Carole Lombard and Fredric March In "Nothing Sacred" At Prince Edward

"Nothing Sacred". New Technicolor comedy sensation co-starring Carole Lombard and Fredric March literally roared on to the screen of the Prince Edward Theatre last night. The laughs started from the first flash of the original and satirical maintitle which describes New York as . . . 'Skyscraper Champion of the World. . . . With a Silk Hat for a Soul and a Mammy Song for a Heart . . . Bagdad, Babylon and Podunk in a Cake-Walk between two River Banks." From then on the hilarity gathers momentum as the action of the picture unfolds.

For sheer entertainment that will make you forget your inhibition and explode in raucus guffaws of mirth, "Nothing Sacred" is just what the doctor ordered, and the doctor in the picture is portrayed by Charles Winninger who comes to the big city just for the ride and aids and abets Carole Lombard as Hazel Flagg, the small town gal in perpetrating a colossal hoax that turns New York inside out. Fredric March is the ace reporter of the "Morning Star" who concocts the "story of the century" with Carole as the central figure.

"Nothing Sacred" dramatizes life in New York as Mr. Selznick's previous hit "A Star Is Born" dramatized life in Hollywood. As the title implies, it pokes fun at people and things, which in this case is New York and some of its foibles.

To Carole Lombard and Fredric March however go the high honors for performances that stand out like the Empire State Building on the New York skyline. Miss Lombard's flair for comedy has been established in previous hits, but she surpasse anything she has done heretofore. Frederic March makes an ideal team mate for the blonde and beautiful Carole and after their romantic merger in "Nothing Sacred" it is predicted the public will clamor to see them together in more pictures of this same fast-action, romantic type.

Descendant Of Early Settlers Visits Province

Returns To Mediterranean After Enjoyable Stay With Relatives.

Terminating a three weeks' enjoyable visit to Prince Edward Island where they were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. B. MacLaren, Georgetown, Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Chater leave this morning for the Mediterranean. Mr. Chater, who is a nephew of Mr. MacLaren, and a descendant on his mother's side of the pioneer settlers at Brudenell, had long entertained a desire to see this province and is so pleased with this, his first visit, that he plans coming back again in the not too distant future.

His mother revisited her old home here shortly before the War, and again in 1927.

Born at Hyeres, France, Mr. Chater was brought up and educated in England, where he served his apprenticeship as a mechanical engineer. His subsequent life has been packed with adventure. Going out to South America as a young man, he resided first in Mexico, later moved to the Argentine, then to Brazil, where he remained for eleven years. A country of marvellous resources, he found political conditions in Brazil to be such as to make settled progress difficult, and residence there undesirable in recent years.

Retiring from active business a few years ago, Mr. Chater returned to England, but found the climate there unsuited to him. He then decided to realize a boyish ambition of becoming an amateur sailor. Purchasing a 54 ft. schooner, which he had built to order, he sailed with Mrs. Chater to the Mediterranean. They have since spent their time chiefly on board their boat, cruising to Mediterranean ports.

Mrs. Chater, like her husband, has travelled extensively. She is a native of Switzerland.

The outbreak of the Spanish War two years ago found Mr. Chater in Valencia. He had no difficulty, however, in getting safely out of the country.

He recalls that about 30 years ago he visited British Columbia, found the province in the throes of a financial crash, and decided to return to South America. That was his only visit to Canada prior to his present trip to this province.

Delighted With P. E. I.

"I was surprised at the delightful atmosphere of Prince Edward Island," Mr. Chater told a Guardian representative yesterday. "You have wonderful attractions for summer visitors. What impressed me most of all is the peace, comfort and general air of well-being that we see on every hand. Your people seem to be free from the get-rich-quick mania and are content to live sane and normal lives, enjoying the fruits of their husbandry in health, modest wealth, and contentment.

"I was surprised, however, to see so few tourists. I understand their number is increasing every year, but there is great scope for further progress here in developing what in France has become a major industry—the tourist trade."

While paved roads are a profitable investment from the tourist standpoint, Mr. Chater believed that much of the picturesque effect of Island scenery will be lost when all the roads are paved, and expressed the hope that this will not be achieved for at least some years to come.

In the matter of railway transportation, he believed much improvement could be effected by a more extensive use of Deisel motor engines. The present passenger service impressed him as being one of our worst drawbacks. He had, however, nothing but praise for the splendid facilities provided by the car ferry steamer.

