PROPERTY SALE TOMORROW—Mr. R. E. Colwill is offering his residence Number 186 Prince Street for sale tomorrow (Saturday). This is a most desirable residence, nicely situated and in splendid repair. A good barn and garage in the rear, make up an ideal property. The advertisement appears in this issue.

A SERIOUS FIRE—On Thursday morning a barn belonging to Rudolph MacEachern of Cannavoy, West St. Peters, was destroyed by fire with practically all its contents including a horse, five cows, and other live stock, and almost all his hay crop. The origin of the fire is unknown. It is thought to be spontaneous combustion. The loss is a heavy one as there is no insurance. With Mr. MacEachern it is a case of misfortune not coming singly, because on the following morning another of his barns was blown over by the gale.

ENJOYABLE VISIT.—Mr. and Mrs. Will Finley and little daughter of Arlington, Mass., motored to the Island last week for a short visit. Mr. Finley, who is a nephew of Messrs. Charles and George Dunsford, South Melville and Mrs. John Bell of Charlotte town is making his first visit to the Island. His many relatives are delighted to meet him although regretting that his visit has to be so short. Mr. Finley speaks very highly of the beauty of the Island and cannot understand why so many of our young people are leaving it for the larger cities.

Further Particulars of Wrecked Schooner

The following despatch was received yesterday: Those who sailed on the Anna MacDonald last June from Cardigan, P. E. I., included Captain W. A. Miller, Stanley Bridge, P. E. I., Henry Brown, Mate, New Brunswick, Claude Archibald, Nova Scotia, Joseph Rogers, New Brunswick, Edward Purcell of Prospect, ship ped on the vessel a year ago.

These men and another one, name unknown, are believed to have made up the crew of the ill-fated vessel when she sailed from New York on August 19th with 312 tons of anthracite for R. E. Archibald, Halifax, to whom she was under charter.

The Prospect shore is strewn with wreckage.

On the Kitty Witly Shoals which are still being swept with angry seas, is a storm tossed battered vessel of all that is left of the Anna MacDonald.

Fishermen endeavored to examine the wreckage today in the possible hope of recovering the bodies of the crew either in the cabin or lashed to the rigging but were prevented so doing by high seas. While it is thought improbable that any of the crew remained with the wreck, a second attempt will be made tomorrow to examine the wreck.

The entrance to Prospect Harbor, where the Anna MacDonald was wrecked on Tuesday night, is one of the most dangerous spots on the coast of Nova Scotia. It is five or six miles east of the entrance to St. Margaret's Bay.

The channel to Prospect is among a number of precipitous rocky islands at the head of which stands Betty Island. On the Island is a light house and behind this lies breakfast Island and Gull Rock, and others, all dangerous. Kitty Witly and other shoals add to the difficulty of navigating the channel and in a sou'easter such as on Tuesday night, an attempt to run in past the Betty Island lighthouse would be a perilous undertaking, in which the slightest miscalculation would bring disaster.

The first word of the wreck reached the agent of the Marine Department, Halifax, was to the effect that the vessel had gone ashore the night previous at Prospect and was a total wreck and there was no sign of the crew.

The last reported as out of water, the masts gone, one of them having been picked up. A coat was also found. It was feared, the communication to Mr. Harvey said, that all hands were lost.

The schooner was 105.5 feet in length, breadth of 25.5 feet, and depth of 10 feet and was registered in Charlottetown.

The schooner had taken a cargo of lumber from Richibucto, N. B., to New York, arriving there on August 2nd.

THAT CAR OF YOURS

BY HARRY E. PORTER

THE PRINCIPLE OF INTERNAL GEAR DRIVE

In the internal gear drive axles, the functions of driving and load-carrying are imposed on two entirely different and distinct sets of members. The dead axle carries the load and has nothing whatever to do with driving. The jack-shaft set does the driving, and has nothing whatever to do with load-carrying.

Similar to the bevel gear axle, bevel gears are used to obtain the transmission at right angles to the drive shaft, but the outer ends of the drive shafts, instead of transmitting the power directly to the road wheels, are fitted on the ends with small spur gears, which in turn mesh with large, internal spur gears attached to the road wheels.

Questions—Can a Generator out-put be adjusted by the Circuit Breaker?
Ans.—No it is merely to control the back charge from battery.

