AEROPLANES CARRY PARACHUTES

All French aeroplanes that carry passengers must also carry parachutes. This decision was reached at a conference of members of the French aerial syndicate after a conclusive experiment carried out by a French woman, Mlle. Collin.

While traveling in an aeroplane at 90 miles an hour, she dropped off the aeroplane with a parachute, which unfolded itself in a normal manner. Scientists had stated that such a feat was impossible. Mlle. Collin's exploit fully proved the utility of parachutes in aeroplane flights, particularly when planes are in danger of crashing down with their passengers.