He was greatly interested to learn of the revival in yachting and of the success of the recent regatta held by the Charlottetown Yacht Club. What surprised him was the absence of sailing craft in the many estuaries and coves which indent the Island's coastline.

He was also pleased to learn of the prospects for obtaining federal aid in building a modern civic airport. Eventually, he predicted, we would be connected by direct air transportation with Boston, New York and other large centres.

Discussing the European situation, Mr. Chater said that Great Britain for the past few years had been in the position of an unarmed policeman having to tackle a couple of gangsters. "When the policeman has been given his proper protective equipment, I think the gangsters will speedily be brought to heel. That seems to be what is in the mind of the British Government at present. If we can only keep out of a war for the next twelve months, the situation will take on quite a different complexion."

Canada's Part

In this connection Mr. Chater believed that Canada had a great part to play. It is obvious, he said, that Britain must have Canada's fullest support and co-operation in the manufacture of war munitions of all kinds. At present we are free from the threat of enemy air forces, but the next ten years are likely to see tremendous development in long distance air flights, and in co-operating with the Old Country in maintaining world peace we will be contributing directly to our own safety and security.

With regard to the outcome of the war in Spain, Mr. Chater said he could venture no prediction. The bitterness of the struggle on both sides has been the subject of surprised comment, but this was usually the case, he pointed out, in civil strife. He had been told by a Spanish physician never to forget that "Africa begins at the Pyrenees," and that European standards of civilization cannot be applied too literally to a people whose tradition includes Moorish as well as European elements of culture.

Oil Magnate Sees Island Summer Paradise

Mr. James M. Corbett, Oklahoma oil magnate, who arrived at Georgetown Friday by plane on his annual visit to Prince Edward Island, postponed the take off this morning for his return flight, and instead plans to leave this morning at 5 A. M. Departure yesterday was postponed because his son, Morgan, Jr., was not feeling very well. He was said to be feeling much better last night.

Accompanying Corbett on his visit here are his two children, Morgan and Ronayne; Mr. E. K. Jacquith, Boston; and "Mickey" Madrazo, pilot of the three-ton, six passenger Loeing air yacht. The big amphibian has a cruising speed of 110 miles an hour, and is one of three amphibians owned by the Oklahoman.

He plans to make the first stop on the return flight at Rockland, Me., landing next at Boston, and regretted he had not been able to make a flight skirting the coast of this province.

Of Prince Edward Island, he said there "was everything in the world to be proud of—beautiful beaches, long rolling terrain, everything one wants in a summer home. Being an Island and off the beaten path is another factor in your favor. The road to every summer home built on the shore in your province is practically a private road. I cannot praise too highly the hospitality and friendliness of your people."

"You have a summer paradise here. It is one of the few unspoiled places, easily accessible, uncrowded and unsullied.... strange to say, I have never seen any real publicity about your delightful Island."

Along the Atlantic seaboard of the United States, he said, the choice places had either been taken up or could be secured only at a very high price. Although there were some old houses which were available, these would have to be remodelled or rebuilt. In any event, he stated, the summer resident would be crowded on all sides.

Discussing preservation of historic sites in connection with the tourist industry, Corbett spoke of the historic Plymouth rock, two-thirds of which he said had been carried off by souvenir hunters.

The well-known oil magnate spoke of the oil-seeking activities at Governor's Island in Hillsborough Bay undertaken by Hugh MacKay of Sepulpa, Oklahoma, and which he had followed with interest.

"You have the Gulf structure in Prince Edward Island," he said, similar to the gulf area in the United States, including Louisiana and Texas. I believe that if a seismograph crew were brought to the Island to carry on scientific work, the results would be satisfactory." He described the process which, by means of sub-surface detonations at approximately 1,100 feet below the ground, and the consequent vibrations which were recorded through geophones sunk a short distance below the surface level, data regarding the geological structure of the area surveyed was gathered. Their data was incorporated in a map from which could be learned whether there was anti-cline or hole in the area, or possible oil-bearing sand. From these maps also could be determined the most favorable spot for drilling operations.

This process, he said, had been in general use in Oklahoma, and had been responsible for the finding of between 75 and 87 per cent of the new pools.