FOR THE COOKIE JAR

(By Barbara Brooks, Kellogg Company, London Ontario.)

Although the white enameled cake box has replaced the cookie jar in many pantries, it is undoubtedly as dear to the heart of this generation of children as the good old brown crock covered with a plate, was to the children of twenty years ago.

Among the favorites is the jolly jumble. In our family this was considered a special treat and it usually had a place at parties and was associated in our minds with ice cream and cocoa with whipped cream. As cookie jars have evolved into cake mixtures, cover with other half. Cut in squares. Bake in a moderate oven.

A spice cookie is another good one for the cookie box. The spices help to keep the cookies if there is not too much opposition to this policy on the part of the children. Especially in summer, one day a week is often enough to bake cookies, so a large recipe, rich enough to keep fresh, is best to use. The dough can be mixed, rolled in a cloth in a long cylindrical piece and put in the refrigerator. This can be sliced and the cookies baked as needed. Or the cookies can all be baked and put into the box with the hope that they will last until next baking day.

Town Scared

By Escaped Puma

MELBOURNE, (Australia), Aug. 28.—The escape of a jaguar and a puma from a train between St. Arnaud and Carradoc, threw the former town into a state of terror because the puma, which got away into the scrub two miles away from St. Arnaud, was described as a ferocious animal that would attack human beings on sight.

The two animals belonged to Perry Brothers' circus, which was travelling by a special train towards Melbourne. When passing the St. Arnaud cemetery one side of the cage collapsed and the jaguar and jaguar sprang out. The jaguar landed on its head and was stunned.

The train was immediately pulled up and employees netted the jaguar and replaced it in the cage, but the puma rushed into the scrub.

Fire-bells were rung in St. Arnaud and amid intense excitement an armed party was organized and sent to the scene. Scores of motor cars were used in the hunt, which was over sparsely timbered country, and men were rushed to the homes of settlers to warn them of the danger and enlist them in the search.

The searchers went to the Black Range, three miles from St. Arnaud and worked in towards the town. When Stan Bray armed with a gun, was working through a clump of grass, F. C. Robinson, editor of the "Arnaud Times," who carried a pencil and paper only, examined a large drain on the extreme edge. As he was turning to walk towards Bray he saw the puma fifteen yards away. He called to Bray, who fired, lodging the bullet in the animal's ribs. This infuriated the puma, but Bray advanced a few paces and put another shot into it. Then the fox-trotter pulled the struggling animal by the tail whilst Bray lodged a final bullet in the neck.

The puma was placed in a car and taken to Bray's departmental stores where a crowd of 200 wildly cheered the arrival of the dead animal, which a few hours previously had been striking terror into the whole community.

Spice Cookies

1.3 cup butter,
2.3 cups sugar,
2 tablespoons milk,
1.3 cups flour (or more)
1/2 cup bran,
1 teaspoon baking powder,
1.3 cup raisins,
3/4 teaspoon cinnamon,
3/4 teaspoon cloves,
1/4 teaspoon nutmeg,
1/2 teaspoon salt.

Cream the butter, add the sugar and egg, and beat well. Add the milk and bran, raisins and flour, which has been sifted with the spices. Chill, roll thin, cut, and bake in a moderate oven, 400 deg. F.

FRUIT FOR BETWEEN MEALS

Specialists in the care and feeding of children sternly proclaim against permitting a child to eat between meals with the exception of fruit. The action of fruit on the digestion being beneficial and not taxing the stomach, a child may be allowed to help himself to fruit between meals as he chooses.

Mothers are advised to keep fruit for the youngsters and fortunately this season peaches may be bought by the basket very reasonably to help out the usual supply of apples. They will be taken eagerly by the children, the beauty of the fruit itself appealing to the little ones. For his purpose, baskets of well-ripened fruit should be selected with considerable care, for consideration of ripeness does not appeal to the kid. The peaches will not last long enough with the help of adults, so that here need be no fear of their spoiling, but if there is such a prospect, they can be canned very easily and there will be no loss.

The peeling of peaches for canning will be greatly facilitated if they are treated like tomatoes and scalded. The skin can then be stripped off very readily.

Buying peaches by the basket is the most economical method, and this year they are being offered in baskets of convenient size for this purpose.
