STRONG TEAM FOR FORDHAM

BY BIXON STEWART

United Press Staff Correspondent NEW YORK, Sept. 11. (U. P.)—Although his great line of 1929 and 1930 has been shattered by graduation, Major Frank W. Cavanaugh has bright hopes of turning out another strong team at Fordham this Fall.

Cavanaugh has been coaching at Fordham for four years during which time the New York school has advanced from a second rate team to a rank among the leading teams of the East. Fordham teams, under Cavanaugh, have been famous chiefly as defensive aggressions and during the last two years boasted one of the strongest lines in the nation, and went 17 consecutive games without a defeat.

The "Iron Major" has an unusual brilliant crop of backfield men this season and may discard his previous system of scoring and then protecting the narrow margin by a defensive power, in favor of a hard-running attack.

Chief losses in the Fordham line were Captain Tony Siano, selected by many critics as all-American center; "Pistol" Pete Wisniewski, an all-eastern guard, and Frank Foley, giant tackle who has returned in the role of assistant coach. Except for fullback Piculewicz there were no important losses in the backfield.

The 1931 squad, now at work under Coach Cavanaugh, includes eight letter men—Capt. Jim Murphy, halfback; John Conroy, tackle; John Conway, fullback; John Janis, halfback; Neil Murphy, tackle; Frank Davis, center; Tip Tobin, end, and John Fisher, quarterback. In addition Cavanaugh has several experienced reserves and the 1930 freshmen team which defeated M. Y. U. 26 to 0 in a post-season charity game. McDermott, quarterback; Pavlicovic, halfback; Prans, guard, and Dansowski, fullback, are the best of the new players.

Captain Jim Murphy is the leading candidate for a halfback job, with John Janis, Joe Zapustas and Edward Pavlicovic fighting for the other halfback berth. At quarter Cavanaugh has Johnny Fisher, who directed the 1930 team, and Frank McDermott of Charleston, Mass. John Conway, 1930 reserve, and the sophomore Donowski are favored to win the fullback post.

Inter-sectional schedule, but will inter-section schedule, but will play all except one of its games in New York. The schedule:

Sept. 26—Thiel at Fordham. Oct. 3—West Virginia at Polo Grounds. Oct. 12—Boston College at Boston. Oct. 17—Holy Cross at Polo Grounds. Oct. 24—Drake at Polo Grounds. Oct. 31—West Liberty at Fordham. Nov. 7—Detroit at Polo Grounds. Nov. 14—New York University at Yankee Stadium. Nov. 21—Bucknell at Polo Grounds.

Dr. Bertram Farewells

The following reference is from the Hannibal Evening Courier-Post in Hannibal, Missouri, and Dr. Bertram referred to is a brother of Mr. John A. Bertram of Hunter River, and son of Mr. Thomas Bertram of the same place.

Dr. F. T. Bertram, pastor of University Church, Northfield, Vt., who during the month of July has been occupying the pulpit at First Methodist Episcopal church, will conduct his last service Sunday. Dr. Bertram and Dr. Charles H. Brot, pastor of the First Methodist church, exchanged pulpits for their vacation period during July. Dr. Bertram will preach at the 10.55 o'clock service and will have charge of the Epworth League meeting at seven o'clock. There will be no evening service.

Dr. Bertram is one of the most prominent men in Methodism in the east, where he has held all his pastorates and is now in his third year at Northfield in the University church, where the Norwich University, a well known military school, is located. He previously was pastor of Park avenue Methodist Episcopal church, New York City and other prominent churches in the east. Dr. Bertram was born in Prince Edward Island, Canada, and received his education at Mount Allison University, Sackville, New Brunswick. He studied for two years and four summers at New York University and for four summers at Boston University. Mrs. Bertram, who is a native of Boston, also studied in Boston University.

Mrs. Bertram and Miss Mildred Hay, a teacher in the Orleans, Vt., public schools, accompanied Dr. Bertram to Hannibal, and during their stay here they have occupied the First Methodist parsonage, 12-37 Bird street. This is their first visit to Missouri and during their time here they have made many friends in Hannibal, who regret their leaving, while they state that they have had a delightful stay here, and have greatly enjoyed meeting the people with whom they have come in contact.

The public is invited to the services Sunday to hear Dr. Bertram in his last sermon. He is a brilliant scholar and speaker and has been bringing inspiring messages.

Paris Letter

BY SAMUEL DASHEL (United Press Staff Correspondent)

PARIS, Sept. 11. (U.P.)—Bored by the luxuries of dining and drinking and dancing in the same old salons, riding in the same old Ritzes, and being in the same old Ritzes with the same head waiters, the same recurrent gowns at the same old race tracks, Parisian society has turned again to nature. The Fete Champetre, or rustic ball is now the prevailing fad.

Just as Marie Antoinette grew bored and restless at having only a half dozen palaces to live in, just as the famous and ill-fated queen thus turned to milking and hoeing potatoes in a toy farm at Versailles, the society queens of modern Paris are doing the same. Miss Elsa Maxwell has personified this latter day Marie Antoinette and Paris is still whispering and gossiping about her latest escape from social convention in organizing a picturesque fete or bal champetre as it was called in the gardens of Baron de Gunzburg, which fringe the Bois de Boulogne.

Dressed as Farmers

Miss Maxwell, herself, in tawny wig, a false nose, homespun breeches, a stuffed rooster and a watering pot, instead of a cocktail shaker, led the gay party to which many notables were invited, dressed as country yokels, cart drivers, farm hands and bicyclists.

The rough country aspect of the scene was realistically conceived by four young artists popular in this glittering world, such as cosmopolitan Nick de Moles, Christian Bernard, Jean-Michel Frank and Knocno. That is to say, the atmosphere of the stable yard, with its untidy cows with their untidier habits, was impressed on the pavilion in the garden. This pavilion was hung with blue satin, with white satin around the windows and red satin fringed with gold on the balconies. On the grassy terrace, outside where the sward had been manicured and groomed for a week there were tiny haystacks which concealed the various delicacies of the buffet. There were artificial fruits and paper flowers of large size pinned in the tress and in addition to a bewildered donkey and its carefully washed cart, and an old gray mare hobbled to a farm wagon, there was a handsome sow in paper mache.

Donkey Cart

A Sicilian donkey cart was loaded with many country lasses, such as Miss Felicia Fiske, Mrs. Leo d'Eranger and Madame de Munoz. The Count Andri Robilant, the Duc de Sangro, were hardy bicyclists in shorts and polo shirts.

Among some of the lowly tillers of the soil was Cole Porter and his wife, the Princess Ilyinsky, Billy Reardon and the Duc de la Verdura. The Marquis Salini Amorini rode the mare, while Howard Sturges, in coarse blue smock and patient leather farm shoes, cracked the whip. The processions of farm hands were particularly amusing, the Duchess d'Harcourt leading the cabbage growers, Paul Morand being the poultryman, and various bodies, the waistcoats and wig. Grace Moore sang from Manon and a duet from the second act of Tristan, together with ballets and polkas enlivened this typically country party of horny handed farmhands and their gals.
