"The Avenging Rider" At Empire

"The Avenging Rider" Tim Holt's latest action film, opens today at the Empire Theatre and is rated as one of the most exciting of the long list of Holt westerns. Following his recent costume, the leading man appears in the picture. She is superbly played by Miss Summers and she plays a capable actress and lively to the eye.

"The Avenging Rider" has as its central background the picturesque mining country of the far west in the days when mining gold was the most dangerous business in the world. The story depicts the hazardous experiences of a young outlaw in order to get evidence against the rackets and to unmask the man who is executing their activities. The film is packed with tense situations, dramatic denouements, and thrilling action.

Smooth-paced direction is supplied by Sam Nelson and Bert Gilroy handling the production. The film is based on an original story by Harry O. Hoyt and Morton Grant.

"Chetniks" Flaming Film Of Fighting Guerrillas

Charging the screen with high-voltage action and suspense, "Chetniks" The Fighting Guerrillas opened yesterday at the Prince Edward Theatre!

Thrill follows thrill, as the daring Balkan patriots fight to destroy the conqueror's dream of conquest. An enemy troop train is destroyed; an ammunition dump blown sky-high; an enemy patrol ambushed. That's the handiwork of the death-defying men whose story is the story of bold people everywhere fighting the invader on their native soil.

While stirring action highlights the film, there is a full share of romance and drama, too, as the guerrilla leader, played by Philip Dorn, and his men fight against staggering odds for the women, as well as the freedom, they love.

The film finds the occupying forces unable to cope with the Chetniks. As a last resort, they attempt to capture the leader through his wife and children. When the townsmen refuse to betray the whereabouts of the leader's family, they are threatened with starvation. A bold move by the guerrillas thwarts his threat, momentarily, but a more brutal one follows.

Desperate, the invaders vow to wipe out the town, as they did Luce, unless the Chetnik leader surrenders. His wife and children are already being a firing squad, when he leads a surprise raid that smashes the enemy garrison—an act that symbolizes the whole nation's determination to live in freedom forever.

Featured with Dorn are Anna Sten, John Shepperd, Virginia Gilmore and Martin Kosleck. The film was directed by Louis King from a screen play by Jack Andrews and Edward E. Parmore. Sol M. Wurtzel produced.

The Time Of The Singing Of The Birds

(By Rex Duff in Montreal Gazette)

Dear John—We are not supposed to discuss the weather of any section of the country other than the Straits. You may remember Shapiro's poking fun at the situation, a few months ago. He described two men meeting in a bus in the morning and, rather than exchanging the customary pre-war gabble about the local weather, remarking that the weather was picking up in the Straits of Dover.

Well, Shapiro may only have been "having his little joke", but what he suggested was legally quite true. Weather is one subject that is taboo; and if one should forget that fact, and should violate the ruling, one would be caught up on it.

For example, trunk calls by telephone are very often "listened-in-on" to catch just such casual references as one might make to a friend in a distant part of the country at the other end of the wire. "The weather's been wonderful up here." "Ker-click. No reference to the weather, please." And that's the beginning and end of that little weather commentary.

Speaking of telephone calls, we are not supposed to discuss the weather of any section of the country other than the Straits of Dover. Well, Shapiro may only have been "having his little joke", but what he suggested was legally quite true. Weather is one subject that is taboo; and if one should forget that fact, and should violate the ruling, one would be caught up on it.

And on trunk calls there are often great delays. It is still possible to telephone any part of the country after 7 p.m. for a shilling, but usually by the time you get put through you feel you have earned your three minutes with waiting. If you start negotiations at 7 on a call to Glasgow, you may consider yourself lucky if you get through by 9. And when at last you do get through, the infernal pippipip seems to come at intervals of half-a-minute rather than the three minutes. But c'est la guerre, and the business about the telephone is the least of one's worries.

To get back to the weather. Naturally, it is discussed as much as ever it was, when the person one is speaking to lives and breathes in the same part of the country as oneself; and on such occasions, the commonest remark just now is,

The ground is covered in spots with crocuses, and above one's head is the almond blossom.

The ground is covered in spots with crocuses, and above one's head is the almond blossom. The daffodils are bursting out. And away in through and behind the trees is the grass; last week I said it was green, green grass; add a third "green" for the grass now.

I don't suppose you will take my word for all this, without some proof; so I am sending you under separate cover a petal of a yellow crocus, and a petal of the pink almond blossom. Also, to keep you silent, I am enclosing a cutting from The Times of a few days ago. Observe particularly, my dear sir, the paragraph beginning "It is fairly obvious that the season is at least a month ahead of schedule."

I can imagine you reading this with a grunt. Very well, then. Very well, then, grunt! Grunt all you like, but you can't compare a Montreal March with a London March. I like your fair city very much, and one of the things I like best about it is its wild weather. But at the present moment I don't envy you your weather at all.

When I have posted this letter I shall go off and have another romp in Hyde Park's spring air before I get back to some work. And I shall be laughing to myself when I think how the March winds do blow in your broad and pleasant land.

"Hasn't it been a wonderful winter?" Always when the spring comes I think of the most beautiful of all spring songs. Do you know what I mean? "For lo, the winter is past, the rain is over and gone, the flowers appear, appear on the earth, and the time of singing is come, the time of the singing of birds is come, and the voice of the turtle is heard in our land."

Those words are running through and through my head, these days. Whenever I go into Hyde Park I think of them. And they come to my mind in the musical setting—whose musical setting it is, I don't at the moment remember, although I should. We sang it every year at St. Paul's, and although I was only a wee lad when I sang in it— I thought even then that it was the best greeting to spring I could imagine.

The words themselves, from one of the greatest translations in the language, were exquisite then, and they still are to me; they were perfection. When the music was added, the whole thing was more perfect than perfection. In the music we didn't sing about the turtle; we stopped at the singing of birds; I always wondered why.

John, if you were here. But they fill me with rapture, I suppose, is the word. Do you remember the things I described to you in my letter of a week ago? To walk through Hyde Park to the birds and the flowers in Kensington Gardens and all around the Serpentine? Well, in the past week more birds and flowers have come out. Tallest

HOW'S THE WEATHER up there, might be what Nancy Worth, five feet three, is saying to Helen O'Hara, six feet three. Helen has the distinction of being the tallest showgirl in the business. Noted on Broadway she was signed by Warner Bros. to appear in "Thank Your Lucky Stars," the new musical which includes nearly everyone on the Warner lot. Those appearing are: Eddie Cantor, Bette Davis, Ann Sheridan, Dinah Shore, John Garfield, Errol Flynn, Alexis Smith, Dennis Morgan and Joan Leslie.

SAVE LOSSES on Young Chicks

...and give them a better start

Many large hatcheries recommend "Miracle" Chick Starter to their customers, because they want as many as possible of the purchases brought safely through the first hard weeks. Both large and small poultry raisers find that "Miracle" Chick Starter keeps the mortality rate low, often not more than 5%. And the chicks grow faster and better, too. That means earlier and larger profits.
