on soup . . . at the last minute of course. Or use it on vegetables in raw salads, fish dishes.

WARNED INTERLOPERS

Daniel Webster, as American secretary of state, was the first to warn other nations to keep out of the Hawaiian islands.

Dorothy Dix Says—

MARRIED MAN NEEDS SOME FUN

Wife Unwise to Object to Husband's Part Office Entertainment Before Holidays

DEAR MISS DIX—My husband and I have been married nor two years. We have been very happy and he is a good husband every way, but this is my trouble: He works for a large company has recently been made supervisor of his department. This com has a great habit of having parties at halls, especially if someone for the army or at Thanksgiving and Christmas, etc. There are men and women at these affairs and they have dancing and drinks employe contributing his share of the expenses.

I greatly object to my husband going to affairs, but he claims he has to in his position says that when he doesn't go the fellows rib about his wife not letting him out. It isn't don't trust my husband, because I do, but he years old and very good-looking and I am sure he goes to these parties he doesn't sit in a corn because he likes to dance and join in the although he isn't one who cares for women.

All of this upsets me very much and we have arguments over it, and he says if I don't trust him is just too bad. Am I wrong in the position I on the subject

A WIFE.

MEN NEED SOME WOMEN TO PLAY WITH

Answer—I think you are wrong. Absolutely. And that you taking the best possible course of losing a perfectly good husband. men have to have some woman to play with and if their wives won it, there is always some accommodating lady around who will help make whoopee.

One of the main reasons why so many men get so fed up with marriage that they jump the bars in search of greener fields and pastures newer is because their wives make domesticity all work and no play. They think that after a hard day's work a man should ask no other diversion than painting the kitchen floor, or putting up new shelves in the pantry. So they throw cold water on all the plans of Friend Husband to amuse himself, and he has to either sneak his good times, or have a fight to get them. And when any man comes to look upon his wife as a killjoy it is all over but the divorce decree.

It seems to me that is what you are doing in objecting to your husband going to the parties his firm throws, and that if you were wise instead of making scenes over it and acting like an injured wife, you would get a fresh hairdo and put on your prettiest frock and go along with him and pretend to enjoy it whether you do so or not.

He is right in saying that it is good policy for him to cooperate with those with whom he works, for employes will put their hearts and backs into working for a boss they like that they never will for one they think highhats them.

It is a pity that wives cannot realize that when men and women work together, day after day, year after year, they establish a relationship to each other that did not exist in the old days when the sexes were segregated and only thrown together on formal occasions. All of the gallantries, the picking up of a lady's handkerchief, the helping her out of a gutter, the flowery compliments and the distant reserve, go into the discard when a man and woman work together at the same machine, and when he bawls her out for her bad spelling, or she calls him down for loafing on his job.

Working together washes out all sense of difference in sex. They are neither man nor woman to each other. They are just two people on the same job, and they come to treat each other with a familiarity that makes wives green-eyed, but that, in reality, seldom has any sentimental significance.

Other times, other manners. Perhaps the wife is a rare bird who doesn't labor under the delusion that every woman her husband is throwing with is trying to steal him. But wives in general would save themselves a lot of grief if they would only realize that nowhere, outside of a monastery, is a man so safe from feminine wiles as he is in a factory or business office. The men and women who are working together to make a living are thinking about money, not love.

DEAR MISS DIX—My sympathy goes out to that 18-year-old girl who wrote you the other day about receiving unwelcome attentions from an elderly boss. Having spent twenty years defanging wolves, I believe I have acquired a pretty fair technique, and this is my advice to her:

By no means try to talk over the situation with such a man, for undoubtedly his vanity would be wounded and he would make the position impossible for you to stay on. Then check on yourself and be sure that you are keeping your distance and that there is no touching of hands or shoulders. Be sure that your skirts are always in place; that your clothing is not suggestive of the boudoir, but that it screams aloud of the office and the honest working girl; brassieres always worn, sweaters taboo; eyes on your work and no personalities.

Keep in mind that it is the first duty of a good secretary to keep her man's mind on his work, not on her. If he has children or grandchildren, drag them into the conversation. It is pretty difficult to make love to a girl and talk about your progeny at the same time.

It is a good play to pretend to be engaged. Talk about John or Jim, who is off fighting for his country, even if there is no such person. The old-fashioned girl always had a brother or a father just around the corner with a shot gun or a buggy whip to avenge her honor, and it is a good policy to gently bring such a male relative into the conversation just in case.

Try these suggestions out on your typewriter and see if they do work.

A GIRL WHO KNOWS.

ANSWER—I commend these words of wisdom from a lady Solomon to my correspondent and to all young and inexperienced girls who do not know how to handle the wolves who are bent on devouring them. The war is a cruel situation. They cannot give up their jobs and flee from danger because they must work, or starve, and there are also at home, perhaps, old and sick people and little children who are dependent on the meager salaries for a livelihood.

And the poor little creatures are defenseless because they lack the knowledge and the worldly wisdom of how to laugh off attentions that revolt them, and have not the skill to tame a wild beast and turn it into a watch dog. Yet it can be done, and the letter quoted above shows how to turn the trick. For it is a curious thing that many a man who starts out by trying to tempt a girl to wander off of the straight and narrow path helps her to keep on it when he finds out that she is really good and means to stay that way.

This Home-Mixed Cough Relief Is Hard To Beat

Very Easy to Make. No Cooking. Saves Big Money.

No matter what you've been using for coughs due to colds, you'll be the first to admit that this surprising relief, mixed in your own kitchen, is hard to beat, for real results.

Make a syrup by stirring 2 cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. No cooking is needed—anyone can do it. Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.

Then put 2½ ounces of Pinex (obtained from any druggist) into a 16 oz. bottle, and add your syrup. This gives you 16 ounces of really excellent cough relief—about 4 times as much for your money. Tastes fine—children love it—and it never spoils.

You can feel this home mixture taking right hold of a cough. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and helps clear the air passages. Eases soreness and difficult breathing, and lets you sleep. Once tried, you'll swear by it.

Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated form, a most reliable soothing agent for throat and bronchial membranes. Just try it, and if not satisfied, your money will be refunded.

MONTREAL, Feb. 3 — (CP)— Dr. Gustavo de Hostas, a Dominican, bit off part of an opponent's left ear during a hand-to-hand fight over a "pretty blond young woman student at McGill University here," and today Mr. Justice Alphonse Decary condemned him to pay $1,500 damage.

The judgment, in Superior Court, was rendered in favor of Carlos Gubbins, a medical student, the other party to the fight which took place during a party given for West Indians.

Mr Justice Decary awarded $400 of the $1,500 damage for "the humiliation."
