ELLEN'S DIARY

on a point or the quiet wash and croon of waves on the shore. "That will make a funny quilt I'd say!" Jamie observed adding "And where's the wool you're going to put in it?" "The wool—if there's any of it left, is in the quilt now" I told him. "Ha" he said turning away "that's not the way that mother makes a quilt!"

Jamie had come to visit while Rob with his team helped our farmers add to the heap of wood in the yard. He had fetched a snow-shovel to clear fresh drifts away from the window which looks toward the mill but forgot about it presently to tumble with the mud-dog along the heights of the hill and later to make snowshoe trails about the yards and near field. Enhanced by the brilliance of the March sun the countryside was beautiful today. The evergreens that hold the nesting mill in their sturdy embrace and climb the slopes and that march beside the stream were never more fetching, their dark velvety branches weighted effectively by last night's fall of snow. Teams like those painted in wintry pictures moved along this road of ours, grists and loads of logs to the mill; odd sleighs one suspected were off to town and there was the mailman's pings and comings for Pard's especial interest and approval.

"Isn't this a lovely day?" Carolyn called up to ask "everything is so beautiful. The new snow makes it all so clean and white and the trees are so pretty. She had gained fresh inspiration to help her on her busy round today by tidings that mother-to-her, who has been hospitalized since the New Year, now fully recovered is back again to home and family. "Not" as Carolyn says "that there are so many of us there now." For as in many another home through the years, the number of boys and girls once there—except Jamie's schoolgirl aunt—have gone to homes or interests of their own which takes them from the shelter they knew, leaving the nest now strangely quiet. However on a holiday or in the Christmas season they manage to forget their daughters, and sons and grandsons and all. But one of the kids is not among the number. He rests in a foreign grave. He was the lad whose home-coming was always looked forward to with much joy and anticipation and his place is still sadly vacant there. His photo hangs down from a mantle, young and happy, Jamie speaks of this uncle as if he remembered him and speaking of him asks: "And why did there have to be a war?" Tomorrow brings the anniversary of his passing. It will be a day of Remembrance for family and friends. Sad memories will be revived—and yet proud too in the thought that the one they loved and respected so well sleeps now in a hero's grave.

"Well, Ellen" Jamie comes in from seeing "a new moon over a shoulder" if the last quarter of the old, rules the first quarter of the new, I'm thinking the cold spell of weather'll continue."

Until tomorrow—Diary—Good-night.

Golden Wedding

Tuesday, March 9th, 1948, dawned a beautiful bright day after Monday's severe storm, and despite the heavy travelling, kind friends, neighbours and relatives wended their way to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Colin D. MacPhail and Mr. and Mrs. James MacPhail, Meadow Bank, to congratulate the latter couple having attained the 50th anniversary of their wedding day.

Mr. and Mrs. MacPhail recalled fifty years ago being a beautiful day, when as a young couple they drove to Stanchell and there, with two other couples were married by the late Rev. Daniel MacLean.

The home was joyfully with bowls of yellow daffodils throughout the rooms, almost making one believe that spring is just around the corner, those beautiful spring flowers being a pleasing gesture from kind friends.

The dining room table was prettily arranged with lace cloth, tall yellow tapers in silver holders, silver bowl of yellow daffodils in center, and the anniversary cakes decorated symbolic to the occasion, at each end.

Dainty refreshments and tea, ice cream and the anniversary cakes were served throughout the afternoon and evening. They received many beautiful cards, gifts letters and telephone messages. The kindly couple have always been hard working and are still enjoying a wonderful measure of health, although for the past few years Mrs. MacPhail's health has not been so good, but with medical attention and the kind care of her husband and family she has been restored to very good health again, and is active and bright about her home each day, and able to enjoy the daily visits from her beloved grand children.

Mr. MacPhail is as active as a young man about the farm, drives his own car, and in summer they both enjoy many trips to visit friends and loved ones. Both being possessed with a humorous nature, always interested in the welfare of young and old, their home has always been a most hospitable one to everyone.

Surrounded by kind friends, their children and grand children the day was a most happy one and long to be remembered by their family.

Fiery, Itching Toes and Feet

Here is a clean, stainless anti-septic oil that will do more to help you get rid of your trouble than anything you've ever used.

Its action is so powerfully penetrating that the itching is quickly stopped, and in a short time you are rid of that bothersome, fiery torture. The same is true of Barber's Itch, Salt Rheum, Eczema—other irritating unsightly skin troubles.

You can obtain Moore's Eucalypt Oil in the original bottle at Hughes Drug Co. Ltd., The Jenkins Pharmacy, or any modern drug store. It is safe to use—and fails in any of these ailments is rare indeed.
